

X

THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

A
TO THE READER.
SATIRICAL POEM,

IN FOUR DIALOGUES.

WITH NOTES.

Υμεις, ω παντα εν πασι φουσι και παιδια χρηστοι, και μετροι, και φιλανθρωποι, και της Βασιλειας αξιοι, ταυτες τοις λογοις επινευσατε.

Athenagoræ Atheniensis Legatio Imperatoribus Antonino et Commodo.—ad fin. Op. Justin. Martyr. Ed. Paris. 1636.
pag. 39.

THE EIGHTH EDITION.

DUBLIN:

PRINTED FOR J. MILLIKEN, 32, GRAFTON-STREET.

1798.

PURSUITS OF

SATIRICAL POEM

IN FOUR DIALOGUES

WITH NOTES

THESE DIALOGUES WERE FIRST PUBLISHED IN 1753, AND HAVE SINCE BEEN REPRINTED IN SEVERAL EDITIONS.

ALBANY: ADAMSON, LEGAL PRINTER, 1753.
COMMENCED BY THE AUTHOR, ED. 1753.

THE EIGHTH EDITION

DUBLIN:

PRINTED FOR J. MURKIN, 24, GRAYSON STREET.

1758

(2)

persons, who from random conjecture, without any knowledge, or any proof whatsoever, continue to ascribe the following work to men, who are all equally guilty of my infamous and equally ignorant of my intentions.

TO THE READER.

I think if the Poem is read once without reference to the history, the composition, and manner, it will be perceived. I may add, that the first Dialogue was first published in May 1754, the second and Third in June 1755.

I RECOMMEND the following anecdote to sagacious persons who know all authors (and me among the rest) by their style, or by any other certain or infallible sign. The anecdote is known to those who are accurately versed in literary history. Julius Scaliger wrote and published an oration, without his name, against the famous tract by Erasmus, called Ciceronianus. Erasmus, having perused it, immediately, (and upon conviction as he thought,) fixed upon Hieronimus Aleander, who was afterwards made an Archbishop by Leo X. and a Cardinal by Pope Paul the Third, as the author of the whole, or of the greatest part of it, by signs which he conceived to be certain and infallible. Yet he was mistaken ENTIRELY. The judgment and sagacity of Erasmus will not be questioned.
But, hear his own words, for on such an occasion as the present they are particularly remarkable. "Ex phrasi, ex
"ore, ex locutione, aliisque compluribus, mihi persuasi
"HOC OPUS, maximâ saltem ex parte, esse Hieronimi Alean-
"dri. Nam mihi Genius illius ex domestico convictu adeo
"cognitus perspectusque est, ut ipse sibi non possit esse no-
"tior!"*

I re-

* Erasmi Epist. 370. c. 1755. Op. Fol. Ed. Opt. Lugd.

I recommend this anecdote to the consideration of those persons, who from random conjecture, without any knowledge, or any proof whatsoever, continue to ascribe the following work, to men, who are all equally guiltless of my labours, and all equally ignorant of my intentions.

I think, if the Poem is read once without reference to the notes, the plan, connection, and manner of it will be perceived. I may add, that, The First Dialogue was first published in May 1794, the Second and Third in June 1796, and the Fourth in July 1797.

INTRODUCTORY LETTER

TO A FRIEND

AN

INTRODUCTORY LETTER

TO

A FRIEND:

ON THE

GENERAL SUBJECT

OF THE

FOLLOWING POEM

ON THE

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

TO THE
MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY TEACHERS AND TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC

INTRODUCTORY LETTER

A FRIEND

GENERAL SUBJECT

FOLLOWING FORM

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE

AN INTRODUCTORY LETTER

TO A FRIEND.

Nel cerchio accolto,
Mormorò potentissime parole;
Girò tre volte all' Oriente il volto,
Tre volte ai regni ove dechina il Sole;
"Onde tanto indugiar! FORSE ATTENDETE
"VOCI ANCOR PIÙ POTENTI, O PIÙ SECRETE?"

Tasso G. L. Cant. 13.

DEAR SIR;

December, 1797.

AS the publick have thought proper to pay some attention to the following Poem on the Pursuits of Literature, the parts of which I have presented to their consideration, and for their use, at various intervals; I have now collected the whole into one volume, after such a revision and correction as appeared to be necessary. As a mark of my friendship, I trust it is decisive. I always thought with Junius, that a printed paper receives very little consideration from the most respectable signature. But I would not be understood to insinuate, with that great and consummate writer, that my name would carry any weight with it. I must own, however, that I smile at the various authors to whom my work is ascribed. Doctors, Dramatick Writers, Royal Treasurers, Divines, Orators, Lawyers, Greek Professors, School-masters, Bath guides, and Physicians, have all been named with confidence. Sometimes the whole is written by one man, at others, ten or perhaps twenty are concerned in it. Criticisms and dissenting conjectures on the subject are alike the object of my ineffable contempt. More sagacity must be exerted, than the Ardelios of the day are masters of, who are so kind as to think of me, who most certainly never think of them. It is however my resolution, that not one of these idle conjectures shall ever be extended to you. "Quid de me alii loquantur, IPSI VIDEANT; sed loquentur tamen." It is a voice; nothing more. Prudence indeed suggests a caution which I unwillingly adopt, and restrains the eagerness I feel for the display of your virtues and of your talents. But those virtues must at present be left to the testimony of your own conscience; and your talents within those limits of exertion, in which an undiscerning spirit has too long suffered them to be confined. The bird of day however always looks to the sun.

In regard to writing in general, the publick expect neither thanks nor gratitude from an author for their favourable reception of his work. If it is unworthy of their notice, it is left to perish with the poetry of Knight, or the prose of Lauderdale. "I cannot indeed affect to believe, that nature has wholly disqualified me for all literary pursuits."† Yet I would not trouble the publick, or myself, with this new edition of my poem, if I did not think it agreeable to their wishes. I am satisfied with the attention which has been given to it. And when I have commanded a silence within my own breast, I think a still small voice may whisper those gratulations, from which an honest man may best derive comfort from the past, and motives for future action.

The wayward nature of the time, and the paramount necessity of securing to this kingdom her political and religious gious existence, and the rights of society, have urged and stimulated me, as you well know, to offer this endeavour to preserve them, by a solemn, laborious, and disinterested appeal to my countrymen. It is designed to conduct them through the labyrinths of literature; to convince them of the manner in which the understanding and affections are either bewildered, darkened, enervated, or degraded; and to point out the fatal paths which would lead us all either to final destruction, or to complicated misery. I am solicitous for the end alone. I have explained all my motives at large, in the prefaces to the several dialogues of this poem.

† The words of Mr. Gibbon. Posthumous Works, 4to. Vol. I.

I am not yet so old, as to say with the desponding bard, "Vixit est avidus, quisquis non vult, MUNDO SECUM PEREUNTE, mori." Yet I see, with sorrow and fear, the political constitutions of Europe falling around us, or crumbling into dust, under the tyrannical Republick of France. She commenced with an imperious injunction to the surrounding nations not to interpose in her domestick government, while at the very same moment, she herself was interfering and disturbing them all. She has indeed terminated in the change or overthrow of each of them, but of this kingdom. Frenchmen were always brutal, when unrestrained. With their own domestick misery and wickedness they never were satisfied. In these latter days, they have been neighing after the constitutions of their neighbours in their lawless lustihood. They first desflower the purity of the struggling or half-consenting victims, and then with their ruffian daggers they hiss at once the voice and the remembrance of the pollution. Such are their abominations. Such are their orgies of blood and lust. And when their cruelty is at last wearied out and exhausted, and demands a pause, they call it Clemency. France had been long looking for that, which her philosophers had taught her to term, THE PARALLELISM OF THE SWORD. She has indeed found it. That sword has indeed swept down not only every royal crest, but every head which raised itself above the plain of their equality. Such is their quaint and ferocious language. And now, when Englishmen are to be warned against the introduction of the horrid system, no appeal is to be made to the common feelings and passions of our nature, (this, it seems, is declamation;) no scenes of terror, and cruelty, and desolation are to be laid before them, but dry reasoning and mathematical calculations of the quantum of misery, plunder, and blood, necessary for the production and establishment in England of this blessed revolutionary government. But we will not be insulted and fooled out of our existence, or of our understanding. "Our sentence is for open war," till we can be safe. England is still prepared, and alert, and vigorous, and opulent, and generous, and bold, and undismayed. She has not cast away her confidence. Among the bands and associated energies of England, I also, in my degree and very limited capacity, will struggle for the principle of her life. I feel, in common with the wise and reflecting, that the constitution of Great Britain, even with its real or apparent defects; is worthy of continuance, and I hope of perpetuity. Our ancestors in 1688 once adopted the words of the aged Patriarch, "We have blessed it, yea, and it shall be blessed." In this one response, I trust we shall all be orthodox; and with one heart and voice condemn all the heresies of Gallick policy, in the words of the Alexandrian Liturgy of old,

 "Τὴν αἰμασίην καταλῶσιν τὰ φρουγμένα."*

* Liturgia Sancti Gregorii Alexandrina. Liturg. Oriental. Collect. Vol. 1. p. 107. Edit. Paris. 1716.

Government and Literature are now more than ever intimately connected. The history of the last thirty years proves it beyond a controversy. Still it is difficult to rouse the attention of men, and to persuade them of the fact. But I have attempted it. I thought it just and right to set before them excellence opposed to excellence, as well as error contrasted to error; or in the words of the great Halicarnassian†. "Αγαθὸς ἀγαθοῖς ἀντιέταλιν." In the present change of manners, opinions, government, and learning, you may remember I gave it as my opinion, in which after some consideration you concurred, that a variation is now required in the mode of conducting satirical writing. I mean, by calling in the reciprocal assistance of poetry and prose in the same work, for the great end; if it is designed for general perusal and extended application. I think this work is the first attempt of the kind, in the sense which I propose.

(Ἀρχαίῳ) φωνήναι καὶ σφραγίσσαι αὐτὸν
Πυργωσὶς στίχων ΠΡΩΤΟΣ ἢ ἑστία. †

I know not whether I am mistaken, but as it appears to me, the power of legitimate Satire thus extended and strengthened with the rampart of prose, and fully understood, is the base, if not the only literary support left. I am sure it cannot be construed into an hired service. It has nothing in it of professional labour: and as to interested views of personal profit or promotion, how can they be consistent with it? It is as true in our time, as in that of Dryden, (I will give you his own words, (that "the common libellers of the day, "are as free from the imputation of wit as of morality." Satire has another tone and another character. All publick

men

† Dion. Halicarn. ad Cne. Pompeium de Platone Epist. p. 757. Sect. 1. Vol. 6. Ed. Reiske. 1777.

‡ Adapted from the Anthologia. p. 393. Ed. Brodæi Fol.

men, however distinguished, must in their turns submit to it, if necessary to the welfare of the state. The altar and the throne, the minister and the statesman, may feel and own its influence. I would express myself with diffidence of any Satirist; yet of the office itself, and of its higher functions, I would speak as becomes its dignity and the excellency of its ancient character. Magnificabo apostolatum meum.

In my opinion, the office of a Satirist is by no means a pleasant or a desirable office; but it is necessary. It is difficult to exercise the talent without an appearance of severity in the character and disposition. Even playfulness and humour are called by other appellations. Learning is ostentation, censure is malignity, and reprehension is abuse. I have explained myself on this subject in different parts of my work. There remains a more formidable objection. On a first and partial view, it might deter any man from engaging in Satire; at least any man who feels himself (and who does not feel himself, if he examines his own heart?) unworthy and wretched before THE unerring judgment. It is said to be incompatible, if not with the profession, yet certainly with the practice, of Christianity. I am sure, if that is true, the praise of wit, or learning, or talents, is nothing worth. If private malignity is the motive, it is essentially contrary to the precepts and practice of their religion. It cannot be defended for a moment. But if Satire is an instrument, and a powerful instrument, to maintain and enforce publick order, morality, religion, literature, and good manners, in those cases, in which the pulpit and the courts of law can seldom interfere, and rarely with effect; the community may authorize and approve it. The authorized instruments of lawful war are lawful.

Satire never can have effect, without a personal application. It must come home to the bosoms, and often to the offerices of particular men. It never has its full force, if the author of it is known or stands forth; for the unworthiness of any man lessens the strength of his objections. What I have written, is delivered to the publick in this spirit. If I had any private end or malignity in any part of it, I would have burned the work with indignation before it should have appeared. I make no idle appeal to you, or any man, for the truth of my assertion; it is enough for me to feel that I speak truth in the sincerity of my heart. If I am believed, I am believed. But I may ask with confidence; Is there in it any sentence, or any sentiment, by which the mind may be depraved, degraded, or corrupted? Is there a principle of classical criticism in any part of it, which is not just and defensible by the greatest masters of ancient and legitimate composition? Is there any passage which panders to the vitiated taste, or to the polluted affections and passions of bad men? On the contrary; Are not the heart and understanding fortified unto virtue, and exalted into independence? Is there any idle depreciating declamation, against the real and solid advantages of birth, fortune, learning, wit, talents, and high station? Is there any doctrine, which a teacher of morality, I mean Christian morality, might refuse to sanction? A moralist and a divine have not the same office with the satirist; personality is foreign to them. But it is not sufficiently attended to or believed, that when the understanding is enervated, when it once loses, what one of the Fathers † calls emphatically, the τὴν φρονήσιν, οὐκ ἔστιν when that solid, tenacious power of the mind is dissolved, it is then open to all manner of deception, and to the impression of sophistry in literature, government, philosophy, and religion. On this account, many works and many actions must be noticed, wholly unworthy of reprehension in any other point of view.

† Basil, Archiepisc. Cæsareæ. Op. Vol. 2. p. 698. Edit. Paris: 1618.

Ignorant men will cry out, it is a vexatious suit, when it is a just prosecution in the courts of criticism, and at the tribunal of publick opinion. They who would consider my reprehensions of Authors and of the tendency of their writings, as libels, or as libellous matter, are as ignorant of common law, as they are ignorant of common sense, or common integrity and candour. With such men, every piece of criticism is a species of libel. If they are inclined to indict any part of my work as libellous, it will be incumbent on them to contradict the great sage of the law, who declares, that "In a CRIMINAL PROSECUTION, the tendency which all libels have to create animosities and disturb the publick peace, is THE WHOLE which the Law considers."† I am content to be at issue with them on this point. If any part of my work is "blasphemous, immoral, treasonable, schismatical, seditious, or scandalous," let it be produced publicly, and publicly punished. But I maintain that, under restrictions, I have an undoubted right to lay my sentiments before the publick, on publick subjects, publick men, and publick books, in any manner I think proper. If I am denied this right, there is an end of the freedom of the press, and of the rational and guarded liberty of England. If the matter of my book is criminal, let it be shewn. I appeal to the Courts and the Sages of the Law. But I will not be intimidated by the war-whoop of Jacobins, and democratick writers, or the feeble shrieks of witlings and poetasters. While I have power, I will plead in behalf of learning, and

† Blackstone Comment. B. 4. Ch. 11.

and in the cause of my Country. I have not, in this work, violated the precepts of Christianity, or the law of the land; and till I have done both or either, it is not in the power of any man to degrade my character and reputation with my country. If I have drawn any supposed characters, without a name or designation, I have done no more than Theophrastus or La Bruyere. I shall not condescend to a discussion of such a subject. Many passages, and perhaps trifling or sportive allusions in this work to persons and events, are best defended by the general apology of Horace, "Ego si risi quòd ineptus Pastillos Rufillus olet, lividus et mordax viduarum." I shall offer no other apology.

As to any supposed arrogance or presumption; a writer, especially a poet, will be warmed sometimes with the dignity and importance of his subject, and may express himself in terms rather strong. The "fume superbiæ" of a poet is seldom severely examined. It is an extravaganza at most, and understood as such.

Much has been observed as to the defect of plan in my Poem. I will say a few words. I wish not to vindicate, but to explain myself. The object of the whole, in a View of Literature. The Poem itself is "A Conversation on the various objects of Literature, in a very extended sense, as it affects public order, regulated government, and polished society." Nothing is introduced which is not, directly or indirectly, to that main purpose. It does not appear in the form of an Epistle, a mock-epick, or a didactick poem; but as a conversation in which subjects are discussed, as they arise naturally and easily; and the notes illustrate and enforce the general and particular doctrines. There is as much method and connection, as is consistent with what I state to be my plan, or design, if they like that word better. There is unity in the design. Conversation has its laws, but they are pleasant, not severe restraints. Consuls indeed indeed do not now meet Consuls in Tusculum; and, if I am rightly informed, the symposiacks at Wimbledon and Holwood have not too much severity of method, or equality in the glasses. I am willing to give my adversaries the full benefit of the sarcastick pleasantry of Lord Shaftesbury, "that " it would be a belying of the age, to put so much good sense

 " together in any one conversation, as to make it hold out
 " steadily, and with plain coherence, for an hour's time†." I never desired to exhaust any subject, but to leave matter for the reader's own suggestion. I may add, that it would be difficult to analyne one of the most finished Satires in our language. I mean Pope's Two Dialogues; or as they are strangely called, the Epilogue to the Satires.

I am represented, as having threatened any person who makes enquiry after me or my name. It was not my intention to do so. I said, "it will be more than foolish to be very inquisitive." I say so still; for when the avenue to any knowledge is strongly and effectually closed, who would labour after it fruitlessly? To waste our time to no manner of use, is not surely one of the discriminating marks of wisdom. I maintain it boldly; no man has a right to demand either my name or my situation. It has been observed on such occasions, that "some might fight, but others would assassinate." For I believe I have no real enemies, but the lovers of confusion and the troublers of states. I will acknowledge it, I came armed into their confines, and I come in the darkness of the night. But if I were required or called upon to choose my companion, you know I am prepared with the answer of Diomedes:

Εἰ μὲν δὴ τὰς ἀνὰ γῆ καλῶν μ' αὐτοῖσι λίσσασθαι,
 Πᾶς ἀνὴρ ἐστίν· ὈΔΥΣΣΕΥΣ γὰρ ΘΕΙΟΙΟ λαοδομῆν;
 'Οὐ περὶ μὲν προφρονὴ κραδίη καὶ θυμὸς ἀγνῶς
 Ἐν παντί σσι πόνοισι. †

And

† Shaftesbury's Moralists, Sect. 1. † Il. 10. v. 242.

And if I am forced to descend into the lower regions of sorrow and confusion, among the pretended spirits of anarchy and democracy, I shall hope for the safe conduct of the Sybil. She might produce the branch to the ferryman of France and Tartarus. I would wish her to exhibit this Poem, as the "Donum fatalis virgæ, longo post tempore visum." But to leave these allusions. My book is open to all the accumulated severity of public criticism and public reprehension. I shrink from neither of them. When I am wrong, (I have never been so intentionally) I will correct myself, and have done so frequently. In a field so extensive, candour, I think, will allow that my mistakes have not been very numerous.

As to my poetry or versification, it was not written as a vehicle for the notes, but the notes were composed to accompany the text. I offer the poetry to those who are conversant with the strength, simplicity, and dignity of Dryden and Pope, and them alone. I submit both my Poems, "The Pursuits of Literature, and The Imperial Epistle," in this spirit and with this confidence to the public. There are men, (and women too) who understand. But as to the lovers of exotic poetry, I refer them to the Botanick Garden of Dr. Darwin. My plants and flowers are produced and cherished by the natural invigorating influence of the common sun; I have not raised them by artificial heat.

If the root of a tree is found and vigorous, you strengthen the shoots by repressing their luxuriance. I approve and would uphold our sacred and civil establishment. I would therefore mark the aberrations and misconduct even of men of talents and virtue, who compose it. I would shew, that I am strictly impartial. I can censure, with discrimination, even when I generally approve, and consider nothing but the interests of the state upon the whole. It is to misunderstand

or

or to misrepresent me, when it is asserted that I attack alike friends and foes. I attack no man in his individual capacity. I have nothing to do with the vanity or injudicious conduct of friends, but as they affect the community; and I can have no personal malignity against those of whom I am personally ignorant. But they shall neither disturb nor overthrow the state of England, civil or religious, if any observations of mine can avail. They may wish to know me; but they may depend upon it, I will never give a proof of my spirit at the expence of my understanding.—I must now pass from this subject.

As to political matters we shall never want Observers. I hate deserters of their duty * on any principle whatever. But I suppose some Statesmen think, there is a laudable obliquity and a seasonable fear. For my own part I shall not, on this occasion, invade the retreat of St. Ann's Hill, or violate the purity of Drury Lane. If such Statesmen are resolved to see at once both the Senate and the Throne, the "Sævis" "Spiracula Ditis" are open to them; they may descend in safety, and disburthen the land. I do not believe that the possession of absolute power is in the reach of Mr. Pitt, or of any man. But the continuance of such a minister in office will be approved, as I think, while the security, and independence, and dignity of the crown, the parliament, and of the people of Great Britain, are maintained against the tyrannical pretensions of pirates, buccaneers, and plunderers. I would say to Mr. Pitt, as Cicero did to Torquatus, "Tibi nullum periculum esse perspicio, quod quidem sejunctum sit ab omnium interitu."† That minister has not looked submissively, at any period of his long administration, for personal protection in any quarter.

* H. of C. Nov. 1797.

† Cic. Ep. ad Fam. Lib. 6. Ep. 1.

ter. There is a hardihood about the man, which I love. On the broad general question of the time, the publick esteem has been commensurate with the royal approbation. In this, the policy of the closet, of the senate, and of the people, seems to have been one. I am sure, I hope, that wherever Mr. Pitt, or any minister proceeds, he will always find a board of controul; nor would I by any means disapprove the advice of an honest Mandarin. But the stairs of the palace have now but one flight; the gate is in front, and the ascent direct. The noble Marquis, who is now no more in office, may brood safely over beads and relics. There is some propriety in this amusement. It is pleasing to preserve the memorial of departed dignity. In my opinion, the Moor's head might have adorned our coin with the royal Gallick lillies, though the Sovereignty of France and Corsica is passed.

I can stand aloof from the scene itself, but I am no stranger to the moving principle. I was not formed to wait in the anti-chamber of a Duke of Lerma, or a Don Calderone. A little experience is sufficient for the observing. It is either my advantage, or my misfortune, not to have adopted any profession. I never could decide that point. But, as you well knew, I framed an early and an undaunted resolution, (perhaps not wholly justifiable, but certainly not degrading to the character) that I never would do personal suit and service, for convenience or emolument, to any man however high, in a subordinate station. I framed that resolution; I adhered to it. Privacy is my lot. Be it so: it is the soil in which learning and reflection strike deepest. In these days it is my desire that obscurity should gather round me. Now and then indeed, the thoughts of times which are no more, will bring with them a casual, momentary, doubtful glimpse of what might have been; and often, with the poet of Valclusa by the fountain of Sorrow, I have regretted some periods of inactivity, not of sloth, which have passed.

Senza levarmi a volo, avend'io l'alz,

Per dar forse de me non bassi esempi.

But if the laurel, which I have now planted, should thicken round the temple of my retirement, the pillars will support it. The materials are solid, and the ground is firm.

I have indeed a few memoirs by me, written in other days and with other hopes, and if I could polish the style, and reduce them a little into form, I am convinced they would not be uninteresting. "Le Roi et ses Ministres pourroient se faire lire ces Memoires, qui assurément ne sont pas ceux d'un ignorant." But let this pass for the present. I am for practicable politicks. I would not be driven into measures from which there is no retreat. I smile when I am told of love and hate in politicians and ministers. These are passions which they never felt. Circumstances alone unite and separate them. I would wish to act with those statesman who would, as far as is consistent with the dignity and safety of the country, by a timely concession and a rational departure from too rigid principles, prevent those calamities which result from authority without power, and expence without supplies. But my hour for treating these subjects, in the manner I propose, is not yet come. I must turn to other thoughts for a season.

When Philosophy saw the Muses standing by Boethius in his affliction, she spoke in terms of some surprise and indignation.† In our time this indignation would have been retorted by the sisters of the song. Philosophy has appeared, not to console, but to deject. When I have read and thought deeply on the accumulated horrors, and all the gradations of wickedness and misery, through which the modern systematick philosophy of Europe has conducted ducted her illuminated votaries, to the confines of political death and mental darkness, my mind for a space feels a convulsion, and suffers the nature of an insurrection. I look around me. I look to human actions, and to human principles. I consider again and again, what is the nature and effect of learning and of instruction: what is the doctrine of evidence, and the foundation of truth. I ask myself, are all these changed? Have the moral and the natural laws of God to his creatures another basis? Has the lapse of fifty years made an alteration in HIM, who is declared to be THE SAME to day, yesterday, and for ever? Can the violence, the presumption, the audacity, the arrogance, the tyranny of man, drunk with self-idolatry and temporary success, change the nature and essence of God and of his works, by calling good evil, and evil good? I am told, that human reason is nearly advanced to full perfection; I am assured, that she is arrived at the haven, where she would be. I again look around me. I ask, where is that haven? where is that steady gale which has conducted her? I listen, but it is to the tempest: I cast my view abroad, but the ocean is every where perturbed. I pause again. Perhaps, it is "the wind and storm fulfilling HIS word!"

† Boeth. de Consolat. Philos. L. i. Pr. i.

I resume the reflections of suffering humanity amid the wreck of intellect. This was not the ancient character of philosophy. The lovers of wisdom, in the best ages of Athens and of Rome, always discoursed with reverence and submission of the Author and Governor of the world. They considered of whom they spoke. If they turned to the origin of evil, or to any dark and unfathomable question, they first called upon man to consider the limits of his understanding. They warned him, with most peculiar emphasis, to beware of those αδύτα ἀπορίαι, those difficulties of hard solution, which are but increased by defences or arguments ill-constructed. They implored him affectionately, to avoid all that tends to overthrow, to trouble or disturb those principles, which conduct to peace and to right action. Their advice was to strengthen the intellect, and to compose the passions, not by braving and insulting the all-powerful, all-wise, and all-merciful Creator, but by an humble, patient enquiry into his works, and by submission to his dispensations. They seemed to be well aware, that to him who understood all the bearings and relations of the word, Resignation to the will of God was the whole of piety. If upon sages like these the light of revelation should appear, as the regent of their philosophical day, nothing can be conceived more august, nothing more ennobling, nothing more dignified. Poetry and philosophy may then speak a language worthy of themselves:
or

Altius his nihil est: hæc sunt fastigia mundi!

PUBLICA NATURÆ DOMUS his contenta tenetur
*Finibus.

When we have read such writers, it is hardly possible not to turn from modern scepticks and sciolists with something more than neglect. If to their philosophy they add witticism and ribaldry, they are nauseous. If to their ribaldry they join folly and gross ignorance, they should be driven from our fellowship with contempt. The continued labours of the arch Theomachist of the age, the records of that perpetual conflict which he maintained, during the course of fifty years of a long and impious life, against the spiritual "kingdoms of God and of his Christ," and the memorials of his desolating days, will all be entombed in the French Pantheon with the mouldering remnant of his

* Manil. Astron. L. i.

his bones.† Dust to dust, ashes to ashes! He sowed unto the flesh, and of the flesh he and his disciples have reaped death and corruption. All the minor powers of infidelity, anarchy, sedition, rebellion, and democracy, may yet be dispersed in England: from their leaders Voltaire, D'Alembert, and Condorcet, to the vulgar illiterate blasphemy of Thomas Paine, and the contemptible nonsense of William Godwin. I feel for mankind when they are insulted by such writers. I make common cause with all my fellow creatures, and call upon them to rally round the constitution of our human nature, and to support its dignity.

From writers of this character, my thoughts are directed to the professors of that superstitious corruption of Christianity, which originally gave occasion to those attempts, to which it has pleased Providence to permit a temporary success, to scourge the nations of Europe. I am sure the plain simplicity of the Protestant religion of England could never have suggested so daring, so extensive a project. I have therefore spoken at large of the Roman Catholick religion, and its professors, and the emigrants and French priests. From some observations I have heard and seen on this part of my work, you may remember I was tempted to think, that I had advanced something new on this subject.

b

† To the writings of Voltaire the strong words of Eusebius are applicable: "Αὐταὶ αἱ ΤΟΥ ΘΕΟΜΑΧΟΥ φωναί, οὗτις κακίας ἰσχυρὰ μεγαλαυχόμενός, καὶ τὰς πρὸς τὴν ὑψίστην τοῖς ἀγγέλαις παραδόχους τῶν εὐθιῶν οὐδοσίας διαπρασαὶ καὶ συγχῆν ἀπειλῶντο, προσημύοντι τὴν σικυμνὴν, καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις γένος διέκονισεν καὶ μετὰ στήν τῃς προτέρου εὐταξίας ἀπαυθαλασσομένην." Euseb. Demonstrat. Evang. Lib. 4. Sect. 9.

subject. I am sure the principles are as old and as moderate as those of the Reformation. I know that every page of our history confirms their truth. Have we forgotten the history of that Reformation? Is "the Preservative against Popery" buried in oblivion and unmerited neglect? Do we remember Mede, and Chillingworth, and Hooker, and Tilletson, and Hoadly, and Sherlock? Can we pass by the phalanx of Statesmen, and Bishops, and Lawyers, who stood forth in 1688? What I have advanced is in substance very old; in manner it may perhaps be new. All I have advised, is on the side of caution. I only declared and pronounced solemnly in the face of my country, that A COLLEGE OF ROMISH PRIESTS, of a religion hostile in principle and in action too, whenever it has the power, against the established church of this kingdom, should not be set upon a hill, and authorised and maintained by the ministers of the crown, and the publick money of the land. They have been dispersed since that warning was given. I only said, let support be administered to them privately, and in detached situations. I have pity for them, and relief too, according to my ability. But, "though I give all my goods (said the Apostle) to feed the poor and the distressed, and have not Charity, it profiteth me nothing." What does he mean? He surely means something. Alms alone, it seems, however liberal, however extended, neither are, nor can be, the whole or the essence of christian charity. They are indeed a material part, and one of the best external proofs of its existence. Charity is in reality a principle of general safety, of kindness, of active benevolence, of discernment, of prudence, of moderation, and of guarded virtue. It originated from HIM, who commanded his disciples to assume the innocence of the dove, and the wisdom of the serpent. We may depend upon it; the system of Christianity is not inconsistent with itself. Surely this is not to teach persecution or intolerance. My language and arguments are designed only to shew, that the spirit of the system of Popery yet remains unaltered in its great and leading principles. If it perishes, it will perish altogether. I love toleration, in the constitutional sense of the word, as much as the most designing patriot of the day; but indifferent to the publick form of religion is the first step to its neglect, and to its consequent abolition. I cannot think it a mark of intolerance, when I deprecate the revival of the Romish superstition in England. There is an enthusiasm, an opysasmus, in the professors of it which, I know, never forsakes them. It is active, where its influence can hardly be supposed. It is said to pervade even the squabbles of a society set apart for the preservation of our national antiquity. With a cat-like watch, it peers and pries over every paper on ecclesiastical reliques, and garbles the slightest casual effusions of protestant zeal, before it is presented to the world. If it cannot be openly recommended, it will effectually guard against the least reproach or insinuation of its subtlety. Romish Baronets will be busy, and Romish Priests will meddle. Perhaps the Secretary of that society knows, whether these hints are true and justifiable. It surely will be understood, I am only speaking of the spirit and tendency of the system itself. I would carry Charity with me in my heart and in my hand, but I know that charity is, and must be, consistent with a love to my country, and to her rights, civil and religious. If I am wrong, I fear, I must continue so. I have yet seen no argument to shake my conviction.

is

I would say a few words on another part of my work. I have been under the necessity, at least as I thought, of appealing for illustration to writers of all ages and in various languages. There is an appearance of ostentation in it, to which I must submit. I certainly am of opinion with Casaubon, that it cannot be supposed, "facere aliquid ad veram pietatem seu doctrinam, Græcâ potius quam aliâ linguâ loqui."† Certainly not. But to enforce and to illustrate any position, and language of poets, and the dignity and spirit of ancient eloquence and history, in the original words, are of no mean assistance. The nature and full force of this work could not have been sustained without the notes, in which the most important subjects, sacred, moral, and political, are occasionally discussed. But I have generally given, in English, the substance of the allusions, contained in the learned languages which are brought forward.

I would not have any one think, that an appeal to the highest poets of modern Italy is either trifling or disgraceful. No man ever felt the power of poetry, if he refused his homage to Dante, Petrarch, Ariosto, and Tasso; I mean, if their language was familiar to him. In their primal poet there is an originality and a hardihood of antiquity. His soul was dark and sullen; it was proud and full of his wrongs. Frons læta parum et dejecto lumina vultu. He passed through imaginary realms without the sun, to the confines of light and hope. The day shone full upon him, and the beams were from on high. His draught of man and his passions is eternal. His language was like himself, deep and full of matter: its strength and harmony may be best expressed by his Tuscan brother:

Aspro

† Is. Casaub. Exercitat. 16 ad Annales Ecclesiast. Baronii.

Aspro concento, orribile armonia
 D'alte querele, d'ululi, e di strida,
 Istranamente concordar s'udia !†

As to Petrarch; we are led by every milder feeling to the retreat of Valclufa. The strain of the poet is yet softer than the breeze, or the murmur of his fountain.† Yet was he not without energy. His subject was sometimes high and holy. He was familiar with death, and his breathings were after immortality. He too could describe the disruption of the moral veil, and the departure of the soul,

*Svegliata fra gli spirti eletti,
 Ove nel suo Fattor l'Alma s'interna!*

I will not pursue this theme; and of Ariosto and Tasso it would be idle to speak. But, by the way, I may observe, that the three greatest masters of heroic verse, in unlaboured ease and flowing dignity, are to my apprehension and judgment, Homer, Ariosto, and the glory of Spain, Alonzo d'Ercilla. I have without intention indeed, but with the privilege of a letter, descanted a little on a favourite incidental topick. For when I hear the language of Italy, under these mighty masters, called frivolous and light, I cannot pass it without a moment's vindication. In my opinion they strengthen and harmonize both the intellect and the ear. My references to them are however very few.

I am

† Ariosto. O. F. c. 16.

‡ Ὡς περ ἀπὸ τῶν εὐδαιμονικῶν λιμῶν αὐρὰ τις ἰδία ἀπ' αὐτῆς φερεται. Such is the harmonious prose which distinguishes the critical writings of the great Halicarnassian. Epist. ad Cn. Pompeium. de Platone. Sect. 2.

I am told, I am forgiven for my Latin; but for the Greek, not so easily. In this particular indeed, I am rather surprised that no man of wit has said of my notes, "They are Greek invocations to call fools into a circle."[†] Certainly there will be Halos round the brightest luminaries; and it must be confessed, that many of my notes have such a circular appearance. If some galled theologian were disposed to banter, and to question the validity of my Greek ordination, he would perhaps shrewdly remind me of the Council of Florence in 1439, when the Greek and Latin churches proposed, as a principle of union, that the Greeks should alter their manuscripts from the Latin. He might also tell me of the celebrated "Fœdus cum Græcis," so well known among the sacred manuscript critics. And if I were to adduce from the great Erasmus, my "Capita argumentorum contra morosos quosdam et indoctos"[§]; I should be reminded by Dr. PARR, that I have not the erudition of Erasmus, of the gentle manners of the serene Sepulveda. Mr. Knight would remind me to the Greek alphabet (to any one, I hope, but his own); and his modesty would attempt some jucundity from the Lusus Priapi. I will endure them all. I have patience and pity too.

I know, you were surprised, when you found me beset with poetasters, and rhetoricians, and commentators; and old seventh form boys, that I was so patient. In truth I thought there might be some remedy. Yet I will own, that when I see so many heads around me deprived of the substance of [†] Shakspeare's As you like it. act 2.

[§] Nov. Test. by Erasmus in 1595. 5th Edit.

of sense, I am perpetually calling for the ampolla of Astolpho, that sacred vessel which he brought from the upper regions.

“ Che tempo é ormai, ch’ ai capi voti o macri

“ Di senno, si soccorri con l’ ampolla §.

But I should have too much on my hands, and I recall my wish. In the political, as well as in the mere literary world, there is more to do in that way than I can attempt.

A few drops from this ampolla might now and then, on particular occasions, fall on the minister himself, who now in his taxes appears as the political Hecate, or Diana, in their triple forms. Some of it also, might be spared for Earl Fitzwilliam with good effect; but I should be unwilling to waste the precious liquor on the noble head of his Grace of Bedford. Some crests are indeed vulnerable: but the constitution is so radically impaired, that when the head is once opened, it is in vain to think of closing it. Mr. Horne Tooke, for instance, is out of the reach of art. I would only set up the bidental at the bookseller’s door at Wimbledon. It will at least serve as a land-mark for the French, on their first invasion. As to the mendici, mimi, balatrons, what can be done?

§ Ariosto O. F. Cant. 38.

† Hecate is termed in the Argonauticks of Orpheus,

Τρισσαμένης ἰδού, ὅλως τετρας, ὅτι δαίμων,

Ταρταροπαῖς Εὐατη! (v. 974.) Edit. Eschenback. p. 66.

For the Diana τρισσος, look at the gems of Fulvius Ursinus.—It is odd, that Lycophron, in all the darkness of his prophetick song, chanting forth the powers, ὡς Ἀρκὴ φιλάτο, couples together Bellona and Minerva, “ Καὶ δ’ Ἐνυμ, καὶ Τριγώνητος Θεῶν. Callist. v. 519.—What is the allegory? It seems as if war and wisdom might be joined together; but the sooner the union can be dissolved, the better.

done? The most infamous are the most contented. But there are minor members of the great democrattick body, and all have not the same office. Yet there is a marvellous use (and they understand it better than we do) in that which every joint supplieth. I should leave Mr. Tierney (a), with some little hope, to the discipline of Cocker and Oldfield (b). He may perhaps improve in calculation; but I think it will be some time before his anti-professional prattle will impose on another boy-committee on a contested election. The drops of the ampolla would never penetrate the thick rotundity of Mr. Nicholls (c); but they might insinuate themselves through the zig-zag crevices of Sir John Sinclair's head. If we pass to subjects of lighter moment, even the Bavarian drops from Mr. Gifford have fallen off, like oil, from the plumage of the Florence and Cruscan geese. At home also, I am sorry that his success is imperfect. I am told, that Mr. Greathead and Mr. Merry yet write and talk; and Mr. JERNINGHAM (poor man!) still continues fillier than his sheep.

But a truce to this badinage. Like the Warrior of Ithaca, I would appear but for a season, and for a peculiar purpose, in such a garb. It is necessary now to assume those higher functions to which I am called, to claim for myself, and to vindicate vindicate the συνδικος Μοισαι κτιστος, § the undoubted right and hereditary dignity of the Satirick muse:

(a) M. P. for the Borough. (b) An obscure writer on the Boroughs. "The sad historian of that tainted plain." (c) M. P. for Tregony.

Τυμωθή βασιλιν πολυμητις Θόδυσσος,
 ΛΑΤΟ Δ' ΕΠΙ ΜΕΤΑΝ ΟΥΔΟΝ! εχον βιος ηδὲ φαρμακον
Ιων εμπλην' ταχιας δ' εγγινατ' οιστης
 Αυτη προσθε ποδων.†

I had once a thought, as you advised me, of analysing the following poem. But to what effect, and for what use? To men, like you, it is needless or presumptuous: to others, it is superfluous. I am indeed confident, that when all the personal objects of my praise or censure shall have passed from the scene, this work will be found to contain principles of government, polity, religion, morality, education, criticism, poetry, and literature, worthy of being transmitted to another age. I have indeed already said much: but I think, I have something more to offer to my country, if strength and health (not according to my deserts, but through that mercy which I humbly and daily acknowledge and revere) should graciously be extended and continued to me. I mean, if I see a proper occasion to present it; and if England should not be absorbed in the vortex and abhorred gulph of democracy and tyranny.

Still perhaps I am incautious in my words. I can promise little. However that may be, my principle is and ever has been that, "NO MAN LIVETH UNTO HIMSELF," for his own little pleasures, or mean gratifications, or low unworthy passions, the dirty family of selfishness, which by the law of Providence, defeats its own purposes. I speak not of a ro-

§ Pind. Pyth. 1.

† Hom. Od. 22.

a romantick, impracticable, general good, but of the specifick benefit which an individual may and can confer on his fellow-creatures in his own limited sphere of action, by a continued exertion of the faculties or talents with which he finds and feels himself intrusted.

Well withers to their country are, above all things, desirous of the steady light of Literature, and of the day-spring from on high. Yet whether they or we may hope, the horizon may perhaps be now illuminated with its departing beams. I will yet strive to be full of hope: though in some passing moments of dejection, the strain of the Florentine poet, in all its melancholy harmony, dwells on my ear: Pensa, che questa di mai non raggiorna! † But let us still contemplate the glory which was cast round other times. I will therefore conclude this letter, by complying with your request in offering you a very few ideas on the chief Satirists of ancient and of modern fame. I may be singular perhaps; but if I except LUCILIUS, (who is known to us only by detached lines and short passages) in my opinion, the fullness of that glory never shone but on SIX POETS: "Quos orbe sub omni Jam vix septenâ numerat sapientia famâ." The character of LUCILIUS, the inventor of Satire, was respected by Scipio and Lælius. They were his friends. Poetasters, rhetoricians, and even men of high quality and of consular rank, were often the subjects of his censure. I know not what a modern French Directory might do with a man of his character; but Lucilius enjoyed respect and impunity in the Roman Republick. HORACE in the politest age, under

† Dante Parad.

under the despotism of Augustus, insinuated himself into the graces of the Emperor; yet he was peculiarly studious to mark the obnoxious, foolish, or wicked characters of his age. He was careful not to be misunderstood. He noted the name, the profession, and the rank of those whom he devoted to undying ridicule, or consigned to the eternity of fame. Augustus and Mæcenas well knew the value of such a poet. They looked to the stability of government and the empire of good sense, and found them intimately connected with literature and poetry. In the time of Nero and Trajan, Juvenal and Persius exerted a severity without playfulness, and veiled themselves in obscurity, yet without being misunderstood. They applied directly and irresistibly to the inmost feelings of the heart, callous and depraved as it was. The writers were either spared or neglected; but their works were admired and circulated. I know the person to whom I am now addressing myself too well, to enter into a criticism on Horace, Juvenal or Persius. Mr. Dryden indeed has done it already.

An interval of ages passed, dark and barbarous. The power of Satire, in its full and legitimate strength, was never again felt till the reign of Louis the fourteenth of France. Then appeared a Poet, second to none of his predecessors. A philosopher without being wordy, the friend of sense and of virtue, a gentleman in principle, independent in spirit, and fearless of enemies, however powerful from their malignity, or formidable from their rank. This extraordinary man was BOILEAU. If I am not deceived, there is something in all his compositions so finished, so removed from conceit and forced thought; such an ardent zeal for propriety in sentiment and in expression; such a sense of the dignity of the human character, when undebased; such a hatred of hypocrisy; such a love of purity; such an abhorrence of all profaneness faneness and indecency, and even of indelicacy; that I am not able to name a man whose works, as a poet and a critick, may be read and studied with equal advantage. Even his compliments, though rather lofty, to Louis the fourteenth, are all conceived in the language of a gentleman and a man of genius, who feels that he is conferring honour, not receiving it. The majesty of the French monarch, in that cultivated age, was surely as worthy of homage as the deity of the Roman Augustus. To read the works of BOILEAU with full advantage, some accuracy of knowledge, and some insight into the delicacy of the ancient French language are required. (I call their language ancient, which existed before the revolution, for I scarce understand the modern democrattick jargon. Grave virus munditias pepulit.) It is also necessary to have a perception of the peculiar cast of the French poetry, and of the construction of the verse. An allowance must be made for the language itself, which is not poetical as contradistinguished to prose, but forcible, terse, and well adapted to the condensation of satirical expression. As a writer, I think him original. What he has borrowed, he almost seems to have restored to its proper place. He alternately assumes the characters of the three great Romans. He maintains an honourable contest for the mastery. Equal to either of them taken singly, and in the merit of composition, sometimes their superior. He is their true and lawful brother. There is a fraternal league between them, which no friend to good literature, good poetry, and good manners, will ever suffer to be broken.

Nearly at the same period, after some momentary gleams and strong flashes in the horizon, Satire arose in England. When I name DRYDEN, I comprehend every varied excellence of our poetry. In harmony, strength, modulation, rhythm, energy, he first displayed the full power of the English language.

language. My business with him at present, is only as a Satirist. I will be brief: I speak to the intelligent. He was the first poet who brought to perfection, what I would term, "The Allegory of Satire." Fables, indeed, and apoloques, and romances, have always been the most ancient modes of reproof and censure. It was the peculiar happiness of Dryden to give an eternal sense and interest to subjects which are transitory. He placed his scene on the ground of actual history. The reader of every age has an interest in the delineation of characters and names, which have been familiar to him from his earliest years. He is already prepared, and feels a predilection for the subject. This accommodation of ancient characters to existing persons has a peculiar force in the age to which it is addressed; and posterity reads with delight a poem founded on pristine story, and illustrated by the records of modern times. Dryden's power of Satire has been generally acknowledged in his Mac-Flecknoe: but his master-piece is that wonderful and unequalled performance, Abfalom and Achitophel. He presents to us an heroick subject in heroick numbers, a well-constructed allegory, and a forcible appeal to our best feelings and passions. He paints the horrors of anarchy, sedition, rebellion, and democracy, with the pencil of Dante, or of Michael Angelo, and he gives the speeches of his heroes with the strength, propriety and correctness of Virgil. It is Satire in its highest form: but it is Satire addressed to the few. It is not adapted to the general effect of this species of poetry. In my opinion, Dryden has not the style and manner of Horace, or Juvenal, or Persius, or Boileau. Pope called him "unhappy," from the looseness of the age in which he lived. He has enthusiasm, majesty, seriousness, severity, gravity, strength of conception, and boldness of imagery. But sprightliness, gaiety, an easy badinage, an occasional playfulness, so necessary to the general effect of satirical poetry, try, were all wanting to him. Perhaps his genius was too sublime. He could not, or he would not, descend to the minutiae which are often required, the anecdotes, and the passing traits of the time. His satire had an original character. It was the strain of Archilochus sounding from the lyre of Alcæus.

The sixth and last of this immortal Brotherhood, in the fullness of time, and in the maturity of poetical power, came POPE. All that was wanting to his illustrious predecessor found its consummation in the genius, knowledge, correct sense, and condensation of thought and expression, which distinguish this poet. The tenour of his life was peculiarly favourable to his office. He had first cultivated all the flowery grounds of poetry. He had excelled in description, in pastoral, in the pathetick, and in general criticism; and had given an English existence in perpetuity to the Father of all poetry. Thus honoured, and with these pretensions, he left them all for that excellence, for which the maturity of his talents and judgment so eminently designed him. Familiar with the great; intimate with the polite; graced by the attentions of the fair; admired by the learned; a favourite with the nation; independent in an acquired opulence, the honourable product of his genius and industry; the companion of persons distinguished for birth, high fashion, rank, wit, or virtue; resident in the center of all publick information and intelligence; every avenue to knowledge, and every mode of observation were open to his curious, prying, piercing, and unwearied intellect. His works are so generally read and studied, that I should not merely fatigue, but I should almost insult you by such a needless disquisition. I shall therefore conclude.

As a disciple of these great masters, and full of that spirit which an unbroken and an honourable intimacy with their works

works has inspired, I now present myself a votary at their temple; and in some measure clothed in the robes of their hereditary priesthood, I would also enter, and offer my oblation at the high altar of my country. But if, unworthy of this hallowed investment and interior ministry, the door of the sanctuary is closed upon me; I shall retire without a murmur, and with devotion unimpaired worship in the vestibule. Yet can best judge of my motives, who have known most intimately the nature and extent of my studies, solitary so long in their acquirement, and now publick at last in their application and in their end. With a necessary indulgence for all my frailties, vices, errors, follies, and imperfections, and with the partiality of friendship, you, and such as you, may perhaps allow me to apply to myself, with some little variation, the words of the most fervid poet of antiquity:

Non tenues ignavo pollice chordas
Pulso, sed Aurunci residens in margine templi
Audax magnorum tumultis ad canto Magistrum.

I am, &c. &c.

[illegible]

(3)

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST DIALOGUE
THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE FIRST.

Audaci quicunque afflate Cratino,
Iratum Eupolidem prægrandi cum sene palles,
Aspice et hæc, si forte aliquid decessus audis;
Inde vaporatâ lector mihi serveas aure.

PERO, SAT. 1.

PURSUIITS OF LITERATURE

DIALOGUE THE FIRST

And as the subject of the Critique,
I shall suppose you to be the author,
I shall then, I have already observed,
In the various letters which I have sent you.

PROLOGUE.

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST DIALOGUE†

OF THE

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE:

THE importance of the subject of this poem, and the necessity of such an appeal to the kingdom at this time, are the best reasons which I can offer for its publication. But in regard to the various matters which are considered in the following composition, I recommend to my readers a passage from a collection of the most pleasing and informing treatises in natural philosophy which I ever read, or I believe ever were written; I mean the Chemical Essays by Dr. Watson, the present Bishop of Landaff; vol. iv. p. 257. It is this; "Sir Isaac Newton and Dr. Bentley met accidentally in London, and

A 2

"on

" on Sir Isaac's inquiring what Philosophical Pursuits were carrying on at Cambridge, the Doctor replied, " none; for when you go a hunting, Sir Isaac, you kill all the game; you have left us nothing to pursue." " Not so, said the philosopher, you may start a variety of game in every bush, if you will but take the trouble to beat for it." " And so in truth it is," (observes Bishop Watfon) " every object in nature affords occasion for philosophical experiment." I may add, that such a state of society and of literature, as the present, affords occasion for numerous experiments and observations, without any danger of mutual interference.

In this Poem no imitation whatsoever is intended of any former writer, or of any former poem. It was written upon no private motive whatsoever; but simply and solely as the conduct of the persons mentioned or alluded to, or the manner of their compositions, or the principles of their writings, tend to influence and affect the learning, the government, the religion, the publick morality, the publick happiness, and the publick security of this nation. My intentions are just and justifiable to reasonable men, who will reflect on what has passed and is passing before them. We must indeed be sensible, that it is now no longer a mere sport of the pen, a light skirmish, or a random shaft, the Apollineæ bellum puerile pharetræ, which is alone demanded; but our weapons must be instruments of war, able to break down the strong holds of anarchy, impiety, and rebellion, and mighty to vindicate the power of legitimate authority. In every region of Europe there should have been a common cause. But in no kingdom, except Great Britain, has that cause been maintained in full integrity. While I am writing, we are convulsed to our center; and yet in the midst of fear, we are impudently and wickedly told, there is no cause of alarm.

Talia dem celebros, subitam civilis Brynnys

Tarpeia de monte sacrum, Phlograque moerit

Prælia: sacrilegis lucent Capitolis undis,

Et Sæmum furias, Latia sumpsera cohortas. (†)

We may (for we can) all of us contribute to the assistance, and the comfort, and the good of others, and to the stability of social happiness. (The sword, the voice, and the pen must be resolutely and decisively called into action, for defence, for counsell, for admonition, and for censure. Satirical writings must submit to the imputation of ill-nature, though I see no necessary connection between them. In my opinion, Satire has nothing to do with good-nature or with ill-nature. Its office respects the publick good alone, and the interests of the community. It is frequently designed to supply the laws in all cases which are beyond their jurisdiction. From such courts it appeals to perhaps a still higher tribunal, that of publick opinion, character and reputation.

Such are my ideas; yet I am sure I have nothing of the wild American in my composition; I never wished to destroy any man, either to inherit his wit or plunder him of his understanding. But I will bow to no Cyrill of Alexandria, to no executive director of a modern republick, to no lordly president of factious councils, of democratick delegates, or of societies in open defiance of established authority in regulated empires. There is darkness mixed with with fire, and volumes of smoke are rolling from the mouth of the cavern. I love no atheist French Bishops, nor unfrocked grammarians in England. Horne Tooke is still living, and Edmund Burke † is no more. SOL OCCUBUIT! I hope Mr. Pitt will assure us of the old prodigy, non nulla secuta est! We must now all assist in our various capacities, and feel and act as publick men. In times like these we may assume a virtue, a character, a courage, and a firmness, not originally our own. I protest I have no private animosity in my nature; but I come forth (boldly enough, I will confess, but as I ought to do) in behalf of my country, her literature, her laws, her religion, and her government. Nor would I publish this satirical Poem, but from a full conviction of its tendency to promote the publick welfare, in its degree, and according to its subject, when it is (if it ever should be) studied and considered with impartiality.

(†) Statius. Sylv. Lib. 5. Carm. 3.

† August, 1797.

(THE)

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

A SATIRICAL POEM.

DIALOGUE THE FIRST. (a)

THE AUTHOR AND OCTAVIUS.

THE AUTHOR.

I who once deem'd my race of labour run,
And camps, and courts, and crowds, and senates shun,
Still to the publick raise no venal voice,
In the full freedom of a Briton's choice,
Through tracts aloft on daring pinions rove,
Where'er by duty borne, or led by love.

Yet not unconscious of this awful age,
I mark what new conflicting systems rage,

Systems

(a) First published in May 1794.

Systems which laugh to scorn th' avenging rod,
 And hurl defiance to the throne of God;
 Shake pestilence abroad with madd'ning sweep,
 And grant no pause—but overlasting sleep! (b)
 Blood-guiltiness their crime; with hell they cope;
 No flesh, no spirit now must rest in hope,
 But under foliage dark, and cypress gloom,
 The (c)sculptur'd mock'ry marks, and seals the tomb.

New Light on all, but on the Poet, rise;
 Still can he smile, and with no murm'ring sighs
 Can own well-pleas'd, that now the meanest bard, Bavius, (d) or Maro, finds the same regard;

Not

(b) This alludes to the French decree which abolished, by law, in 1793, a futurity of existence. Impiety and absurdity are the natural consequences of their principles.

(c) The French have also decreed, that in every church yard trees shall be planted, and the figure of sleep erected pointing to the tombs; and this sleep they decree to be eternal. N. B. This was the fact, when this First Part of the Pursuits of Literature was first published in May 1794.—It may be so again, or may be so at this moment, 1796.

(d) The name suggests the honourable mention of a poem lately published, under the title of "The BAVIAD," or an Imitation

Not as Mincus would, with partial rays, by good but Illum'd the rising glories of his day; ~~such~~ but of Whose orb the Mantuan plains alone would warm;
 Or beam propitious on the Sabine farms.

OCTAVIUS.

Why should you write; the world is now so fickle,
 Scarce is there room for Sheridan (e) and Tickell; (f)

And

translation of the first Satire of Persius. Quæ tibi, quæ tali reddam pro carmine dona?—Though the author professes to be conversant only among the sheep folds at present, he threatens a descent upon the noble and more reluctant animals. If this be a first production, the poet must proceed with the consciousness of genius: he has the ground-work of all excellence, good sense, and a knowledge of just and harmonious expression. He has divulged his name imprudently. Such compositions require secrecy for their effect; especially if they are published at an early period of life, and still more if the poet commences his career with satire. Mr. Pope suffered pure description to hold the place of sense for a long time, before he took his proper station. The author of The Baviad has taken some pleasant trouble off my hands. The Album, the Laura-Marias, the Ferninghams, Antony Parquins, Mary Robinsons, Piozzis and Bezzis; the Phil-lidas, Hyppipilas, vatum et plorabile si quid. Unfortunately there are too many left. (1794.)

(a) R. B. SHERIDAN, Esq. M. P. I am sorry to say of this anextraordinary

And though in tone sonorous, blithe or grand,
 The loud Laurentian (g) trumpet through the land
 Sound Pitt, and Prettyman, and Rose, and Rolle,
 With strength of Stentor, but Mezentian (h) soul;

The
 extraordinary man, that in the realms of wit and humour he is now silent. "Unus sceptrum petitus, eadem aliis sopitu quiete est." Why is it so? Politics are transitory; wit is eternal.

(f) Since this was written, the publick has lost this very ingenious man. He was the happiest of any occasional writer in his day: happy alike in the subject and in the execution of it.—I mention with pleasure Anticipation, the Wreath of Fashion, &c.
 &c. &c. and I wish to preserve the name and remembrance of such a man as Mr. Tickell. Poets and ingenious men, who write on occasional subjects with great ability, are too often lost in the most undeserved oblivion. But we must recollect, that even such a poem as "The Absalom and Achitophel" of Dryden himself (perhaps his greatest production) was but occasional, and written for a party.

(g) It is hardly necessary to remind the reader of the political composition of the Rolliad and the Probationary Odes by Dr.
Laurence and company.—1794. N. B. The Doctor may be consulted in private at the old blue and buff lamp, on the subject of these state hand-bills. If the political infection is recent, the Doctor removes it in a few days. (1797.)

(h) I am sorry to perceive too much of the contemptor divum in these compositions; and a little of it, as Mr. Burke, the friend of Dr. Laurence, says on another occasion, is a great deal too much.

The Doctor may for Fox and Portland vouch,
 With spectacles on nose, (i) but empty pouch.
 Why must you seek this sad Cumæan shore?
 Or why to genius give one victim more?

AUTHOR.

Forgive me;—all conspire to waste my time;
 Languor, and care, and solitude, and rhyme:
 Now while each sage, to fame and science known,
 Or leaves the field of life, or listless grown,
 (k) Review his trophies with an idle pride,
 Sick of the dunces rising at his side;

If

(i) Shakspeare says, "With spectacles on nose and pouch on side." I am contented simply to admire Doctor Lawrence's spectacles, but I have ventured to qualify his pouch. (1794.) I know not for whom Dr. Lawrence now will vouch; I am certain I will not vouch for the Doctor. (1796.)

(k) I allude to such publications as, "Prose on several Occasions, accompanied by some Pieces in Verse." By George Colman, (Senior.) I think, however, that it is a provident wisdom in men of great abilities, like Mr. Colman, to collect and publish what they wish to deliver to posterity as their own. Posthumous works are rarely to be considered in that light.

If I may write, let Proteus (1) PRIESTLEY tell,
 He writes on all things, but on nothing well;
 Who,

(1) Proteus Priestley.—There is one very material difference between this Proteus and his namesake of antiquity. Of the latter it is recorded, Sine vi non ulla dabit præcepta; § now our Proteus gives precept upon precept, line upon line; here a little and there a little; and is continually obtruding his oracles upon the publick, without any compulsion at all, upon every subject which can, or which cannot be known. I believe that Dr. Priestley would dispute very intelligibly upon the famous Germanic question, "Utrum Chimæra bombinans in vacuo possit comedere secundas intentiones." But I shall leave the Doctor to the care of Bishop Horsley. (1794.) †—N. B. The Bishop now requires sometimes a little care to be taken of himself. (July 1797.)

§ Virg. Georg. L. 4.

† As to Dr. Priestley's King-killing wishes and opinions take a few words: "IT IS TO BE REGRETTED, that the situation of things was such, that THE SENTENCE (of DEATH on Charles the First) could not be passed by the WHOLE NATION, OR THEIR REPRESENTATIVES, solemnly ASSEMBLED for that purpose." Priestly on Government, p. 39. How must this Reverend Deputy elect to the National Convention of France have exulted on the 21st of Jan. 1793!!! The Deputy, however, had the wisdom of the serpent in not taking his seat, though he could not assume the innocence of the dove.—The late Mr. Gibbon well understood Dr. Priestley's character and opinions, and expressed himself strongly on that subject. No man of discernment can see their direct tendency but with reprobation, and sometimes not without fear or horror! (1794.) Lord Sheffield has lately published the correspondence between Mr. G. and Dr. P. in the first volume of Mr. Gibbon's Posthumous Works, 4to. These letters are not unworthy of attention: (1796.)

Who, as the demon of the day decrees,
Air, books, or water makes with equal ease.
May not I strive amid their motley throng,
All pale and pensive as I muse along?

OCTAVIUS.

Say, would your thought to Homer's pomp aspire,
Or wake to loftiest rapture Pindar's (m) lyre?

Go

(m) Pindar's lyre.—In this verse I speak of the great Θυόων but there is an obscure person, styling himself ΠΕΡΡΑ ΠΕΡΡΑΡ, of whom I shall say a few words. This man certainly possesses a mind by no means uninformed, and a species of humour; but it is exhausted by a repetition of the same manner, and nearly the same ideas, even to disgust. He has the power of rhyming ludicrously, and is sometimes even gifted with poetry; and finally, he is puffed up with a vanity and self-conceited importance almost without a parallel. This obscure man has conceived, by these qualifications, to thrust himself upon the publick notice, and become the scorn of every man of character and of virtue. Such is the blasphemy, such the impiety, the obscenity, the impudence and the contempt of all decent respect, which pervade his numerous pamphlets in verse, that the reader is ill repaid by the lively sallies of humour which frequently animate this mass of crudities. I form my judgment from his works, and not

Go then and view, since clos'd his cloister'd day,
The self-supported melancholy GRAY: (n)

Dark
not from acquaintance with the man. Yet I hear that he breathes a warm constitutional spirit, because, forsooth, he has told us, in some trumpery ode, of the necessity of a king or a log, or a nail; after he has perpetually reviled, and held up to scorn every master principle by which government and society are maintained. I will not waste a verse on such a character; but say honestly and plainly, that though I can often smile and sometimes be pleased with the humour and the manner, yet I think I perceive such a rooted depravity and malignity of heart that, from the consideration of his works, I can affirm almost unequivocally of this obscure man, in the words of the severest writer of antiquity,

Stupet hic vitio, et fibris increvit opimum
Pingue, caret culpâ, nescit quid perdat, et alto
Demersus, summa rursum non bullit in unda. †

N. B. This man's works (now published) amount in value to above four guineas; but we are informed that a set may be had for TWO GUINEAS AND A HALF IN 4TO, or for TWO GUINEAS in four volumes 8vo!!!—What an inducement to a purchaser!
(1794)—Posterity (if it can be supposed that such trash should exist) will be astonished, that the present age could look with patience on such malignant ribaldry. I am very sorry, that Mr. Roscoe in his admirable life of Lorenzo de Medici, and The British Critic, (I suppose inadvertently) should give any portion of it the slightest approbation. For shame! Non hæc in fœdera! (1796.)

(n) This character of Mr. GRAY is drawn from the consideration of his Memoirs and Letters, published by Mr. MASON.

Dark was his morn of life, and bleak the spring,
 Without one fost'ring ray from Britain's king: (nn)
 Granta's dull abbots cast a side-long glance,
 And Levite gownsmen hugg'd their ignorance.
 With his high spirit strove the master-bard,
 And was his own exceeding great reward; (o)
 Years without hope in tardy progress pass,
 'Till some few grains yet ling'ring in his glass,
 He rose late-heeded by patrician care, (p)
 Though private friendship help'd him to the chair.
 Saw you not Mason stand with down-cast eye,
 While great Augustus pass'd unconscious by? (pp)

'Till

(nn) If I have read Mr. Gray's Letters rightly, I believe he neither sought nor wished for royal favour. I wish however that it had been offered to the first poet and the first scholar of the age.

(o) "I am thy exceeding great reward."

Genesis, chap. xv. ver. 1.

(p) He was appointed Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge, late in life, by the Duke of GRAFTON the Chancellor, at the particular recommendation (as it was strongly believed) of Mr. STONEHEWER.

(pp) The discernment of his Majesty GEORGE THE THIRD in poetical merit, is acknowledged in the patronage of Dr. Beattie, Author of the Minstrel, and of Mr. Cowper, Author of

The

'Till wrapt in terrors of avenging night,
He starts Macgreggor (q) with dilated might?

Have you not seen neglected PENROSE (r) bloom,
Then sink unhonour'd in a village tomb?
Content a curate's humble path he trod,
Now, with the poor in spirit, rests with God.

To

The Task. Mr. Mason must have been overlooked for a particular reason. I shrewdly suspect that Mr. Stowe (the common friend of Mr. Gray and Mr. Mason) could account for it.

(q) See the Heroick Epistle to Sir William Chambers, and the Heroick Postscript to the Publick, by Malcolm Macgreggor, Esq. A friend of mine has assured me that I am wrong in this conjecture; and I must own that the Epistle to Shebbeare, and the Dean and the Squire, attributed to the same author, have diminished my confidence in its probability. But as I have written the lines, they may stand as a tribute of gratitude to a man from whose acknowledged poetry I confess myself to have received much delight. The strains of Musæus and the Druid minstrels have still their charms, and he must have cold feelings who cannot be moved by the simplicity of Elfrida. The English Garden, though with a few faults, deserves the thanks of every admirer of our national taste. (1794.)

(r) See the Flights of Fancy, 4to, by Thomas Penrose, Curate of Newbury, Berks. The names of the poems alluded to are these, The Helmets, The Carousal of Odin, and Madness. — He published these himself, and no more; and I speak of these. No author should be judged for posthumous works, published by friends, except he ordered them to be published after his decease.

To worth untitled would your fancy turn?
 The muse all friendless wept o'er MICKLE's urn:
 MICKLE, who bade the strong poetick tide.
 Roll o'er Britannia's shores in Lusitanian pride. (s)

A U T H O R.

Then I must suit the temper of these times,
 Degraded now to mere historick rhymes,
 And last be hail'd in some sagacious page,
 The finest, brightest poet of the age,
 And that with grave solemnity so sad,
 Faith, 'tis enough to make poor HAYLEY (s) mad.

B

No:

(a) WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, a man of genius, and of great poetical powers. He translated the Lusiad of Camoens in a free paraphrastic manner, but with the spirit of an original poet. I could never account for the neglect of so very poetical a work.

(s) Hayley.—Piger scribendi ferre laborem,
Scribendi recte, nam ut multum nil moror. †
 The notes which Mr. Hayley, who is a very ingenious man and a pleasing scholar, has written on his various poems are very amusing, and not unfrequently afford much instruction. Had he but learned the art of blotting, he might possibly have attained considerable eminence, and preserved it. But as he is in general

† Hor. 1. L. 1. Sat. 4, v. 12.

No : though in vain I may attempt to please,
I'll write with learning what I think with ease.

What ?—from the Muse, by cryptogamic (v) stealth
Must I purloin her native sterling wealth ?
In filmy, gawzy, gossamery lines,
With lucid language, and most dark designs,

In
general too feeble, tedious, and insufferably prolix, consequently,
&c. &c. See Horace, who has pronounced an irreversible sentence on all such persona stiling themselves poets, however voluminous their works may be.

(v) See the Botanick Garden and Loves of the Plants, by Dr. Darwin. I wish men would peruse the treatise de causis Corruptæ Eloquentiæ, before they attempt by prettiness, glittering words, points, conceits, forced thoughts, to sacrifice propriety and just imagery to the rage of mere novelty. This will always be the case, when writers in prose or verse (if I may be allowed to use Sancho's phrase a little metaphorically) "want better bread than is made of wheat." Modern ears are absolutely debauched by such poetry as Dr. Darwin's, which marks the decline of simplicity and true taste in this country. It is to England what Seneca's prose was to Rome. *Abundat dukibus vitiis. Dryden and Pope are the standards of excellence, in this species of writing in our language; and when young minds are rightly instituted in their works, they may without much danger, read such glittering verses as Dr. Darwin's. They will then perceive the distortion of the sentiment, and the harlotry of the

* Quintil. Lib. 10. c. 1.

In sweet hetandryan, monogynian strains,
 Pant for a pyssill in botanick pains;
 On the luxurious lap of Flora thrown,
 On beds of yielding vegetable down,
 Raise lust in pinks; and with unhallow'd fire
 Bid the soft virgin violet expire? (x)

Is it for me to creep, or snore, or doze,
 In modish song, or fashionable prose? (y)

B 2 .

To

the ornaments. It would also be a happy thing for all naturalists, whether poets or writers in prose, if they would in the words of a true poet, "Look through nature up to Nature's God!" Dr. Darwin is certainly a man of great fancy; but I will not cease to repeat, that good writing and good poetry require something more.

Οὐ γὰρ ἐν μεσότητι κερταί

Δαπν' ἀνθρώπων καὶ Μοῦσῶν

Τὸ ἁρμονικὸν ἔστιν.

(x) I would just hint that it is a matter of some curiosity to me to conceive, how young ladies are instructed in the terms of botany, which are very significant.

(y) Modish Prose.—I allude to the piling of sentences, their triads and other artificial divisions of modern prose, by which the whole simplicity and natural dignity of our English style is abandoned and lost.

To pen with garreteers obscure and shabby,
 Inscriptive nonsense in a fancied Abbey; (z)
 Or some Warkworthian hermit tale endite,
 Such ditties as our gossip spinsters write?

Or must I tempt some Novel's lulling theme,
 Bid the bright eye o'er Celestina (zz) stream;
 With fabled knights, and tales of flighted love,
 Such as our Spanish Cato (a) might approve?

In

(z) Such trash as a vile pamphlet called Kilhampton Abbey, &c. &c. &c. in short, the whole mugitus labyrinthi. Every age produces similar trash, and this name serves as well as any other to mark my meaning in this place.

(zz) Put for almost any modern novel. Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Mrs. Inchbald. Mrs. Mary Robinson, Mrs. &c. &c. though all of them are ingenious ladies, yet they are too frequently whining or frisking in novels, till our girls' heads turn wild with impossible adventures, and now and then are tainted with democracy. Not so the mighty magician of THE MYSTERIES OF UDOLPHO, † bred and nourished by the Florentine Muses in their sacred solitary caverns, amid the palpy shrines of Gothic superstition, and in all the dreariness of enchantment: a poetess whom Ariosto would with rapture have acknowledged, as the

La nudrita

Damigella Trivulzia AL SACRO SPECU. O. F. c. 46.

In Travels for the Heart (b) and not the head,
 From post to pillar, and from board to bed,
 Thro' climes of various woe the pilgrim lead,
 'Till Charlotte droops, and master-misses bleed.

OCTAVIUS.

If these disgust, to serious cares attend,
 And make serene Philosophy your friend.
 Pen some choice Fragment (b) in the genuine taste,
 Each power combin'd of wit and learning waste;

Smart

(a) The late venerable Earl Camden (once Lord High Chancellor of England) is said to have learned Spanish very late in life, to read the romances in that language, having exhausted those written in English, French and Italian. All the world knows that Cato learned Greek, at sixty years of age, to read the romances in that tongue.

(b) All such works as abound in what is called in modern jargon, The sublime instinct of sentiment.

(b) Alluding to the swarm of free thinking and democratical pamphlets with which the publick have been pestered. It is hoped that the interference of the legislature and the constitutional exertions of private societies have either lessened their number, or deprived them of their malignant intentions. The time for discrimination seems to be come. Toleration is fully granted to all opinions, subject to the controul of the legislature after their publication, in the open courts of law

Smart and concise, with deepest meaning fraught,
Neat be the types, and the vignettes high wrought,

With
law by the verdict of a jury, in which true liberty consists. Good order and just authority must be maintained with vigour and decision.

But HE is chiefly to be consulted, who, if I may be allowed to use the language a little metaphorically, hath stood between the dead and the living, and stayed the plague.* EDMUND BURKE; greater and brighter in the decline than in the noon day of his life and vigour. It would be almost an injury to name the works † whereof all Europe sings; but to his countrymen they speak with a force not to be resisted.

OMNES

Admonet, et MAGNA testatur VOCE per umbras,
DISCITE JUSTITIAM MONITI, ET NON TEMNERE DIVOS †
(1796).

* i. e. By his masterly, vigorous, and formidable exposition of the modern French principles in all the fulness of their deformity, and in the terrors of their operation. This is what I mean by staying the plague. Whoever warns the living against a mortal disease, and shews the causes of it, and the mode of prevention, and the final remedy, may then be said to stand, as a Guardian Angel, between the dead and living, in a metaphorical sense. Such was EDMUND BURKE! The spear of Ithuriel discovered and displayed Satan in his proper shape.

† On a second consideration (1796.) I think it right to name them. 1. Reflections on the Revolution of France, and on the proceedings in certain societies in London relative to that event (1790.) 2. A Letter to a Member of the National Assembly (1791.) 3. An Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs in consequence of some discussions in Parliament relative to the Reflections on the French Revolution (1791.) 4. A Letter on the

With frontispiece to catch the gazer's eye,
 Treason, the pile ; the basis, blasphemy : (c)
 Free from dull order decency and rule,
 With dogmas fresh from the Sans Souci school,
 With definitions vague and terms unknown,
 With seeming candour, but imperious tone,

Mankind's

(c) The basis, blasphemy.—This is the progress of modern Republicanism. The dissolution or rejection of all religious principle prepares the mind for breaking every bond of established government, however just or reasonable, to introduce into practice some new theory of general good: so very general, as to have nothing to do with the good of the individual. For the nature of this GENERAL GOOD consult the national Assembly and Convention of France: "Agri, edificia, loca, possessiones (COELUM ET MARE pratermiserunt, aeterna compleri sunt) publice data, ASSIGNATA, uendita!" Cic de Leg. Agr. Orat. 3.—Mirabeau began with these memorable words: "Si vous voulez une REVOLUTION, il faut commencer par decatholiser de la France." the Attack made on him in the H. of L. by the D. of Bedford and the E. of Lauderdale (1796.) 5. Two Letters on the proposals for Peace with the Regicide Directory of France (1796.) 6. (Posthumous in 1797.) Letters on the Conduct of our domestic Parties with regard to French Politics, including Observations on the Conduct of the Minority in the Session of 1793. 7. Memorials on French affairs, 1791, 92, and 93. The remainder of Mr. Burke's posthumous writings may be expected, from the exemplary zeal and honourable attention of his executors, Dr. Laurence and Dr. King. "Sunt adhuc caræ hominibus fides et officium; sunt qui defunctorum quoque amicos agant." Plin. Ep.

Mankind's meek friend, and Nature's gentle Sage,
 The Priest of Reason in her chosen age; (d)
 Then bending low, with equal reverence search
 The storied portico, and faintest church,

Till,

(d) One of the most extraordinary treatises of this kind, is a work in French, intitled, "THE RUINS: or a Meditation on the Revolution of Empires by Mr. VOLNEY, Deputy to the National Assembly in 1789." It is written with some spirit, and not without eloquence in some parts, and abounds with what is now called Philosophy. The intent of this book is to attack every principle of religion in the heart, even the principles of the religion now termed natural. Mr. Volney wishes to convince mankind, that every pretence to revelation, in every age and in every country, is equally false and equally unfounded; and by a jargon of language, and antiquity, and mythology, and philosophy, he labours to confound and blend them all in uncertain tradition and astronomical allusions. And all this is attempted to be done, that the world may be prepared for the French Revolution, and the principles on which it was effected. In this point he seems to act not without reason, as the principles of this revolution are laid in the rejection of all religion, and were so from the beginning of it; though we may be surprised when we are assured, that it is "An age of DELIVERANCE for a great people and OF HOPE FOR ALL THE EARTH!!" p. 88. § The real ignorance of this man, on the subject of true religion, is as conspicuous as the puny literature which appears to support his strange doctrines and foolish opinions. Upon the subject of what he calls the Filiation of religions, (for the French must have their new jargon of words

in

§ I refer to the pages of the French original,

Till, wheedling round with metaphysic art,
You steal Religion from th'unguarded heart,

And

in every subject) he says; " We acknowledge, in one word, that " all the theological doctrines on the origin of the world, on the " nature of God, on the revelation of his laws, and the appear" ance of his person, are nothing more than recitals of astrono-
" mical facts, and figurative and emblematical stories of the play
" of the constellations ! !" (du jeu des constellations.) p. 167.

I cannot but acknowledge the superstition and credulity of mankind in many parts of the world; but what Mr. Volney would impose upon us for the truth, exceeds the bounds of any credu-lity ever yet required. Then he introduces the systems of idolatry, the worship of the stars, the two principles or dualism (a little more French jargon) the monde animé, and the monde ma- chine, Moses, Zoroaster, Confucius, and Brama: and last comes Christianity. The chapter on this subject is the strangest of all, for he declares, that CHRISTIANITY consists in the allegorical worship of the Sun under the cabalistical names of Chris-en, or Yes-us or Jesus ! ! " Christianisme ou culte allegorique du

" Soleil, sous les noms cabalistiques de Chris-en ou Yes-us ou

" Jesus ! !" And this is a formidable opponent ! this is one of the guides to whom we are to give up our prejudices ! Read any one of the four Evangelists and give your own answer.

The impudence of Mr. Volney is at least equal to any other power he possesses, for he requires of his reader only the surrender of his common sense, and common understanding, and the common principles of any knowledge. Yet he demands the admission of all his allegories and mystical meanings, (of which, in the true French stile, no doubt is to be entertained,) and then the world is to be emancipated and delivered. From what ?

—From credulity and superstition. Q.E.D. Upon this Mr.

Volney observes, the priests murmur. I think the laity will at least

And in the see-saw undulating play,
The moral chorus dies in words away.

Thence

least do as much, at the words of this apostle of nonsense, blasphemy, folly, and—the rights of mankind, which the French never fail to introduce, when they have laid them all prostrate, civil, moral and mental. This is but a specimen of such writers to whom we are to bow as the deliverers of mankind from superstition, and the directors of our minds in the ways of truth. Professing themselves wise they are become fools!—The best men are indeed convinced, that the ways and works of Providence are inscrutable, and the nature of God incomprehensible; and they lament their own insufficiency. Yet they feel themselves bound by the laws of reasoning, and of the specific evidence in every great question divine and human. They are the best prepared to acknowledge the depth and height of eternal wisdom and mercy, and the difficulties of attaining to this knowledge. They assent to the words of a man of no vulgar erudition † or mediocrity of talents, when he declares, “Quantis suspiriis et gemitibus fiat, ut quantulacunque ex parte possit intelligi Deus!”—Before I close this note, I cannot help reminding, not informing, every reader, that even Tacitus, (the favourite author of many free thinkers, though I know not why) has borne testimony to the existence and last sufferings of JESUS CHRIST, under the procurator Pontius Pilate, in the reign of Tiberius. “Auctor nominis ejus CHRISTUS, qui Tiberio imperitante, per procuratorem Pontium Pilatum, supplicio affectus erat.” Annal. 15. S. 44. Yet we are assured, with an effrontery without parallel, that CHRIST, or Chris-en is only a cabalistical name of the Sun. So is the name of Cæsar, of Socrates, or of Plato. Are we not ashamed of listening to such writers † Augustinus.

Thence careless faunt'ring in Vacuna's vale,
 Tune to your listless lyre some Crazy Tale; (f)
 Dash for applause, nor seek a poet's name,
 Content with scribbling and ambiguous fame,
 From laws of metre free, (which idly serve
 To curb strong genius and its swelling nerve,)
 In verse half veil'd raise titillating lust,
 Like girls that deck with flow'rs Priapus' bust. (g)

Go

writers, as Mr. Volney, who address us so unworthily! Yet this is the manner in which Mr. Volney, and such as Mr. Volney, treat the whole human race, men and women, learned and unlearned. The general character of all these writers may be expressed in language at once awful and true: "Non est qui judicat vere; confidunt in nihilo, loquuntur vanitates; concepterunt laborem, pepererunt iniquitatem."

(f) See Crazy Tales, &c. and the whole school of La Fontaine.

(g) See ANGELICA KAUFFMAN's elegant print; but it is to be remembered that the subject is purely classical. N. B. A friend of mine would insist upon my perusing a long disquisition in quarto, ON THE WORSHIP OF PRIAPUS, (printed in 1786) with numerous and most disgusting plates. It has not been published, but distributed liberally, † without any injunction of

† i. e. By the Dilettanti Society. The solemnity with which the Dilettanti meet and present their valuable works to the chosen few, and

Go turn to MADAN, and in Gospel truth,
And Thelyphoric (h) lore, instruct our youth:

Some

of secrecy, to the emeriti in speculative Priapism, as one would think. As I hope the treatise may be forgotten I shall not name the author, † but observe, that all the ordure and filth, all the antique pictures, and all the representations of the generative organs, in their most odious and degrading protrusion, have been raked together and copulated (for no other idea seems to be in the mind of the author) and copulated, I say, with a new species of blasphemy. Such are, what I would call, the records of the stews and bordellos of Grecian and Roman antiquity, exhibited for the recreation of anti-quaries, and the inscription in the blank leaf of each book, are rather ludicrous. The President (of the day) is invested with a Roman Toga in a sort of consular pomp. Before the vote for printing Mr. —'s Priapus had passed, I should have said with Roman sternness, had I been present, I, lictor, colliga manus. § — This Roman farce would (and perhaps may) form the subject of a legitimate Satire. (1796.) The Dilettanti Society best know what emblem, modelled in wax, is laid upon their table at their solemn meetings.

“ Grati

Discumbunt; nec velari PICTURA jubetur:

Forſitan expeſtes, ut Gaditana canoro

Incipiat prurire choro.”

Juv.

† The author afterwards named himself, and was very angry with me without any reason. I only did my duty to the publick.— See P. of L. Part 2. v. 57. Note (o) (Added Aug. 1797.)

§ Liv. Lib. 1. c. 26.

Some plain positions lay, as simply thus ;

Marriage (i) consists in—actu cōiūtūs :

Laymen may have ten wives ; poor priests but one :

Then growl at British laws in surly tone,

That

quaries, and the obscene revellings of Greek scholars in their private studies. Surely this is to dwell mentally in lust and darkness in the loathsome and polluted chamber at Capreae, Essays on Landscape and Gardening may, I hope, purify the mind : and as the author is conversant with Greek writers, and is now at a certain time of life, I recommend to him a sentence from an author, who perhaps is not in his catalogue, though Mr.—— would be thought a philosopher : Σοφία πρῶτος ἀγνῶσθαι, δεύτερα σιγήειν.

(b) See a book intitled Thelypthora, or The Causes of Female Ruin, in 3 vols. 8vo.

(i) These expressions, and some that follow, are taken verbatim from the book itself : and yet there are persons who think that such treatises should be answered seriously.

N. B. If in this and in a very few other places, I have been obliged to introduce expressions rather strong, I beg pardon, which will be granted by readers who reflect : for it is impossible to give an effectual exposure of the unwarrantable and scandalous licence of some writers without it. The following excellent words will explain my meaning : “ The ancient satirists often used great liberty in their expressions ; but their freedom no more resembles this licentiousness, than the nakedness of an Indian does that of a common prostitute.” HUME’S Hist. of Eng. vol. viii. p. 334. (Si sic omnia !)

That "loving man must grind with loving wife,
In mold asinaria; during life."

With THICKNESS (k) give some useful Hints for Health,

For publick good, though not for private wealth;
Like him, to shun the cold embrace of death,
Inhale in virgin arms ambrosial breath.

Or from the Alps extend to Norway's rocks,
With Switzer-Russico-Kamtchatcan Coxe, (n)

Then

(k) Mr. THICKNESS, in his Valetudinarian's Bath Guide, dedicated to the Earl of SHELBURNE, now Marquis of LANS-DOWNE, has these words; "I myself am now turned of sixty, and
"in general, though I have lived in various climates, and suffered "severely in body and mind, yet having always partaken of the "breath of young women whenever they lay in my way, I feel
"none of those infirmities which so often strike my eyes and
"ears in this great city, in men much younger than myself." Chap. v. to which Mr. T. has put his own name, and he is rather a voluminous author. But, alas! what says a witty Italian:—Bella femina cheride, vuol dir, borsa che pinge.

(n) The Rev. WILLIAM COXE, M. A. F. R. S. &c. &c. &c.
&c. &c. &c. &c. This author is a gentleman of learning, ability and information; but he is too prolix and too voluminous.
"Composuit octo Volumina, ineptè magis quam inoleganter."†
A writer

Then turn full freight from bleak Siberia's shore,
 And leave us just as knowing as before,
 Or bound with BARRINGTON in charming spell,
 Of Irish (v) trouts with gizzard stomachs tell ;

While

A writer of Travels should tell us what he has seen or heard himself, and not abridge histories of former times, and insert them in his book, or crowd it with biographical memoirs of deceased great men. Travels lose their name by this method of composition, and the publick complain with justice of the noble art of book-making. Mr. Coxe is a writer of great respectability, but my fear of his works passing into an example, has entreated this notice from me. I look upon it as a duty to the publick, and to the Commonwealth of Literature.

(v) This alludes to a very ingenious account transmitted to the Royal Society in the year 1774, of a strange fish called the Gillaroo Trout, with the gizzard-like stomach. "The first time, (says the honourable Mr. BARRINGTON) I ever happened to hear of this singular fish, was from an Irish Judge, who being on the Connaught Circuit, at Ballyrobe in the County of Mayo, expressed his incredulity with regard to their existence; but was obliged to pay the common Irish wager of a rump of beef, and a dozen of claret, on three or four being produced the next day from a neighbouring lake." The honourable and ingenious Mr. B. next proceeds to inform the Royal Society, that these gizzard-stomachs are often served up at table in Ireland, (which account this R. S. swallows with as much ease as it would the trout itself;) but supposing

While o'er the bulk of these transacted deeds Prim BLAGDEN pants, and damns (p) 'em as he reads.

AUTHOR.

supposing that some might be inclined to doubt, he adds,
"I could corroborate this fact, were it necessary, by the testimony
"of an Irish Archbishop." From an Irish Archbishop, by an easy transition, Mr. Barrington introduces an English Fish- monger, and declares with great solemnity, "I have shewn
"the stomach to Mr. EVERETT of Clare Market, a very intelli"gent fishmonger, who declares, that though he has cut up
"thousands of trouts and salmons, he never observed any "thing similar in the inside!" See (what are called) PHILO- SOPHICAL Transactions, 1774, page 116. Euge, bene, recte. I cannot help saying to Mr. B. on this occasion,

Propera stomachum lazare saginis,
Et tua servatum consume in sæcula rhombum.

Jux. S. iv. v. 67.

The reader will observe the rhetorical beauties in this short extract. Mr. B. darts from Ireland to England with in credible swiftness, from Ballynrobe to Clare-market; then come in long array, incredulous Irish judges, and rumps of beef, with dozens of claret, not tempered, I would swear, with water from any trout stream. Next appear Irish Archbishops, and INTELLIGENT English Fishmongers, (an epithet, by the bye, he denies the Archbishop) and all this waste of beautiful language and deep research is expended to convince the R. S. of the existence of gizzard-stomach'd trouts. Yet this R. S.
not only receives all this nonsensical ichthyological farrago,
but

A U T H O R.

Hear me yet once: (oh might these labours end,
And I to peace and privacy descend !)

C

Must

but selects it for publication BY THEIR COUNCIL. Of Mr. Barrington's talents and erudition I could speak with pleasure. But when such a learned man will write, and a Royal Philosophical Society will publish such stuff, for the edification of Europe, I think it proper to select this (from myriads of late similar pieces of stuff) for publick notice, that men of real learning and abilities (and such I acknowledge Mr. Barrington) may be rendered cautious how they commit themselves and the societies to which they belong. The R. S. has been, and might again be, of national utility and honour; it has my best wishes, and therefore I have written this note. (1794.)—All learned Societies must now look to their original principles, and consider well the characters of the candidates who are offered for their choice, as associates. If they will not, the Busts of Newton and of Boyle should be veiled. (1797.)

(p) It is by no means intimated that DOCTOR (I beg pardon SIR CHARLES Blagden (the Secretary to the R. S.) is given to profane swearing when he is tired on such occasions, but such works damn themselves. It cannot be otherwise, till THE COUNCIL will exert some discrimination, and refuse to shelter themselves under their foolish declaration of not answering, as a body, for the works they publish. Every society must be answerable for its own sense or nonsense, AS A BODY, unless they choose to inscribe, in large gold letters, over their meeting room, "CORPUS SINE PECTORE!" (1794.)

Must I, like Chatterton, (q) that varlet bright, (r)
 Rouse some new Rowley (s) from a steeple's height?
 Like Hardwicke, (t) shelves with gossip volumes clog,
 Of Baby Charles, and Jammy's slave and dog;

Of

(q) I draw my humble information of Chatterton from his life in the New Biographia Britannica, though I cannot compliment Dr. Gregory on such a meagre performance. They who have time may read Mr. Tyrwhit, Mr. Bryant, Dr. Milles, Mr. Thomas Warton, and all the tribe of major and of minor critics (of single and of double pinks, as Mr. Sheridan says in his CRITIC) on this important subject: but I have read something about vita summa brevis, &c. &c. and confine myself to the general view of this controversy in Mr. Mathias's candid and comprehensive Essay.

(r) "I am the veriest varlet that e'er chew'd," says Falstaff, in Henry IV. Part I. Act 2.—Mr. HORACE WALPOLE, now Lord Orford, did not however, seem to think it necessary that this varlet CHATTERTON should chew at all. See the Starvation Act, dated at STRAWBERRY HILL. Vide Gregory's Life as above, &c. (1796.)

(s) As to this strange subject, the worst that can be said of it is, magno conatu magnas nugas; but they are trifles rather pleasant and instructive. I am sure Dr. Milles proved a pleasant subject for that chief-d'œuvre the Archæological Epistle, written by Mr. Mason.

(t) See the Miscellaneous State Papers, published in 1773, by the late Lord HARDWICKE, in 2 vols, 4to. Letters from Baby

Of Lorkin's (v) diligence for lords' arrears,
With trumpery notes of long forgotten peers?

Shall I new anecdotes from darkness draw,
That Strawb'ry Horace on the Hill (w) ne'er saw,
With wire-wove (x) hot press'd paper's glossy glare
Blind all the wise, and make the stupid stare;

C 2

And

Baby Charles's dear Dad and Gossip, James the First, and his slave and dog, Steenie Buckingham, &c. &c. There are however some curious and valuable papers in the collection. The noble editor was a man of learning.

(v) MR. LORKIN doth use miraculous diligence about your "Lordship's arrears." State Papers, vol. 1. p. 631. N. B. It often requires miraculous diligence, even in these days, to get at one's arrears. See Mr. Pitt and the Lords of the Treasury, if you can get a sight of them. I never could.

(w) The Hon. Horace Walpole, now Lord Orford; the owner of the Gothic mansion called Strawberry Hill near Twickenham. (1796.)

(x) All books of all kinds are now advertised to be printed on a wire-wove paper and hot pressed, with cuts, down to the Philosophical Transactions, (the uniformity of which work is destroyed by this folly unworthy of such a society) and Major RENNELL's learned Memoir on Hindostan; as if the intention were, that they should be looked at and not read. As to the fury

And with some painting, or antique vignette
Intrance old BOYDELL's fond subscribing set?

Or must I, as a wit with learned air,
Like Doctor Dewlap, (y) to Tom Payne's (z) repair, Meet

fury for prints and cuts, the folly and rapacity for gain in some booksellers, have degraded many works of established fame, and subjected some learned editors to unmerited ridicule. I feel for the injury and injustice which a Gentleman who has well deserved from his profession, suffered on this occasion. It was a transaction shameful and unjustifiable. As to the wire-weavers or drawers of paper and hot-pressers, must we say to the public, in the indignant words of Apuleius, "Quousque frustra pascetis ignigenos istos?" (Apuleii Metamorph. l. 7 pag. 157. Ed. Bipont. 1788.) Surely this foolery must soon cease.

I wish every author who prints and publishes his own works on a wire-wove paper, glazed and hot pressed, would imitate the honesty of the late Sir William Chambers, Knight of the Polar star, who says, in a letter to Voltaire, which accompanied his wonderful book on Oriental Gardening; "It contains (says the knight) besides a great deal of nonsense, two very pretty prints by Bartolozzi." Europ. Mag. for Sept. 1793.—While this note was printing, I was informed that COKE UPON LYTTLETON with Hargrave's notes is advertizing to be published on a wire wove paper and hot pressed. This folly, by such a proceeding, must surely sign its own death-warrant. I wish to be sure some of our Statutes at Large could be a little wire-drawn and hot-pressed

Meet Cyril Jackson (a) and mild Cracherode, (b)
 'Mid literary gods myself a god:
 There make folks wonder at th' extent of genius
 In the Greek Aldus or the Dutch Frobenius,
 And for the edification of their souls,
 Quote pleasaunt sayings from The Shippe of Foles?
 Hold!

Not-pressed by a Committee of Parliamentary Printers and Compositors.

(y) Put for any portly Divine, né pour la digestion, as Bruyere would say. The reader will supply one to his fancy. But he must not imagine, that I mean mere London Divines, frequenters of routs, plays, operas, Bond-street and Kensington Gardens, or chatterers in booksellers' shops, as the representatives of the British Clergy, who, as a class of men, are in general distinguished for literature and philosophy, and for manners correspondent to their profession.

(z) Not that detestable fellow Tom Paine the Democrat, whom we all execrate, and who is now with or without a head in France, I hope in the late fashion of that country (in 1794)—but one of the best and honestest men living, the very respectable Mr. Thomas Payne Senior, to whom as a bookseller, learning is under considerable obligations. I mention this Tryphoemeritus with great satisfaction.

(a) The present Dean of Christ-church, Oxford, exemplary for his diligence and learning "in our University," as the Dean loves to talk.

Hold! cries Tom Payne, that margin let me measure,
 And rate the separate value of each treasure.
 Eager they gaze: "Well, Sirs, the feat is done;
 "Cracherode's Poëtæ Principes (c) have won:
 In silent exultation down he sits,
 'Mong well be-Chaucer'd Winkyn-Wordian wits.
 Or shall I thence by mock-appointment stop,
 And joke with Bryant at his Elmsly's shop:
 And hear it whisper'd, while I'm wondrous pliant,
 'Twas DOCTOR Dewlap spoke to Mister BRYANT. (d)

OCTAVIUS.

(b) The Reverend CLAYTON CRACHERODE, M. A. Student of Christ Church Oxford, and one of the Trustees of the British Museum. A rich, learned, and most amiable man (to use the words of the son of Sirach) "furnished with ability, living peaceably in his habitation." His library is allowed to be the choicest in old Greek and Latin authors, of any private collection in this country.

(c) The famous edition, by H. Stephens, of the principal Greek poets, called Poëtæ Græci Principes. All literary men, from the little Reverend Bibliopolist DR. GOSSET, well known at sales, to the humblest collector, understand this farce of margin measuring, and the profit of it. (See also P. of L. Dialogue 4.)

OCTAVIUS.

How just was he, who in this sapient age,
 When learning's varied cares the mind engage,
 Stood up self-taught, and in mankind's defence
 Pray'd for professors of plain common sense.
 But say, what think you of the tragic Stage? (dd)

AUTHOR.

No—you'll excuse me there, I know this age.
 What? from the French (e) Aristotelian school,
 Must I plan Tragedies by line and rule;
 To the high Gods address my first appeal,
 Then bid the press my hidden worth reveal,
 While

(d) When I name Mr. Bryant, it is a sufficient eulogy. But see more in the Second Part of this poem.

(dd) As to the modern Comedies of the day by Mr. Reynolds, and the rapid School, they are below criticism. Farce and O'Keefe have seized upon the stage. "The players and I, thank heaven, are no friends!"

(e) There are some deep critics who read Aristotle in French, and quote him in Greek.—I know not what to say now: the French have proscribed Corneille, Racine, &c.

While round my temples many a tendril plays
 Of owlish ivy with the Mæbian bays;
 And close in mournful pomp the tragic rear,
 Though Jephson (c) scarce can gain the publick ear?

OCTAVIUS.

Still these are works which lead to sure renown,
 In the lay habit or the sacred gown;
 Will stamp your credit at an easy price,
 Learn'd and ingenious, (d) or a Vir Clariss:

Take

(c) Jephson:—Author of Braganza, The Count of Narbonne, &c. My wish is,

Grande munus

Cecropio REPETAT cothurno.†

But no more dull Roman portraits in 4to.

(d) Any person who communicates even a single note to the modern editors of Shakspeare, is stiled the learned and ingenious Mr. two stars*: the title of Vir Clarissimus is appropriated to the commentators on the Greek and Roman classics, and often with the same propriety.

† Hor. Lib. 2. Od. 1. v. 11.

Take Markham's Armorie, (e) John Taylor's Sculler, (f)

Or Sir Giles Gooscap, (g) or proverbial Fuller ;

With

(e) The name of some few books of that vast system of coglionerie, or Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions, which is called forth to illustrate our old dramatick writers. It is high time that the reader of sense should see what may be called in the old language, "THE UNTRUSSING OF THESE HUMOROUS CRITICS," namely, the Commentators on Shakspeare, from George Steevens, Esq. downwards. The first chapter of Markham's Booke of Armorie is intituled, "The difference between Charles and Gentleman;" and it ends thus: "From the offspring of Gentlemanly Japhet came Abraham, Moses, Aaron and the Prophets, &c. &c.; also the King of the right line of Mary, of whom that only absolute Gentleman Jesus was born, gentleman by his mother Mary, Princesse of coat-armour, &c."—Reader, Mr. Steevens and Dr. Farmer will tell you all this is so, and QUOTED too, Hen. V. vol. ix. p. 441, edit, 1793; though you may begin with a staring doubt.

(f) John Taylor thus dedicates his Sculler; "To the whole Kennel of Antichrist's Hounds, Priests, Friars, Monks, and Jesuits, Mastiffs, Mongrels, Islands, and Bloodhounds, Bob-tail'd Tykes, &c. &c. &c."

(g) Old plays intituled, "Sir Giles Gooscap, Banks's Bay Horse in a trance, Pierce Pennyles's "Supplication to the Devil, Webster's White Devil, The Merry Devil of Edmonton, &c. &c. &c.; in short, toute la diablerie dramatique."

With Upton, Fabell, Dodypoll the nice,
Of Gibbe our cat, (b) white Devils or (hh) old Vice;
Then

(h) Of Gibbe our cat.—Falstaff says, “I am as melancholy as a GIBBE-CAT.” H. IV. p. 1. a. 1. sc. 2. On this the Commentators are right pleasant. Dr. Johnston begins, “A Gibbe cat means, I know not why, an old cat.” Dr. Percy informs us next, that a Gib-cat in Northamptonshire, means a He-cat, which in some parts of England is called a ram-cat, and in Shropshire a tup cat. Then follow other wise critics, and last of all appears Mr. Thomas Warton, who brings a train of authorities on this important question, shewing how Gib is short for Gilbert, and Tib for Tibert; how Jack is appropriated to a horse, and Tom to a pigeon; how Chaucer, in his Romaunt de la Rose, mentions Gibbe our Cat, to which Tib was synonymous, as it is at this day; how we read in Gammar Gurton's Needle (which is a right pleasant, witty and merry comedy, written by Mr. S. Master of Arts) viz. “Hath no man stolen her ducks, or gelded GIBBE her cat?” Upon which Mr. Warton very gravely observes, “the composure of a cat, is almost characteristic, and I know not, (see Dr. Johnston's words above) whether there is not a superior solemnity in the gravity of a HE-CAT.” Mr. Steevens says, “A Gib cat is a cat qualified for a seraglio, “for all animals so mutilated become drowsy or melancholy.” Mr. Warton and Mr. Steevens have left it a matter of doubt whether their own drowsiness and gravity and that of their brother-commentators was in consequence of &c. &c. &c. (See Abul-Pharagi's great Babylonish chapter, “De Semiramide, “Sapientibus ejus et Eunuchis, &c.”) To be sure they do sympathize with Gammar Gurton, and her poor unfortunate Gibbe-cat. For my own part, I never can, nor (if I could)

Then lead your readers many a precious dance,
 Cap'ring with Banks's 'Bay Horse in a Trance':
 The Housewife's Jewel read with care exact,
 Wit from old Books of Cookery (i) extract:

Thoughts

could) would I decide this momentous question; and will only add, (without being in the least melancholy or drowsy myself) in the words of an author who imparted a manly vigour to the Roman muse, "Propria quæ maribus tribuuntur, mascula dicas."

(hh) OLD VICE was a personage very frequent in our ancient comedies. I beg leave to present my reader with a part, (and a very short part) of Mr. Upton's account of him, "Old Vice was a droll character in our old plays, accoutered " with a long coat, a cap, a pair of asses ears, and a dagger of " lath. This buffoon character was used to make fun with the " devil, and he had several trite expressions, as, "I'll be with " you in a trice—ah-hah, boy, are you there? &c." and this was " great entertainment to the audience to see their old enemy so " belaboured in effigy. Vice seems to be an abbreviation of " Vice-devil, AS Vice-roy, Vice-doge, &c. and THEREFORE call- " ed very properly THE VICE. He makes very free with his " master like most other Vice-roys or Prime-ministers, so THAT " he is the devil's Vice or Prime-minister. And, (adds Mr. " Upton) this it is which makes him so saucy." Extract from Mr. Upton's note on Rich. III. act. iii. sc. 1. N. B. I make no doubt but the reader will observe the beautiful compliment to monarchy and aristocracy most logically deduced. This personage has been much patronized of late in France, where every species of VICE, old or new, is exercised and used without any abbreviation, to speak with Mr. Upton.

Thoughts to stew'd prunes and kissing comfits suit,
Or the potatoe, (k) vigour stirring root :

And

(i) Book of Cookery—I am afraid that these extracts will prove what Decker, in his Gul's Hornbook, calls, "The sinful Suburbs of Cookery." Mr. Collins, (in his POTATOE-note, at the end of Troilus and Cressida) extracts without a blush, from the Good Housewife's Jewel, a receipt with all the ingredients AT FULL LENGTH, "To make a tart that is a COURAGE to a man or woman." And this is but a specimen,

Non more probo; cum carmina lumbum

Intrant, et tremulo scalpuntur ubi intima versu.†

(k) The commentators on Shakespare are peculiarly, and even zealously, studious in minutely explaining and declaring all the various modes and receipts which the age of the Virgin Queen afforded or recommended for the service of the Queen of love and soft desire. Whole pages are absolutely filled with venereal provocatives, with the power of kissing comfits; stewed prunes, the virtues of potatoes, eringo-root, &c. &c. Must these comments be stiled the "Pauca suo Gallo quæ vel legat ipsa Lycoris?"† I sometimes doubt what book I have in my hand. These fair editors give all they can, nor let us dream the rest.

After a very long note no stewed prunes, by Mr. Steevens,* vol. v. p. 375, edit. 1778, and vol. viii. p. 529, Edit. 1793, (which

† Pers. Sat. 1. v. 20

† Virg. Ecl. 10. 2.

* Mr. Steevens in his advertisement to the edition of Shakspeare in 1778, seems to have had his scruples on the subject of these pious prunes and virtuous bulbs; "Such, (says he) as would be acquainted with the propriety of Falstaff's allusion to stewed prunes should not be disgusted at a multitude of instances, &c. &c. &c."—N. B. some folks are very sagacious, and cry out first; but it will not do,

And then returning from that antique waste,
 Be hail'd by Parr, (1) THE GUIDE OF PUBLIC TASTE.
 AUTHOR.

" (which see,) The Reverend DOCTOR Farmer adds, very " properly, that Mr. Steevens has so fully discussed the subject " of stewed prunes, that one can add nothing but the price;"
 (Right:—Hoc defuit unum FABRICIO:† Juv. S. 4.) and therefore, adds the Reverend DOCTOR, in a piece called Banks's Bay Horse in a Trance, 1595, "we have a stock of wenches set " up with their stewed prunes, NINE for a tester." At other times these subjects are explained in the learned languages, for the use of scholars, as in vol. iv. p. 211, edit. 1778, and in
 vol. iv. p. 80, edit. 1793, by Mr. Steevens. "Urticæ ma-
 "rinæ omnes pruritus quendam movent, et acrimonia sua
 "VENEREM sopitam et extinctam excitant." Johnston. Hist.
 Nat. de Exang. Aq. p. 56. I protest I sometimes think these reverend or ir-reverend commentators are about to change sexes, or have done so, and set up for (what Milton in his Apology for Smectymnus calls) "Old Prelatesses with all their young Corinthian Laity." I wonder we have never yet had The Beauties of Mr. Steevens, of The Reverend DOCTOR Farmer, of Mr. Collins, (the potatoe-critic,) &c. &c. as a convenient manual for young or old men, who would be young. Mr. Collins has given the public four pages in 8vo. small print, on the astonishing virtues of POTATOES, (a tempest of provocation) printed by themselves at the end of Troilus and Cressida. This useful note would have been placed with better grace at the end of "Love's Labour Lost."—It is indeed matter of great and offensive scandal to obtrude such refuse and filth upon THIS NATION, and upon ALL the countries in the East and West who read Shak-speare's works. It is highly injurious to make Shakspeare the vehicle

† Fabricius, i. e. George Steevens, Esquire!

A U T H O R.

What!—must I enter the dramatic course ;
 Burst through the countless squadrons foot and horse?

All

vehicle of so much obscene trash, raked together from old plays, old cookery books and trumpery novels. But, I am told, the poet must be illustrated. In these particulars, Mr. Steevens, Dr. Farmer, Mr. Collins, and Mr. (I know not whom) may as well illustrate the latter part of the fourth book of Lucretius. The corruptions of our nature are the most mortifying comment. They need neither incitement nor illustration. Whoever considers, seriously or politically, the dominion of lust and lewdness, and the wide-wasting desolation and irreversible misery which they throw among the defenceless and much-suffering sex, left to destitution, and disease, and poverty, and despair, and contempt, and barren sorrow; will be cautious how he adds even one unnecessary or heedless incitement to this overbearing fury. A man of sense, if not of morality, in remarking on all such passages as I have noted, and many others, would content himself with saying, "This or that passage contains an indecent allusion not uncommon in the novels or plays of the time;" or at least would be satisfied with a single instance to shew it. Whatever is more than this, cometh from a source which is not good. At present, there really should be an expurgatory index to THE BEST edition, (and in many respects it is the best) of Shakspeare, before it is put into the hands of ladies and the younger part of the readers of Shakspeare. I believe there is not one reflecting scholar in this learned kingdom, who will not join in this and in the following criticisms on the present subject, whether the criticisms are severe, jocular, or indignant.

Carminaque Aonidum, JUSTAMQUE probaverat IRAM!†

† Ovid. Metam. L. 6. v. 2.

All that for Massinger and Beaumont fight,
But leave their authors in a wretched plight;
From

(1) The Reverend Doctor Parr, in his dedication of "Tracts of Warburton and a Warburtonian, &c." (reprinted in 1789) note 8. p. 150, has most kindly pointed out to such undiscerning persons as myself, that "Malone, Reed, Farmer, and Tyrwhitt, have come forward as THE GUIDES OF THE "PUBLICK TASTE." To be sure he has added, "Mr. Steevens, "the two Wartons, BURKE, and in his critical capacity. Dr. "JOHNSON." But even in this latter part I must remark a strange coalition. With the names of Burke and Johnson who can place a third modern in the same rank? Of Mr. Steevens's classical erudition and ingenuity much might be said; yet all which he has acknowledged as his own writing, consists of notes on Shakspeare. Every one must regret that the History of English Poetry was left unfinished by its lamented and deeply learned author: and as to his brother Joseph's pleasant Common-Place Book on Pope, it was always amusing to me. But when the title of Guides of the Public Taste is given to Malone, Reed, Farmer, (and Tyrwhitt,†) who are note-makers alone by profession, I find myself constrained to look into my English Dictionary for the meaning of the words guide and taste.

I have selected this passage from the splendid dedication of these Warburtonian Tracts, in which a man, in the vigour of his faculties and strength, has not thought it unbecoming his

† I have often wondered how so deeply learned a scholar as Mr. TYRWHITT ever suffered himself to be enrolled with these note-makers on Shakspeare. But the leader of them has a tongue to flatter and wheedle. Homer explains it best. Παρφασι, ἢ τ' ἐκλεψὶ ποὺ πικρὰ περ φρονιόντων. In this manner the name of SAMUEL JOHNSON was inseparably associated with that of GEORGE STEEVENS.

From CAPELL steal, yet never own the theft,
 And then desert (m) him of his store bereft.
 Oh injur'd Patron of our noble bard!

CAPELL, (n) receive this tribute of regard,

And
 his character to attack, like a puny whipster, the established dignity of departed excellence; and with unbridled licence of language has endeavoured to invade the retreat and the repose of a most learned and venerable prelate, † now in full age and hoary holiness. I speak with feeling of such a conduct, and I speak with the feelings of a man; for what is a mere scholar and a quoter of Greek, when he forgets the man? I trust Dr.
 Parr has severely felt the unmeaning vanity and silly cruelty of calling forth again to publick notice these tracts, which their authors long wished to give up to oblivion. Leland, and the great and truly liberal Jortin, might have been as ably defended at another time and in another place. I cannot be repaid for such indecent conduct by the amusement I receive, (to use Dr. Parr's own words) "from the lucky and lucid intervals be- tween the paroxysm of (Dr. Parr's) polemic phrenzy; from all the laughable and all the loathsome singularities which float upon the surface of his (Dr. Parr's) diction; nor can I hang with fondness and admiration over the crowded yet clear and luminous galaxies of imagery diffused through (Dr. Parr's) works p.
 "151," &c. &c. But if I should quote any more of such words, the reader would take the Doctor's Greek for English and his English for Greek, and be apt to cry out with honest old Doyley, in the farce of Who's the Dupe? (which I am not, but the Doctor may know who is) "I'll be curs'd if this is English."
 Indeed I have no more time or place to allot in this First Part of my poem to Dr. Parr.—I refer my reader to the Third part, in which the Doctor makes a more publick and distinguished entry.

† Dr. HURD, Bishop of Worcester.

And may this feeble verse to life and light
Call forth thy name, and vindicate thy right.

Must I for SHAKSPEARE no compassion feel,
Almost eat up by COMMENTATING (o) zeal?

D

On

(m) There are men now in great vogue who will feel the force of these two lines.

(n) Mr. CAPEL, the Editor, I call him the Patron† of SHAKSPEARE. This gentleman was of a singular turn of mind, perhaps a little too minute, but of a curiosity unbounded and insatiable. They who are acquainted with his critical writings on Shakspeare, and his accurate researches into this species of antiquity, and who have considered and estimated his edition of the poet, will not scruple with me to pronounce him, The Father of all legitimate Commentary on Shakspeare. To this gentleman's intimacy, and to the knowledge of his most learned investigations, were admitted men whom I forbear to name. But mark the consequence. His edition was condemned, or I should rather say, damned by those, who in the poet's own words,

"To his unguarded nest, like weasel critics,

Came sneaking, and so suck'd his princely eggs."†

And when the SCHOOL of SHAKSPEARE in 3 vols. 4to, was published (alas! after his death) we were told forsooth, that we had nothing to learn on the subject. Indeed!—I am pleased however, to see that Mr. Capell's Preface is admitted into the new

† The ἡ Προδότης.

† Hen 5. Act 1. Sc. 2.

On Avon's banks I heard ACTÆON (p) mourn;
By fell Black Letter Dogs in pieces torn;

Dogs

new edition of Shakspeare, in FIFTEEN volumes. It will not be too much to hope for an edition in Fifty volumes quarto, printed on a wire-wave paper, glazed, and hot-pressed.

(o) I hope the reader will not be displeased with a short observation on this subject.—SHAKSPEARE was born in the year 1564, and died on the 23d of April in 1616, on his birthday. It was not until full seven years after his death that his plays were first collected and published together in folio, in the year 1623, by two of his principal friends in the company of comedians, Hemminga and Condel. They likewise corrected a second edition in 1632. It may seem strange to us, but it is true, that no other edition of his works was attempted till eighty-two years after that time, when in the year 1714 a third edition was published by Mr. Rowe with very few, if any, corrections. Pope, Theobald, Hammer, Warburton, Capell, Johnson, Steevens, and Malone, have since that time given new editions. Mr. Steevens, in the year 1766, published a particular edition in 4 volumes in 8vo. of all the plays which were printed in 4to. in Shakspeare's life-time or before the Restoration. It is printed verbatim from the old copies, and is curious and valuable.

Mr.

† When this note was written (in 1794) Mr. Ireland had not discovered the Shakspeare manuscripts, many of which he has since published by subscription. I believe Mr. Malone's Enquiry, (in 1796) as well as common sense, has taught us what to think of the originality of the Plays and MSS given to Mr. Ireland by his Son.—This subject is considered in the Second Part of "The Pursuits of Literature."

Dogs that from Gothic kennels eager start
All well broke-in by Coney-catching (q) Art,

D 2

So

Mr. Steevens asserts unequivocally, that "no proof can be given that the poet superintended the publication of any one of these himself." Pref. vol. i. p. 14. If this be true, as I believe, what can any editor arrogate to himself concerning the genuine text of this great poet? I am not speaking of conjectural criticism, and of an accurate revision of the punctuation, which is of real consequence, but of the actual words themselves as written by Shakspeare. The original players, Hemminge and Condell, were in possession of the only MSS. which were extant at the very time when the plays were first acted; and it is probable that the play-house manuscript copy was the only one to which they could refer, and no MSS. whatsoever existed after that time. Shakspeare appears wholly to have neglected or despised reputation in succeeding ages. It is for this age to amuse itself with schools and galleries, and without blame, in my opinion.

(p) Videre CANES; primusque Melampus,

Pamphagus et Dorceus, velox cum fratre Lycisca,

Ichnobatesque sagax, et villis Asbolus atris,

Nebrophonosque valens, et trux cum Lælapæ Theron,

Labros et Agriodos, et acutæ vocis Hylæstor,

Quosque referre mora est; ea turba CUPIDINE PRÆDA

Quà via difficilis, quàque est via nulla, sequuntur.

Heu famulos fugit IPSE suos: clamare libebat,

ACTÆON Ego sum; DOMINUM cognoscite VESTRUM:

Vellet abesse quidem—sed ADEST. Ovid. Metam. lib. ii.

N. B. It is conceived that this canine metamorphosis of the Commentators on Shakspeare, will be received in a pleasant point of view without offence; for I must speak it to the credit of our English black letter dogs, that upon the whole there is more harmony

So tender to the Paphian notes they move,
And seem as they were only born for (99) love.

Hark,

harmony among them, (a few cases excepted) than among the dogs that worried Greek and Roman authors in former times. I surely may be excused for this caninity, if Mr. Bryant himself has been allowed to declare, without censure, that Kyn signify O lupus; though certainly the Hierarchy are infinitely indebted to him for the discovery. Bryant's Mythol. vol. i. p. 329, &c.

(9) The singularity of this term (which is the only reason of my introducing it) called for my attention; as no treatises or farces, or whatever they may be, are more appealed to by the commentators than "Greene's Art of Coney-catching;" "Greene's Ground work of Coney-catching;" "Greene's Defiance of Coney-catching;" "Greene's Disputation between a He Coney-Catther and a She Coney-Catcher." As my poor library will not afford these valuable books, I profess myself still ignorant of this ancient art of Coney-Catching, and therefore am by no means fit for a commentator; yet the reader may perhaps think me fit for writing a note or two upon these "SNAPPERS UP OF UNCONSIDERED TRIFLES." (Wint. Tale, A. 4. sc. 1.)—I do not agree with Mr. Steevens that Coney-catching means the art of picking pockets; (see his note on the words "Silly Cheat," vol. iv. p. 368, ed. 1778)—unless there is any pleasant allusion, by anticipation, to some late editions of Shakspeare. My poor pockets cannot keep up with these rising demands upon them. SIX POUNDS FIFTEEN SHILLINGS!! for the last edition of Shakspeare, and without any binding! I cry you mercy, my good Master Steevens; think of us poor poets.

(99) "They of love and love's disport

Take LARGEly, of their mutual guilt the seal." Milt. P. I. See the Comments on Shakspeare, as above, and passim though the whole edition.

Hark, JOHNSON (r) smacks his lash; loud sounds the Mounted in rear see SPREVE'S Whipper-in, [din!
Rich with the spoils of learning's Black domain,
And guide supreme o'er all the tainted plain.

Lo! first Melampus (s) FARMER deftly springs, (Walter de Mapes (r) his fire) the welkin rings:

Stout

(r) SAMUEL JOHNSON, L. L. D. The reader must know enough of this Huntsman, his green velvet cap, and brown brass buttoned coat, and his churlish chiding of every hound that came near him, &c. &c. at least it is not Jemmy Boswell's fault if he does not.—Johnson and Boswell; ΑΥΤΟΙ ΚΑΙ ΟΣΑΝΟΥΝΤΑ
But now we must all regret the loss of the cheerful, the pleasant and inimitable Biographer of his illustrious friend.

Dr. Johnson's comments on Shakspeare are never sullied and contaminated with minute explications of indecent passages:

He bears no token of those sable streams,

But mounts far off among the swans of Thames. †

In whatever Dr. Johnson undertook, it was his determined purpose to rectify the heart, to purify the passions, to give ardour to virtue and confidence to truth.

(s) Melampus signifies a dog with black feet. He is supposed to have run over the town and county of Leicester, but never could be persuaded to give any account of it. †—This dog scented

† Pope Danc. L. 2. v. 297.

† I lament that Dr. Farmer never published his intended HISTORY OF LEICESTER. I lament it, but I do not reprobate the Doctor, as he behaved in a gentlemanly manner when he declined prosecuting that work, which is a real loss to the antiquary and the lover of topography.

Stout Gloucester (u) mark in Pamphagus (v) ad-
Who never stood aghast in speechless trance; [vance,
The sage Ichnobates (w) see TYAWHITT limp;
MALONE Hylactor (x) bounds, a clear-voic'd imp;

Nor
scented out the Learning of Shakspeare with true and original sagacity, and absolutely unkennelled it. This is his proper praise. Mr. Steevens says, "Could a perfect and decisive edi"tion of Shakspeare be produced, it were to be expected ONLY
" (though we fear in vain) from the hand of Dr. FARMER,
" whose MORE SERIOUS AVOCATIONS forbid HIM to undertake
" what, &c. &c." See Advert. by Mr. Steevens to Shakspeare, Edit. 1793, p. II. Such gravity of compliments between two editors reminds me of what Shakspeare calls, "THE ENCOUN-"TER OF TWO DOG APES."

(c) Walter de Mapes was the jovial archdeacon of Oxford, the Anacreon of the eleventh century. "A decent priest where "monks were the gods,†" and author of the divine ode, beginning:

"Mihi sit propositum in tabernâ mori;
Vinum sit appositum morientis ori,
Ut dicant, cum venerint angelorum chori,
Deus sit propitius huic Potatori!" &c.

(u) Stout Gloucester.—Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester.— See Gray's Bard. "Stout Gloucester stood aghast in speechless trance." Stanza 1.

(v) Pamphagus—signifies a dog of a most voracious appetite, who snaps at and devours every thing digestible or indigestible.

† Dunciad B. 3. 208.

† Hor. A. P. v. 228.

Nor can I pass Lycisca MONTAGUE, (y)

Her yelp though feeble, and her sandals blue;

Asbolus

ble. They who are acquainted with the Divine Legation, &c. &c. well know the nature of Warburton's literary appetite, and the danger of hunting in the same field with him. With all his eccentricities this was a noble dog, and there is not one of the true breed left worthy of the progenitor, though there are a few mongrels.

(w) Ichnobates means a dog who tracks out the game before him. No one was more diligent than this dog, yet he frequently went upon a wrong scent; but would never suffer the huntsman to call him off, especially in the neighbourhood of Canterbury and Bristol.—If I were again to metamorphose these hounds into men, I should lament the application of Mr. Tyrwhitt's learning and sagacity. "Illum pro literato plerique laudandum duxerunt, quum ille, naniis quibusdam anilibus occupatus, inter Milesias Punicas APULEII sui et ludicra literaria confescesceret." (Vid. Julium Capitolinum in Vita Clodii Albini ad Constantium Augustum;) I will however say, as to my own part, Illum pro literato laudandum semper duxi, but with a reserve as to the application of his learning. I wish this Ichnobates had been utilium sagax rerum.

(x) Hylaëtor means a dog with a clear and strong voice. One would think that this dog was one of Canidia's breed, which called from the sepulchre the actual remains of the dead to enchant and stupify the living. This dog has been scratching up the earth about Doctors Commons, and has torn up all the Wills of the actors who lived in Shakspeare's time, and carried them in his mouth to the printer of a late edition of that author.—

But

Asbolus (z) HAWKINS, a grim shaggy hound,
In Music growls, and beats the bushes round; (a)
Then FORSON view Nebrophonos (b) the shrewd, (c)
Yet foaming with th' Archdeacon's (d) critic blood;

See

But when I speak of rational men, it passes the bounds of all sagacity to divine, by what species of refined absurdity the Wills and Testaments of Actors could be raked up and published to illustrate Shakspeare. (See Malone's Shakspeare, vol. ii. p. 186, &c. &c. &c. and in the 2d vol. of the edit. of Shakspeare, in 1793.) A critick for such an ingenious invention should be presented with the altum Sagana caliendrum, which would not easily fall from his head.—But Mr. M. has redeemed this piece of folly by many valuable literary excellencies.

(y) See her Essay on Shakspeare, chiefly against the French criticks. A very pretty Essay, and a great many very pretty things have been said about it, which I shall not contradict. ‘Dives agris, dives positus in fœnore nummis,’ is a verse which has always filled a house with sincere admirers, without any flattery. N. B. I must observe for the information of posterity, that the meeting of the femle Literata at Mrs. Montague's house in Portman Square, was stiled “the Blue Stocking Club.”

“Fortunata la Calza azzurra e' d'oro,

“Si grata a Febo, e al fante Aonio coro!”

Ariosto.

(z) Asbolus signifies a dog of a swarthy complexion.

(a) Beats the bushes round.—Descriptive of Sir John Hawkins's History of Music; in which, however there is much original and valuable information.

See Dorceus † WHITER o'er the learned soil,
 Brisk, though at fault, with new associates toil;
 In Theron's (e) form, mark RITSON next contend, Fierce, meagre, pale, no commentator's (f) friend:

Tom

(b) Nebrophenor signifies a dog that kills the fawns and deer, and so in truth it is;

Archdeacons, rats, and such small deer,
 Have been DICK's food for many a year.
 And, as Lear says, "I'll take a word with this same LEARN-"ED THEBAN;" my learned Master Richard Porson: but he loves no titles! It would be better if he did.

(c)—Mr. Malone says, the word shrewd means acute, or intelligent; Mr. Steevens says, it is bitter or severe. Shakspeare.
 Ed. 1793, vol. vi. p. 430. Reader, you may chuse, or rather combine the terms.

(d) The reader may be surpris'd to find any theological writings in this part; but Mr. Steevens's ingenuity has contrived

(†) Dorceus, signifies, in my opinion, a dog of a sharp sight, apt to see what nobody else can in a large field. Some derive it from Δορῆς, zapra, quasi per saltum, which I reject.— See Mr. Whiter's Commentaries on Shakspeare, on a new principle, &c. published in 1794. This is certainly a learned dog. He is out of the actual chace; but might, with great propriety, join the pack on a future day: or in plain words, when a new edition of Shakspeare is printed, there should be a selection of notes from his book. His criticism on the second Eclogue of the Poems ascribed to Rowley, (truly or falsely) in point of ingenuity and illustrative learning has never been surpassed. Cuicunque veterum fortiter opposuerim.

Tom WARTON last, Agriodos (g) acute,
With Labros PERCY (h) barks in close pursuit :

Hot

trived to press Mr. Professor Porson's letters to Mr. Archdeacon Travis into the service of Shakspeare; and by such ingenuity who or what may not be pressed into it? This is quite a sufficient excuse for me, or rather a full justification of my allusion to them. See Tempest, vol. iii. p. 68. Steev. Edit. 1793. Mr. Steevens styles Mr. P. "an excellent scholar and a perspicacious critic;" in which I most cordially agree. But, if I am rightly informed, he thanks neither Mr. Steevens, nor me, nor Dr. Parr, nor Dr. Burney the schoolmaster, nor any other Doctor or Mister in this country, for any opinion they may entertain or express of him or his works. He neither gives nor takes. I find the Archdeacon has re-published his work, and in my opinion has very wisely declined being led any more by DICK and the foul fiend "through fire, and through flame" "and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire, and having knives" "laid under his pillow." But the Archdeacon has had the weakness to print his work on a wire-wove paper and hot-pressed. Had I been the Archdeacon, I should have been contented with the hot-pressing by Mr. Porson—hot indeed, his-sing-hot!—This controversy has no good end; learning is good, and theology is good; but there is something better, H Ayan. There is also a writer who says Karavoucharas ΕΛΕΟΕ ηρωας. Is it not so, Mr. Professor?

(e) Theron signifies a dog of innate ferocity.

(f) Poor Tom Warton could have told a piteous tale, how his historick body was punched full of deadly holes by this literary Richard III. —Dr. Percy could make a lamentation or two in some ancient ditty, in a fit or canto. Mr. Malone probably has felt a gripe rather strong. The antiquaries—but they have spoken

Hot was the chace; I left it out of breath;
I wish'd not to be in at SHAKSPEARE'S death.

OCTAVIUS.

spoken for themselves. The Antiquarian Society is amiable and harmless, and from what I have seen, their publications resemble the subjects of them, Namque AMENNA regna. Who could wish to disturb such repose?

(g) Agriodon signifies a dog with a sharp tooth.—I always regret the loss of Thomas Warton: in his various writings he is amusing, instructive, pleasant, learned and poetical. The loss of the last Volume of the History of English Poetry, must for ever be lamented. I despair of any Artist able to finish such a work, with so few imperfections, and with such various erudition. Tom Warton had rather a kindly affection for the jovial memory of Archdeacon Walter de Mapes of the 11th century, mentioned for his drinking ode in a former note. Mr. W. tells us, (with a warm panegyrick) in his 2d Differt. to the Hist. of E. P. that this divine Anacreon wrote also a Latin ode in favour of married priests, concluding with these spirited lines:

Ecce pro Clericis multum allegavi;

Nec non pro Presbyteris multum comprobavi;

Pater noster pro me quoniam peccavi,

Dicat quisque Presbyter cum sua SUAVI!

I quote this for my own sake, quoniam peccavi, and am inclined to hope that every Presbyter cum sua SUAVI, will be as kind to the author of this poem on THE PURSUITS OF LITERATURE. Requiescat!

† Nam possunt vitio nigrum præfigure Theta. Pers. Sat. 4. v. 13. A beautiful phrase for black-balling a man in any club or society.

OCTAVIUS.

Here yet awhile (1) these honest labours close,
And leave indignant Genius to repose.

(15) Labros signifies a dog that opens continually.—But I forget—Si quis dixerit EPISCOPUM aliquā infirmitate laborare, anathema esto.—And thus I take my leave of the whole Black-letter KENNEL, with all their wit, and all their follies, and all their merry humours; and they may both now and hereafter, unawed by their great Huntsman who is no more, and most probably unmolested by me, continue to bark and growl, and snap, and quarrel, and tease one another, till there remains not a critical offal for which they may contend. Et velut absentem certatim ACTEONA elament. §—Finally, as to this famous Edition of Shakspeare by George Steevens Esq. and the whole Black-letter Kennell, I must pronounce its great Eulogium, as it is beautifully conceived and expressed in the words of a master of the most finished Latinity of the Augustan age. “Hic Liber est conglutimatus ex tam multis libris, quot unus pinguis Cocus; Over, boves, fues, græves, anseres, passeræ, &c. &c. &c. coquere, aut unus fumosus. Calefactor centum magna hypocausta ex illis calefacere possit!!” Epist. Obscurorum Virorum!

(i) “Hæc SAT ERIT, DIVÆ, vestrum cecinisse Poetam.” So said Virgil, † and so says my friend OCTAVIUS, to whose judgment I submit, and write this note in conclusion for the present, that I may offer and recommend to the consideration of all Poets, Orators, and Writers, sacred and profane, a sentence from SWIFT, which I could wish to see engraven in letters of gold, as an everlasting admonition. It is this: “To say the truth, no part of knowledge seems to be in fewer hands, than that of discerning WHEN TO HAVE DONE.”

§ Ovid. Met. Lib. 3.

† Virg. Eccl. 10. v. 76.

(63)

PREFACE

THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE SECOND.

Εὐ' ἀβλήτος καὶ αὐτάτος οἷε' χάλκι,
ΔΙΝΕΤΩ ΚΑΤΑ ΜΕΣΣΕΩΝ, ἀγοὶ δὲ μὲ Παλλὰς Ἀθηνῆ
Χειρὸς ἰλυσ', αὐτὰρ βάλων ἀπαιρυκτοὶ ἔργῃ.

Hom. Il. 4. v. 540.

There let dwell (1) their honest labors' toil,
And leave indignant Genius to repose.

Let Father, Mother, and I all contribute - but I will be the main one. I will be the main one.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF STAFF
WASHINGTON, D.C.

FOR SUITS OF LITERATURE

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

THE SECOND

1

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

1. The first of these is the fact that the the second is the fact that the 1940

10-11-68

100

[Faint, illegible text]

AND WILL BE FOR THE

APPENDIX B

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

[Faint, illegible handwritten notes]

1945

100

P R E F A C E

TO THE SECOND DIALOGUE†

OF THE

P U R S U I T S O F L I T E R A T U R E.

TWO years have passed since I published “The First Part of the Pursuits of Literature.” I now offer a continuation of it to the attention of those persons who may feel themselves interested in such researches; the subjects of which indeed, in their event, are important to us all. What I observed of the First Part, I observe of this, and the following Parts, “that no imitation is intended of any former writer or of any former poem.” That it will attract some attention in some places, I am confident; but it will be idle to make any conjecture as to the author. He is, and will be concealed upon motives very different from the apprehension of any private resentment. I dissuade every person person from flippant and random application of any supposed name; it is as unjust, as it is absurd. "Flebit et insignis tota cantabitur urbe,"† was said of old. I do not say this, but I recommend to every gentleman and lady of eminent sagacity and curiosity to remember, that there is a darkness which may be felt.

† First printed in May 1796.

As to the subject of SATIRE in general, I will add a few words, as they are not wholly unimportant, and as they explain my own ideas. All reprehension of vice, or of folly, or of any moral depravity, must cease at once, if it is required of the author of that reprehension, that he be blameless himself in the strict, or indeed in any, sense of that word. But if the enumeration of evils, wickedness, folly, extravagance, abuse of knowledge in theory or practice, and a censure of such actions and of such opinions, be considered as the production of a mind bad, reprehensible, and unquiet in itself, I fear, that few philosophers are exempt from the charge. In my opinion, the Philosopher himself is a satirist, speaking to the world at large, without a specific reference to any nation. The Satirist, (in the general acceptance of the word) is a writer in poetry or in prose, who addresses himself to a peculiar part of the world, generally to his own countrymen, and calling them to a view of their faults, follies, or vices, which are destructive of society, of government, of good manners, or of good literature. The philosophick Satirist effects his purpose by appealing to man and his nature; the modern poet, supposing and acknowledging the truth of these original

† Hor. Lib. 2. S. 1. v. 45.

original principles, argues virtually from them, but directs his attention to existing persons, circumstances, opinions, and books, in his own times. He illustrates his doctrine by that forcible appeal, assisted by learning, wit and ridicule; with an honest endeavour to uphold the common cause of wisdom, of truth, and of virtue, without which criticism is malignity, and satire is scandal.

Yet, however excellent, the work of any Satirist is transitory as to its immediate subject. But as it is a view of life designed (a) to be presented to other times, as well as to those in which it is written, the necessity of an author's furnishing Notes to his own compositions (b) is evident, to clear up for himself such difficulties as the lapse of time, (and indeed of a very little time) would unavoidably create. This is a privilege and a liberty which was denied to the ancients, which Dryden rejected, and Pope partially adopted.

After these few observations, (which I thought necessary or I would not have written them) I offer this continuation of the Poem to my readers, not without the spirit of a writer who has endeavoured well. I will also, upon reflection, add the words of A MAN, not to be named on such an occasion.

E

"I do

(a) I refer the reader to Dean Swift's dedication to Prince Posterity.

(b) "The notes I wish to be very large in what relates to the persons concerned: for I have long observed, that twenty miles from London, nobody understands hints, initial letters, or town facts and passages, and in a few years not even those who live in London." Swift's advice to Pope. July 16, 1728.—Pope's Works, Vol. 9. p. 117. Warburton's edition, 8vo.

"I do not look to be asked, wherefore I wrote this book; it "being no difficulty to answer, that I did it to those ends,
 "which the best men propose to themselves when they write."

T H E
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE SECOND. (*)

A U T H O R,

ALL hail to Cestria, and her mitred lord! (a)
 And may the muse in lasting strains record
 That lawn'd Endymion of a happier age;
 Who, wild with rapture and empiric rage,
 On bold aspiring pinion could presume
 To journey through the vast æthereal gloom;
 Who, tir'd of earth and dreams of gowned rest,
 Sunk in the elysium of his Cynthia's breast!

E 2

But

(*) First published in May, 1796.

(a) John Wilkins, Bishop of Chester in the last century, wrote a celebrated "Discourse concerning the possibility of a passage to the moon." The bishop is, as all bishops shou'd be, very serious on the occasion; and as an effectual change of air and climate is recommended in so many diseases, I approve most of all of Doctor Wilkins's prescription of a flying chariot;

But ah, for us those wizard wonders cease :
 In war, death, pestilence, or dang'rous peace,
 Condemn'd to groan in this disorder'd hour,
 Victors and victims of th' unhallow'd pow'r,
 That bids the western world or rouse or weep,
 O'erwhelm'd beneath the formidable deep.

O C T A V I U S.

Of France (aa) enough : go bend before that tomb,
 Where other palms and other laurels bloom,

Where

chariot ; and instead of raving or storming, or fretting about the accidents of life, to set off directly—for the moon. This method of translation, (a happy thought in a bishop,) would at once supersede the necessity of suicide, prisons or revolutions, when people are out of humour. Besides Dr. Herschell has told us what an agreeable place the moon is. I believe he has descried the surveyors of the lunar turnpike roads, and has actually seen their St. Paul's Church, and some of the Selenites in a solemn procession. This cannot much surprise us, as he has nearly discovered what the sun is made of, which lies a little further from us.—Upon my word, Philosophy is a very pleasant thing and has various uses ; one of the best is, it makes us laugh sometimes.

(aa) I can mention no lines so expressive of the state of France, as the following, adapted from Boileau.

“ Dechirans à l'envi leur propre République,

Lions contre Lions, parens contre parens,

Combattent follement POUR LE CHOIX DES TYRANS !”

Sat. 8. v. 132. (1796.)

Where Maro sleeps; or in the Sabine shade,
 Or in severe Aquinum's inmost glade,
 Fast by Volterra's (a) dark Etrurian grove,
 With Boileau's (b) art and Dryden's rapture rove.
 Be wise betimes, and in resistless prose
 Leave Burke ALONE to thunder on our foes.
 Let Wakefield (c) rant, and pallid Thelwall bawl,
 Lords of misrule in Anarchy's wild hall,

Such

(a) Juvenal was born at Aquinum, and Persius at Volterra, in Italy.

(b) Boileau.—The most perfect of all modern writers in true taste and judgment. His sagacity was unerring; he combined every ancient excellence, and appears original even in the adoption of acknowledged thoughts and allusions. He is the just and adequate representative of Horace, Juvenal, and Persius united, without one indecent blemish; and for my own part I have always considered him as the most finished gentleman that ever wrote. I have spoken more at large of this poet in another place.

(c) Wakefield. Whenever I think of the name of Gilbert Wakefield, and look at the list of his works, (for I would not undertake to read them all;) I feel alternately sorrow and indignation. His learning and sagacity are indeed sufficient to entitle him to some patronage, and to the removal of every want. But his spirit is so restless, his temper is so overbearing and tyrannical, (I speak from the consideration of his works alone) his contempt for others is so great, and his personal vanity so conspicuous,

Such prophets as ere long Horne Tooke may save,
And hide and feed by fifties (d) in a cave :

Let
conspicuous, that even literature begins to be weary of him. But when I turn to his religious and political opinions, I find all the virulence and asperity of the reformer, all the insolence and even impudence of the assertors of equality, a want of decent, or even of common respect to dignified characters, and a mind (naturally designed for better exertions, and cultivated in the groves of an university) hostile and implacable to every establishment, and with a strong tendency even to † sanguinary persecution. I speak of him as a publick man; I have no contempt of his attainments. But I will never suffer him, or any other man, who obtrudes himself and his political principles and measures upon the publick, to pass me without notice; or as the poet strongly expresses it,

Glomerare sub antro

Fumiferam noctem, commixtis igne tenebris, §

without the reprehension he deserves. (1796.)

(d) By fifties.—"Obadiah took the prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water." Kings B. 1. ch.

† See (if it is worth while) Gilbert Wakefield's pamphlet entitled "Remarks on the General Orders given by the Duke of York to his army, July, 7, 1794, respecting the decree of the French Convention, to give no quarter to the British and Hannoverians, 1794." I only mention this or any of Mr. Wakefield's writings for their spirit and tendency, as the compositions are worth little notice. I shall not at present wander though his

Silva

Let such call Pitt or Grenville meanly bold,
Whocalm'd the terror of Burke's claws in gold! (e)

You read perchance a minister in books, (f)
And know an honest statesman by his looks ;

Think

ch. 18. v. 4. In the provisions of that most important, and I wish I could say, perpetual act, (passed in 1795) for preventing seditious assemblies, &c. &c. &c. it is specified that none of these prophets, or lecturers, or diviners in democracy, shall meet in greater numbers than by fifty in a cave, or elsewhere ; and considering the inflammatory nature of their disorders it is devoutly to be wished, that they may be kept upon the same cooling diet.

(e) " Summos auro mansueverat unguēs." Statius. A beautiful periphrasis for giving a pension ; but it is a pension nobly merited. I wish however most sincerely, for the dignity of Mr. Burke's character in the present age and to all posterity, that it had not been accepted. Πορρὸν αὐτὸν πρῆσαν. (1795)

(f) I allude to the profound knowledge which busy men acquire of the most secret designs of the British, or even of foreign cabinets,—from the news-papers. Nothing is so pleasant

Silva Critica, " Ubi passim palantes Error recto de tramite pellit."

|| His ravages on Virgil and Horace, in his late editions of them, are often as shocking to taste as to truth. Bentley's book (I beg pardon for coupling the names) was nothing to the levelling axe of Gil. Wakefield. If Mr. Wakefield does not write with greater care and ability than he has hitherto shewn, neither men, nor gods, nor columns will permits his works to be extant very long.

|| Hor. L. 2. Sat. 3. v. 48.

Think ind debates the spirit may be seen,
 In Thurlow just, in Loughborough serene ;
 In Grenville, firmness ; majesty, in Pitt ;
 And in Dundas, the courage to submit.
 Proud of your keen discernment you retire,
 Smit with the fame of Rollo's bard (g) and squire,
 You'd print (poor man !) your satire and your song,
 Correct, as Gifford, or as Cowper, strong.

A U T H O R.

Yes : to my country's justice I appeal,
 Nor dread the press, the guillotine, nor wheel,

Nor

as to hear men assert without the least hesitation what they know of the intention of Ministers. I really envy the satisfaction they feel, when they communicate their discoveries to such unenlightened and ignorant men as myself.

(g) The Rolliad, &c.—DR. LAWRENCE has just informed the House of Commons, (who are prodigiously interested about the Doctor) that HE is of the old School, and that HE intends to “ bring forward A MOTION to silence that declamation “ so commonly used in the House, &c. &c. &c.” This is modest indeed, and if he effects his purpose, I hope the universal thanks of the House, Dinner-troops, Family-men and all, will be voted to him, Nem. Con.—“ Talk of a Coronation ? ”—See The Farce of Peeping Tom. (Note Dec. 31, 1796,) N. B. The Doctor nevermade the motion. Parturiunt montes, &c. &c.—(added August 1797.)

Nor fulsome praise, nor coldness of neglect,
 Nor all that poets meet, but scarce expect;
 And since the question I shall never fear,
 A rhyming culprit's bold confession hear.

Plays I could frame, like Ireland, (i) by the score;
 Memory I have, not Middleton (k) has more;
 Could sing of gardens, yet well pleas'd to see
 Walpole (l) and Nature may, for once, agree;
 Could give with Darwin, to the hectic kind,
 Receipts in verse to shift the north-east wind (m);

With

(i) The publisher of the newly-found manuscripts in Shakespeare's own hand writing. The reader will find more on this subject in the course of this Second Dialogue.

(k) The famous witness on Mr. Hastings's trial, the disciple of Themistocles.

(l) Read (it well deserves the attention) that quaint, but most curious and learned writer's excellent Essay on Modern Gardening, at the end of his Lives of the Painters.

(m) See Dr. Darwin's Loves of the Plants and a long and pleasant note, in which the Doctor thinks it very feasible to manage the winds, (and every thing else I believe) at his pleasure, by a little philosophy. I never read any thing so comfortable in my life. Martinus Scriblerus will be, after all, a legitimate natural philosopher. It appears to me, that Dr. Darwin's ingenious

With Price (n) and Knight grounds by neglect improve,

And banish use, for naked Nature's love,
Lakes, forests, rivers, in one landscape drawn,
My park, a county, and a heath, my lawn;

With Knight, man's civil progress (o) could rehearse,
And put Hume, Smith, or Tacitus in verse;

Or,

ingenious understanding is peculiarly adapted to solve the following problem in natural philosophy: "WHETHER, the hybernal
"frigidity of the Antipodes, passing in an orthogonal line through
"the homogeneous solidity of the center, might warm the super-
"ficial connexion of our heels by a soft antiperistasis?" I have given a translation of this great and useful problem, (as the French Philosopher Pantagruel is not quite so intelligible in the original,) that Dr. Darwin may discuss it at large in the next edition of his Zoonomia, which is much to be desired. I refer the reader to the Crème Philosophique des Questions Encyclopédiques at the end of Rabelais, Book 5. The true cream of their modern Encyclopedia at least, is to be found in the French Revolution, 1789, &c.

(n) Price and Knight. See the various treatises, all curious and in some degree pleasant, on the subject of landscape and the art of laying out grounds. Knight and Price, versus Mason and Brown, REPTON, Moderator. I have no doubt of the decision at the bar of taste, but I certainly would not bring the cause in the court at Guildhall. With the giants on the jury, and Lord Kenyon for the judge, there certainly would be a verdict for the Brogdignag Gardeners, Knight and Price.

(o) See and read, if possible, what Mr. R. P. Knight calls a Didactic Poem, "The PROGRESS of Civil Society in six books,

Or, while Silenus and his votaries nod,
Quaff Paphian grossness from my crystal (p) God :

Or

books, 4to." I protest I speak impartially, when I assert that Mr. Knight seems to have no other ideas of poetry, than that of lines and syllables put into a measure with, now and then, some little attention to grammar. I mean when he writes verses himself. For if he conceives, that the versification of Montequieu's Spirit of Laws, Tacitus on the Germans, Smith on the Wealth of Nations, Robertson's Introduction to his History of Charles V. Stuart on the View of Society in Europe, and such works, is poetry, there is no help for him, he must be suffered to rhyme on. "Dogmatizer en vers, et rimer par chapitres."† It is impossible to criticize or examine the whole in a note, but I will give a specimen of such observations as I should make, if I were to go through the whole of this tedious piece of work. Mr. K. is very fond of beginning all his books with doubt, like a true philosopher; he always uses the words "Whether this, or whether that, or whether the other" is the case, neither deciding the point, nor giving even a doubtful solution of doubtful doubts, as Mr. Hume kindly used to do. But whether Mr. K. understands himself, even in the very beginning of his poem, may be a doubt; but whether his readers understand him, is no doubt at all. He begins thus, B. 1. v. 1. (I take the verses at the very beginning, to shew my impartiality.)

" Whether primordial motion sprang to life
From the wild war of elemental strife,
In central chains the mass inert confin'd,
And sublimated matter into mind :
Or whether one great, all pervading soul, &c.

Or
Whether, in Fate's eternal fetters bound,
Mechanic Nature goes her endless round, &c. &c.

† Boileau, Sat. 8. v. 116.

Or I could scribble (q) for historick fame,
Like Gillies, feeble, formal, dull and tame; (qq)

Then

In all this mist and darkness which he flings around him, he certainly is little better than Punch in the puppet show; "Ha-zy weather, master Noah:" for I am certain that neither Punch, nor Mr. Knight can look through this preparation of the poetical sky for the metaphysical deluge which ensues, when he is to

"Trace out the slender social links that bind
In order's chain, the chaos of mankind, &c. &c."

Obe jam satis; but then I am told there are so many pretty and intelligible passages (I grant it, Horum simplicitas miserabilis!) in this and rather poem (I must mean the Landscape;) and the ladies say it is so charming to wish to be buried under an oak, and so romantick, see p. 153. I wish from my soul, that all the democracy and infidelity in the kingdom were buried under the great guardian oak of England, and the spirit of Mr. Knight confined in the stem of it. He might cry out as lustily as Polydorus, and all the conjurers of the Dilottanti might assist at the disincantment if they pleased. N. B. I am infinitely indebted to Mr. Richard Payne Knight for the honour he has been pleased to confer on my note in the first part of this poem on the Pursuits of Literature; see page 17, &c. of his Preface to his Progress of Civil Society. "If Mr. Knight's bed be a bed of tortures, he has made it for himself."† I did not name him as the author of the Essay "ON THE WORSHIP OF PRIAPUS," but he has now named himself. I am glad however that he has some sense of shame left, by endeavouring to explain away one of the most unbecoming

† I quote JUVENAL in English, as I would TACITUS or LIVY in Latin. I consider him as a legitimate English classic.

Then tired with truth, like Coxë, to fables stray,
And vie with Croxall in my notes on Gay; (e)

I could, unbecoming and indecent treatises which ever disgraced the pen of a man who would be thought a scholar and a philosopher; and I persevere in that opinion, and could be tempted to copy even my former note. † Mr. K. had better have kept to his Principia, A, B, Γ, Δ, &c. (See his Greek alphabet.) I hope he will do better in future; and spare me more trouble. I am as tired of him as he can be of me. As Mr. Knight is a Member of Parliament, I must sadly tell him, that if he is appointed Chairman of any polite poetical Committee, and any more “reports PROGRESS, and asks leave to sit again,” the motion will be negatived by the whole House. (1796.)

(p) “Vitreo bibit ille Priapo.” Juv. Sat. 2. v. 95. See Mr. Knight’s Essay on the worship of Priapus, and my note on it in the first part of this Poem.

(q) Soon after Mr. Gibbon had published the second and third volumes of his Roman History, the late Duke of Cumberland accidentally met him, and intending to pay him a great compliment said; “How do you do, Mr. Gibbon? I see you are always at it, the old way, scribble, scribble, scribble.”—There are various judges of historical writing, from Quintilian to the late Duke of Cumberland.—Dr. GILLIES wrote the History of Greece, &c. in a manner quite different from Mr. Gibbon. But, according to Pliny’s good-humoured observation; Historia quoque modo scripta delectat.

† See the First Part of the P. of L.—I have been told that FIVE GUINEAS is the price of The Essay on Priapus, if a copy is at any time to be sold.

I could, like Seward, if for scraps you call,
Turn publick bag-man, (s) train'd in Walpole's stall;
Or to Cytharon, from the Treasury, move,
And, like Sir James Bland Burgefs, (t) murmur love; Could

(qq) The epithets in the verse are designed to characterize the writings of Dr. Gillies. There is some learning, great diligence, attention and application, but no marks of genius or of strength in his compositions. Sed tamen in pretio. And I wish them to be so, as the Doctor is a man of good intentions, a passable scholar, and of respectable character,

(r) Fables by John Gay, illustrated with notes by WILLIAM COXE, M. A. F. R. S. F. S. A. Rector of Bemerton, Prebendary of Sarum, Domestick Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, Member of the Imperial Œconomical Society of St. Petersburg, and of the Royal Society of Sciences at Copenhagen, Chaplain to H. G. The Duke of Marlborough; &c. &c. &c. (1796.) What will Mr. Coxe write next? To be sure Addison did gravely comment on Chevy Chase. I am not inclined to make any other comparison. (1796.)

(s) See (for they are very entertaining but very dear) Mr. Seward's Anecdotes of distinguished persons, &c. in four volumes. I prefer Mr. Seward to every compiler of anecdotes, except the Hon. Mr. Horace Walpole, now Lord Orford. A visiting library is very convenient and pleasant to one's friends (1796.)

(t) I allude to Sir James Bland Burgefs's Poem, entitled, "The Birth and Triumph of Love," accompanied by the prettiest

Could furnish feasts for each Parnassian prig,
A Florence goose, three ducklings, and one (v) pig ; prettiest little designs of the Amoretti alati by one of the fairest, most ingenious, and most illustrious hands † in the kingdom. Sir James, late Under Secretary of State, is very properly (as all under Secretaries of State, or Chief Secretaries in the Treasury, should be,) attentive to his character, and is particularly afraid of the smallest Cupid without a muzzle. Sir James says, "That boy and that boy's deeds shall not pollute my measure." St. 1. Now when I consider what Virgil and Tasso have said and sung of "that boy and that boy's deeds," it is a little prudish in Sir James Bland Burges, Baronet and Poet, on such a subject to have such fears. A poet may be a little playful. But Sir James Bland Burges is right after all ; there certainly should be none but the most virtuous persons about Secretaries of State, and in the precincts of the Treasury, though now and then a straggler of another description will be found, notwithstanding the unremitted diligence and undiverted attention of George Rose, Esq.

— With

(a) A Florence goose, &c.—See a publication, entitled, "An Ode to an Eton Boy, Three Sonnets, and One Epigram : by William Parsons, Esq. This gentleman is the fairest of all Mr. Gray's Criticks : he even allows the superiority of his genius, and gives his own verses in Mr. Gray's measure. The obliquity of the principles and of the understanding is sometimes unaccountable.

† H. R. H. THE PRINCESS ELIZABETH.

With Spartan Pye (x) lull England to repose,
 Or frighten children with Lenora's (y) woes :
 I could—

O C T A.

(x) Spartan Pye.—Mr. Pye, the present poet Laureat, with the best intentions at this momentous period, if not with the very best poetry, translated the verses of Tyrtæus the Spartan. They were designed to produce animation throughout the kingdom, and among the Militia in particular. Several of the Reviewing Generals (I do not mean the Monthly or Critical) were much impressed with their weight and importance, and at a board of General Officers, an experiment was agreed upon, which unfortunately failed. They were read aloud at Warley Common, and at Barham Downs by the Adjutants, at the head of five different regiments, at each camp, and much was expected. But before they were half finished, all the front ranks, and as many of the others as were within hearing or verse-shot, dropped their arms suddenly, and were all found fast asleep!!! (†)

Marquis

(†) Certain kinds of poetry and writing (to which I have been too much accustomed) may be added to the number of the τυπν λυγχα, or Soporifics, which great medical writers affirm to be accustomed νοϊστει, motions, &c. &c. in short the πασι τα ξυνθεα. The acute physician ARETÆUS thus speaks : —Τυπν λυγχα απασ τα ξυνθεα. Ναυτικω μιν η εν ακατω κατακλισει, και εν θαλασση περιφορα, και ανγιαλων ηχος, και πυματων κτυπος, ασιμων τε βομβος—κτλ. Aretæi De Morbis Acutis, Cap. 1. p. 75. Boerhaave 1731. The whole passage is uncommonly eloquent and sensible. My medical readers, will thank me for pointing it out. Aretæus, is perhaps, the first descriptive painter in this art. Such accomplished scholars as the venerable Dr. Heberden, Dr. Glynn, Sir George Baker. Dr. Turton, Dr. Milman, Dr. Littlehales, Dr. Vivian, and a few others, (Apollineo nomina digna choro) will confirm my opinion.

OCTAVIUS.

Do what?—where will your vaunting reach?
Is this a prelude to your parting speech?

A U T H O R.

Spare, spare ; till time subdues a poet's rage
With blast autumnal, or the damp of rage.
What poet will refuse to drink, or sing,
Since Helicon is now an Irish spring?
All thirst alike ; which made Sam Johnson think,
That no man visits, where he cannot drink. (yy)

F

Why

Marquis Townshend, who never approved of the scheme, said, with his usual pleasantry, that the first of all poets observed that "Sleep is the brother of Death." (1796.)

(y) A tale from the German, translated by the Laureat, H.
I. Pye, Esq. by J. T. Stanly, Esq. M. P. &c. &c. &c. &c. a sort of Blue-Beard story for the nursery. I am ashamed to think, that the public curiosity (I will not say, taste) should have been occupied with such Diablerie Tudesque.

(yy) Dr. Johnson's character of the Irish hospitality, in one of his letters, or among the Boswelliana, I forget which.

Why should I faint, when all with patience hear,
And Laureat Pye sings more than twice a year? (yyy)

OCTAVIUS.

Truce with the Laureat.

AUTHOR.

'Tis but what I think;
For once I hop'd to see the title sink,
While piety and virtue grac'd the throne,
And genius in lamented Warton shone:
Aye, while Britannia cries from shore to shore,
AUGUSTUS reigns; MÆCENAS IS NO MORE.

PITT

(yyy) "They scarce can bear their Laureat twice a year."
So said Pope. We could in these times bear our harmless fluttering birth day odes, better than the French Dithyrambicks in the orgies of democracy.

PITT views alike, from Holwood's sullen brow,
(As near-observing (z) friendship dages avow)

F 2

The

(z) I must own, that unless the Province of encouraging Letters, which should belong to the great, is administered with wisdom and discretion, it is more desirable that there were no encouragement at all. In confirmation however of my opinion of the minister, I refer the reader to a pamphlet published in 1795, entitled, "Friendly Remarks on Mr. Pitt's Administration, by a Near Observer." It is written by a man of fortune, independent spirit, and the principles of a gentleman. It has been ascribed to M. Montagu, Esq. M. P. and it is, I believe, acknowledged by him. He boldly tells the Minister of his fault, namely, an improvident and systematick contempt and neglect of all ability and literary talents. "They had no poet, and they died." I would by no means apply to Mr. Pitt what Spenser said of the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, once Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, because it would neither be true nor just. But the Muse of satire may, with more respect and delicacy, win an easier way to the region of his sensibility in the words of a Roman poet;

FELIX CUPARUM! *cui non Heliconia cordi
Serta, nec imbelles Parnassie vertice laurus;
Sed viget ingenium, et magnos accinctus in usus,
Fert animus quascunque vices!*

These are the virtues of a minister in times of charge, and of general convulsion. History indeed may say of Mr. Pitt in the words of Tacitus, H. 4. S. 5. "INGENIUM ILLUSTRÉ altioribus studiis juvenis admodum dedit, non, ut plerique, ut nomine magnifico segne otium velaret, sed quo firmior adversus fortuita

The fount of Pindus or Bæotia's bog,
With nothing of Mæcenæ, but his frog. (a)

OCTAVIUS.

fortuita REMPUBLICAM CAPESSERET."—I might proceed and describe him as "Opum † contemptor, recti pervicax, constans adversus metus;" but I cannot pursue him through the integral character of Helvidius Priscus, because I conceive POWER, and not FAME, to be the principle of this mighty minister of Great Britain.

(a) In the time of Augustus, during the administration of Mæcenæ, that Minister's seal, being the figure of A FROG, was annexed to all money-bills. I mention this anecdote as curious, and perhaps not generally known. It is recorded in the 37th book of Pliny's Natural History, ch. 1. "Mæcenatis RANA, ob collationem pecuniarum, in magno terrore erat." I also refer the reader to the Duke of Marlborough's Gems, vol. 2. engraved privately, and the elegant Latin descriptions of them by the Rev. Dr. Cole, late Fellow of King's College in Cambridge.—Nothing is so like as one Minister to another in this respect; but it is difficult to refrain from remarking, that Frogs were one of the plagues of Egypt.

† Though Mr. P. despises money, yet I wish he would give more attention to economy, private as well as publick, than he has done. He is deserving of much censure in this respect. He seems to have forgotten when Mr. Burke once thundered in the ears of one of his Predecessors, in the H. of C. (Lord North) "Magnum est VECTIGAL Parsimonia."

OCTAVIUS.

Mere spleen to Pitt; (b) he's liberal, but by stealth.

AUTHOR.

(b) Octavius is wrong. I am neither a personal nor a political enemy to Mr. Pitt. I think him a powerful and efficient Minister, eminently adorned with natural gifts and endowments, and solemnly marked out and elected to his great office. He has talents to conduct, to persuade, and to command. He is a scholar: I know him to be such, and a ripe and good one. The low passion of avarice has no root in his mind; but the sin, by which the angels fell, rages in him without measure and without controul. To tell a minister, that pride was not made for him or for any man, because he has nothing which he has not received, would be to argue a gross ignorance of our fallen nature. He has no servility in him. Firm, constant, and unbending, he has the principles of a man, who knows and feels what is demanded of him by his country. He comes into the House of Commons, not to bow, but to do the business of the state, and he does it. There is not a subject presented to him, even casually, in which his ability is not conspicuous. He treats it as if it had been the subject of his continued * meditation. In the conduct of the French war, he, his colleagues, and his allies have

* In this respect Mr. Pitt always reminded me of Themistocles, as recorded by the great historian: "Οικία ἔμισεν, φυσικῶς μὲν δύναμις, μελέτης δὲ βραχυτέτη, κρατιστὸς δὴν ὧς αὐτοσχιδίαζεν τὰ διοῦντα." Thucyd. Lib. 1. Sect. 138.

A U T H O R.

Yes, and he spares a nation's inborn wealth,

Another

have been all found wanting; but in the principle just, if not steady.—I will add, that in respect to personal individual gratification, I regard Mr. Pitt as THE MOST FORTUNATE MAN upon record. Called by the circumstances of times beyond human control, and by events not in the wildest range of expectation, he was placed, almost without his seeking it, in the highest public station. He passed at once to the innermost of the temple, without treading the vestibule. In the bloom and vigour of his faculties, (for he bore the blossom and the fruit at once) and in the prime of life, when every thing can charm, that which can charm the most, POWER, was voluntarily offered to him, accepted, confirmed, continued, and established by his King and by his country. His faults, his follies, and his blemishes, (for he has all) might be easily removed, but I think he will not remove them. He felt at once, as many have done, the highest ability in himself; and he found, what is denied to most, a full and adequate exertion of it in high office. My hope and earnest prayer is, that the termination of his political labours, and the result of this just and tremendous war with the Republick of France, may be finally to establish “Glory to God in the highest, and “on earth peace”—Is this the language of an enemy? I respect, nay, I would defend him: I wish him a long continuance in office: but I never can entertain a PERSONAL regard or affection for MR. PITT, (1796.)

Another Adam (c) in oeconomy,
 For all, but Burke, (d) escape his searching eye.
 Stiff from old Turgot, (e) and his rigid school,
 He never deviates from this wholesome rule ;

“ Left

(c) Adam Smith, the great writer on wealth and finance, from whom Mr. Pitt learned his art.

(d) This is not mentioned as a censure on Mr. Pitt for his liberality, for I think the whole of his pension merited by Mr. Burke.—On this subject, I may say, that in “Mr. Burke’s Letter on the Duke of Bedford’s attack on Him in the House of Lords,” I perceive genius, ability, dignity, imagination, and fights more than youthful poets ever dreamed, and sometimes the philosophy of Plato and the wit of Lucian. But what I esteem most of all, I hear again the warning voice of ONE who saw the apocalypse and FIRST cried aloud in England and to all the inhabitants of Euorpe. I cannot describe the whole composition better than in the words of that Poet, who would have been proud to record the workmanship of EDMUND BURKE. Brontes, Steropes, and Pyracmon, it will be allowed, have all had their share in the fabrication of this informatum fulmen.

“ Tres imbris torti radios, tres nubis aquosa

Addiderant, rutili tres ignis et alitis austri ;

Fulgores nunc terrificos, sonitumque metumque †

Miscebant operi, flammisque sequacibus iras.” (1796.)

(e) Mr. Turgot, ci devant Controller General of French Finance : the founder of the modern Oeconomic School.—Modern State

† Virg. Æn. 8. v. 429.

"Left to themselves all find their level price,
 "Potatoes, verses, turnips, Greek, and rice."

OCTAVIUS.

Strange times indeed to banter no finance;
 Pray, if you call him frugal, think of France.

AUTHOR.

Well, I'll be brief; with France he must contend;
 There I will own, and feel myself his friend,
 And sing with Burke's or Maro's borrow'd fire,
 "Arms and the man," till anarchy (f) expire.

Sedition's

State Oeconomy seems to consist in spending or squandering the greatest possible sums in the least possible time.

(f) "Till anarchy expire." In the just and inevitable, but most fatal and most tremendous war in which we are engaged, and in which all Europe has bled, and yet bleeds in every vein and artery, the first object we look for is, a stability of peace. But no stability can as yet be found in all the convulsive labours of the sanguinary nation. That modern Gallick Julia has done nothing but conceive one mis-shapen lump after another,

in

Sedition's crew is bound ; the gloomy band
 In chains of penal silence musing stand,
 Or doom'd in claffick (g) impotence to rave
 Their ceaseless round, within the smould'ring cave,
 The

in the fœculency of her political womb; conception upon conception, abortion upon abortion: and what can we say,

Cum tot abortivis fœcundam Julia vulvâm

Solveret, et patruo similes effunderet offas. †

We must, I fear, yet wait a season; (May 1796†) and whatever we have paid, or must still pay, must be considered as the αντιλυτρον, the great price of delivery and redemption from slavery, revolution, French anarchy, and the disruption of social order; when the earth is bursting asunder, and hell yawning from beneath; or in language, which Edmund Burke alone could reproduce in English,

And what wonder? It is Longinus who speaks of Homer. ||
 (1796.)

Αναρρηγνυμένης εκ Γαδρων γης, αὐτὴ τὴ γυνυμένη Ταρταρῷ.

(g) Since the passing of the Bills (in 1795) against treason, seditious meetings, assemblies, lectures, harangues, &c. John Thelwall

† Juv. Sat. 2. v. 32.

‡ We must say the same now, Dec. 31, 1796.—We have a little more hope now, August 1797.—It has now again vanished. (November 1797.)

|| Long. de Subl. Sect. 9.

The dark Vulcanian chamber, whence they strove
To forge and hurl the bolts of Stygian Jove.

OCTAVIUS.

Nay, if you thus proceed, I'll read the bill,
In Hatfell's (b) clerkly tone, clear, loud, and shrill,
And

Thetwall read during the Lent season 1796, what he termed Classical Lectures, and most kindly and affectionately pointed out the defects of all the ancient governments of Greece, Rome, Old France, &c. &c. and the causes of rebellion, insurrection, regeneration of governments, terrorism, massacres, and revolutionary murders; without the least hint or application to England and its constitution. Shewing how the Gracchi were great men, and so, by implication, the Bedfords, the Lauderdale, &c.—I must own, I fear nothing from such Lectures.

(b) John Hatfell, Esq. the very learned, polite, and respectable Clerk of the House of Commons. 1796.—This accomplished gentleman has lately resigned his office, with that propriety and discernment of time, and circumstance, and of the ætatis insidiæ, which has uniformly distinguished his very useful and honourable life in publick office. Quando ullum invenient parem? The illustrious Speaker of the H. of C. the Rt. Hon. Henry Addington, (neither inferior nor second to any statesman in that House in temperate eloquence, accuracy of knowledge, and soundness of understanding) announced Mr. Hatfell's

And Jekyll's (i) comment too.

AUTHOR.

Pray, heav'n, forbear:

Come then, I'll breathe at large ethereal air,

Far

sell's intended resignation in a manner which did honour to the sincerity of his friendship, and to the sense of the loss of so able a servant of the publick. The House was unanimous in their applause. Mr. Pitt seconded the Speaker, and pronounced also his testimony. But it is sufficient to say, MR. PITT spoke, when that Rt. Hon. Minister thinks proper to assume the language of commendation.—Mr. Hatfell has given a most judicious work* to the publick, which all senators will do well to consult frequently. Mr. H. will excuse me for adapting to him in this respect a few words from Quintilian, "Monumenta rerum posteris quærentibus tradidit. Frequentabunt ejus domum optimi juvenes, et veram viam, velut ex oraculo, petent. Hos ille formabit, ut vetus gubernator, littora et portus, et quid secundis flatibus quid adversis ratis poscat, docebit, et communi ductus officio et amore quodam operis." Quintil. Lib. 12. c. xi. l. 1—Mr. Hatfell will not suspect the hand which has paid this tribute to his character and his merits. (August 1797.)

* Precedents of Proceedings in the H. of C. with observations, 4 volumes 4to.

Far from the bar, the senate, and the court,
 And in Avonian fields with Steevens sport, (Whom late, from Hampstead journeying (k) to his Aurora oft for Cephælus (l) mistook, [book,
 What time he brush'd her dew with hasty pace,
 To meet (m) the Printer's dev'let face to face :)
 With dogs (n) black-letter'd for the Stratford Hunt,
 Thick-flued and coated 'gainst the public brunt ;
 For

(i) There is too much of pertness and self-sufficiency in Mr. Joseph Jekyll's remarks; and I do not apprehend that his witticisms will ever shake a minister like the Rt. Hon. William Pitt.

(k) He used to leave his Tusculum, the seat of Steevens and of wisdom, at Hampstead, between four and five o'clock every morning, to revise the proof sheets of the last edition of Shakspeare, 1793, in 15 vol. 8vo. at his friend Reed's chambers. I heard of nothing else at the time.

(l) "Hunc ne pro Cephælo raperes, Aurora, timebam."

Sappho to Phaon,
 I will own, I was always apprehensive for his safety and purity so very soon in the morning, on Primrose hill, "earth's freshest softest lap," but notwithstanding these early freaks, the youth is still safe, as I hear.

(m) "To meet—the Sun upon the upland lawn."

Gray's Elegy.

(n) See the first part of the Pursuits of Literature,

For well I mark'd them all (o) with curious heed.

OCTAVIUS.

(o) I termed the Commentators on Shakspeare out of mere pleasantry, "black-letter dogs." But if among these scholars, or in any other description of the learned, there should be found A MAN, who, with the grace of exterior accomplishment, or the fulsome semblance of it; with the gifts of fortune, and the rank of a gentleman; with a strong devotion to literature without remission and almost without example; with acuteness of mind and extensive classical erudition; who, I say, should so far forget himself, as to practise arts which would disgrace the meanest retainer to learning:—If SUCH A MAN should be found, with fair professions and obliging attentions, simular of friendship, but at the bottom false, hollow, designing, and malicious; who jealous of every little advancement or lucky discovery, even of a professional artist, should strive to depress the efforts of struggling laborious merit, or to blast the rival ingenuity of his learned contemporaries; who should inflict a wound with more than Parthian dexterity, and yet be studious of frequenting the company of men of character to countenance his own; and finally, who should collect and scatter around him the virus lunare, the vaporous drops that hang in any region of infection, that the objects of their influence might feel the blast of the enchanter, and know not whence it comes: If, I say, SUCH A MAN should be found, I shall not name him, and it is not for him to lay bare his own conscience by a foolish, appropriating indiscretion. I have only sketched out at present such a character in prose; and all I shall say further is, may He, if SUCH A MAN exist, strive to wipe out such actions by more than literary

OCTAVIUS.

Not all: you pass'd the grave laborious (p) REED,
 Friend to most traders in researches quaint,
 Layman or priest, the sinner or the saint;
 Farmer he loves, and Steevens will receive,
 Though not Mie (pp) Masterre (q) Ireland, by your leave.

(He

literary contrition, and deeply feel and know that he has lived, throughout the course of a life not inconsiderable in its duration, under a fatal error and a wretched abuse of time, learning, talents, and accomplishments.—This character is left on record, like any of La Bruyere's, without even the shadow of a name. It shall ever remain unappropriated by me. (1796.)

(p) Isaac Reed, Esq. editor of Doddsley's old plays, lately republished; a gentleman of learning, information, and ingenuity, and greatly respected. I mention this gentleman with particular pleasure.

(pp) Alluding to the uniform and constant reduplication of the old spelling of every word in Mr. Ireland's new Volume by Shakespeare. Masterre for master, bye for by, brotherre for brother, &c. &c.

(q) The possessor and editor of the MSS. asserted to be Shakspeare's: from whose officina in Norfolk street, issued the tragedy

He laughs to see our new Salmenus stand,
 (His mimic thunder rattling o'er the Strand,)
 On fiery courfers from Olympia's plain,
 Tossing the torch, in sov'reign splendor vain,
 Command the world's prostration from afar,
 "SHAKESPEARE and Jove" grav'd on the burning car
 In letter'd radiance?

A U T H O R.

Held : now is it well,
 In strains like these of manuscripts to tell?
 Of notes, bonds, deeds, receipts, fac-similies,
 And all that lawyers feign for proper fees?

Monks

tragedy of Vortigern, claiming to be the composition of Shakespeare, acted in March, 1796, at Drury Lane Theatre, and received in such a flattering manner†.

Sævus ubi Æacidæ telo jacet Hector, et ingens
 Sarpedon!†

† i. e. d—mn'd by Box, Pit, and Gallery.

† Vir. Æn. i. v. 99.

Monks and Attorneys may engage Malone;
 Annius, (r) or Ireland, (s) 'tis to me all one.
 Give me the soul that breathes in Shakspeare's page,
 Strength from within, the unresisted rage;
 The thought that stretch'd beyond creation's bound,
 And in the flaming walls no barrier found,
 The pen he dipt in mind; (ss)—I'll hush to rest
 The little tumults of a critic's breast.

What though no Vatican unbars the door,
 No Palatine to Ireland yields its store,
 Treasures he has; and many a prouder tome
 Than kings to Granta gave or Bodley's dome.

Pages

(r) Annius was a monk of Viterbo in the 15th century, and celebrated for many forgeries of ancient manuscripts and inscriptions. See his Seventeen Books of Antiquities. It may be proper to observe, that mere vanity was his motive; he never solicited any subscription for his ancients.

(s) See (for you may) all the farrago of which Mr. Ireland possesses the originals, numerous beyond any belief; I will not attempt to describe them. (1796.)

(ss) Της Φύσεως γραμματικῆς ἢ, τοῦ καλαίου ἀποδρεχῶν εἰς
 Nuv. Suidas de Vet. Auc.

Pages, on which the eye of Shakspeare (1) por'd,
 The notes he made, the readings he restor'd,
 The very gibes he scribbled, and the joke
 That from the laughing bard on margins broke,
 But where's the dark array, the vesture plain,
 With many a mould'ring venerable stain?
 All fled: a wonder opens to our view;
 The shield is scower'd, and the books are new: (x)
 "In her own hues great Nature best is seen,"
 So Ireland spoke; and made the black—One Green.

G

Eternal

(1) Mr. Ireland asserts that he has the very library of Shakspeare, with his signature, his notes, and remarks, &c. in the margin of the books, all in his own hand-writing.

(x) Mr. Ireland has not thought proper to preserve the books of Shakspeare's Library in their original and curious old black binding, (as could have been wished;) but, like the nurse employed by Dr. Cornelius Scriblerus, he has scowered them well and made them all new; and with singular felicity has re-bound them ALL in GREEN morocco!!—N. B. I have written this whole passage in the Poem and the Notes, to perpetuate the memory of this extraordinary event in literary history, which seems to be passing into oblivion.—I cannot think that any subject relating to Shakspeare should be wholly disregarded. (1796.)

Eternal verdure bloom in Shakspeare's grove !
 Where, led by light from heav'n, he oft would rove
 In solitude and sacred silence blest ;
 And in the musings of his mighty breast,
 All as he scann'd the volume of the past,
 O'er Greece and Rome one wishful glance would cast ;
 Mourn not, pleas'd Nature cried, their sounds unknown,
 My universal language is your own.

OCTAVIUS.

Enough for me great Shakspeare's words to hear,
 Though but in common with the vulgar ear,
 Without one note, or horn-book in my head,
 Ritson's coarse trash, or lumber of the dead.
 When flippant wit, and book-learn'd confidence,
 Alone give right to science, taste, and sense,
 When modest worth by idle boasting's shewn,
 Then, nor till then, will I approve Malone : (y)

See

(y) See Mr. Malone's Enquiry into the authenticity of Mr. Ireland's Shakspeare MSS. &c. which he calls (not improperly) a Vin-

See on the critick, "in his pride of place,"

Laborious Chalmers drops his leaden mace. (yy)

G 2

In

a Vindication of Shakspeare. The subject is indeed rather overlaid by the learned critick, but there is much sagacity and ingenuity in the treatment of it, and I think it is satisfactory and proves the point. Still Mr. Malone is too confident and presumptuous, and not always attentive to that politeness of character which at least all amateur criticks should maintain. I think Mr. Ireland will now hardly say of these manuscripts and original plays of Shakspeare,

Nunc non è manibus illis,

Nunc non è tumulto, fortunataque favilla

Nascentur violæ †

No, Mr. Ireland, neither violets nor GUINEAS.—"Go to bed, Basil, good night, go to bed." (See the Spanish Barber.) I have just read two pamphlets on this subject, the first by Mr. Ireland's son, and the second by Mr. Ireland himself. The shameless effrontery of THE SON, in avowing himself the author of these manuscripts, is only equalled by the tender solicitude of THE FATHER for their credit and authenticity. Mr. Ireland senior originally rested the whole with his son who, as he constantly affirmed gave the collection to him, plays, receipts, drawings, deeds, "white, black and grey, and all the trumpery," but declined naming the person from whom he received them. Mr. Ireland senior now presents us with the testimony of the Rev. Dr. Parr, Sir Isaac Heard, Mr. Pinkerton, Mr. Laurent Pye, Mr Boswell, &c. who all signed a paper (very wisely to be sure)

† Pers. Sat. l. v. 39.

In the wild squabbles of a wordy war,
Let rapid (z) Porson tell, or grievedly Parr, (a)

Coombe,

sure) that they were convinced of the authenticity of the papers. What can that prove?—The boy's tale is simple; he absolutely asserts that he forged the whole collection, and gave the papers to his father, to please at once and to deceive him, and the world. A very dutiful and very modest lad! Do we believe the boy? If we do, the business is at an end. The Father again and again asserts that he is ignorant of the person or the place from whence they came, and refers to his son's information. Now he disbelieves his own son, and defends the authenticity of the papers. Utrum Horum? In short, between them both, Father and son, there appears to me, what the Greeks call a Erōpyn, a sort of natural parental affection for these manuscripts, which is very strange, and which I cannot explain, but which quite satisfies me as to the nature of their originality. Mr. Malone's learning and politeness have not much to do with the business as a matter of fact; and the whole question now turns upon this momentous point: "whether Mr. Ireland or Mr. Malone is THE GREATEST SCHOLAR?"†—This is what the logicians call the Reductio ad Absurdum; and there the question may sleep, and Shakspeare too. Such titles as these are soon shaken from his monument;

Ad quæ

Disputienda valent sterilis mala robora fides † (Jan. 5, 1797.)

† See Mr. Ireland's farewell pamphlet on Mr. Malone's Scholarship. July, 1797.

Coombe, Travis, Ireland, or whate'er the name,
 The breeding of mere critics is the same:
 From royal Phalaris let your views extend
 To Bristol's wizard stripling, and his end.

Hear Catcott (b) cry, in chearless life's decline,
 Thus Rowley once, and Chatterton were mine.

He

(yy) See "The Apology for the Believers in—(Mr. Ireland's) Shakspeare Papers."

"So forc'd from wind-guns lead itself can fly,
 And pond'rous slugs cut swiftly through the sky."†

Mr. Chalmers is a well informed, useful, and well-meaning writer, but too "laborious, heavy and buff," in his works. It was but a waste of erudition to throw it away on this composition. He always has my thanks for his political information; but I wish he had more spirit and a more animated manner.

(z) Mr. Professor Porson's letters to Archdeakon Travis are conspicuous for their erudition, acuteness, accuracy, virulence, bitterness, and invective.

(a) I allude to Dr. Parr's Controversy with Dr. Coombe, critick and man-midwife, about Horace. It seems Dr. Parr was angry that he did not assist the little critical man-midwife at the labour, "rite majuros aperire partus." Dr. Parr is more fond of a Cæsarian operation in criticism. See more in a future note to the Third Dialogue of this Poem.

He saw his Bard by Milles's pond'rous length (bb)
 O'erlaid, revive in splendor, fame, and strength,
 For BRYANT (c) came; the Muses all return,
 And light their lamps at Rowley's fruitful urn;
 While Cam receiv'd the Bard with all his train,
 Though Isis turn'd her current in disdain.

The

(b) When I first published the first part of this poem (in 1794) I had casually glanced on the subject of Rowley. See P. of L. part I. but since that time having had some leisure and more curiosity, I have perused many of the learned treatises upon it. I neither have, nor will have, any thing to do with the decision of such a controversy as this, which is even now scarcely at rest; but having the feelings of a gentleman, I was struck, as I was reading, with the cruel treatment of poor Mr. Catcott of Bristol, the sneers upon the poetaster, and the illiberal reflections on a plain, curious, honest, and inoffensive man, without whose zeal and solicitude, (I speak from the printed accounts) these singular poems would never have appeared. He seemed to say with justice:

Oro, miserere laborum

Tantum, miserere animi non digna ferentis.*

(bb) The edition of Rowley's Poems by the Rev. Dr. Milles.

(c) No man of literature can pass by the name of Mr. BRYANT without gratitude and reverence. He is a gentleman of attainments

* Virg. Æn. 2. v. 143.

The Boy whom once patrician pens adorn'd,
First meanly flatter'd, (cc) then as meanly scorn'd, attainments peculiar to himself, and of classical erudition without an equal in Europe. His whole life has been spent in laborious researches, and the most curious investigations. He has a youthful fancy, and a playful wit: with the mind, and occasionally with the pen, of a poet; and with an ease and simplicity of style aiming only at perspicuity, and, as I think, attaining it. He has contended in various fields of controversy with various success; but always with a zeal for truth and a soberness of enquiry. In speaking of Mr. Bryant I have no necessity, as I too often have, to qualify my commendations. He has lived to see his eightieth winter. (and may he yet long live) with the esteem of the wise and good; in honourable retirement from the cares of life; with a gentleness of manners, and a readiness and willingness of literary communication seldom found. He is admired and sought after by the young who are entering on a course of study; and revered and often followed, by those who have completed it. Above all, he has gone forth in the strength imparted unto him, in defence of the holy law made and given by God; he has put on the την ανωθεν πανοπλιαν, the panoply from above, and having enlarged his mind and sanctified his studies, he may expect with humble confidence the consummation of his reward.

Drooping

NO MEN IN EXEMPLUM SERO SERVABIMUS ÆVO. || (1796.)

(cc) Alluding to the letters written by the Hon. Horace Walpole (now Lord Orford) to Thomas Chatterton, printed in Drooping he (dd) rais'd, and lent his little aid,

 The gleanings of a hard and humble trade.
 Innocuous man : yet what may truth avail !

Blameless his life and simple as his tale ;
 Each rude enquirer's sneering taunt he feels ;
 Contempt or insult dogs him at his heels ;
 No kind support subscribing fondness pours,
 For him no wealth descends in fost'ring show'rs ;
 Yet be the truth to future times reveal'd,
 " The wound a Varro gave, IAPIS heal'd." (a),

Go now, for moths, and rolls, and parchments search,
 Ranack the chest, the closet, or the church ;
 Brave all the joint associates of A. S.
 The jest insipid, and the idle guess ;

Bind,

in some magazines or newspapers. I remember to have seen them, but I cannot point out at present, the time or date of them : I think they were written from Strawberry Hill, but I am not sure.

(dd) i. e. Mr. Catcott.

(a) See Bishop Atterbury's comment on the DILECTUS IAPIS of Virgil.—I shall add, ΙΑΤΡΙΚΩΤΑΤΟΣ, φιλοδωρος και αδαροδοκωτος, φιλοπτωχος, γυναικος, νων διορθωτης, οσιος, δικαιος, ευσεβης, ΕΙΣ ΑΚΡΟΝ ΤΗΣ ΠΑΙΔΕΙΑΣ οηλακκος.

Bind, copy, comment, manuscript and print,
 Take from good natur'd friends some useful hint,
 From Bewick's (d) magic wood throw borrow'd rays
 O'er many a page in gorgeous Bulmer's blaze;
 Alas, for thee! nor profit, hope, nor fame,
 Contempt your lot, and solitary shame.

Go rather and indulge DRAMATICK rage;
 All love a publick or a private stage:
 Our nobles now, as players, will be seen,
 A duke's chaste daughter or a Margravine;
 Fled is the soft reserve and nicer sense,
 Those primal guards of love and innocence,
 Unzon'd the nymphs, like Highland Charlotte clad.

AUTHOR.

(d) Mr. Bewick, the great restorer of the long lost art of engraving upon wood. I need only mention his figures of the quadrupeds, and his plates to Bulmer's edition of Goldsmith's poems. Mr. Bulmer is the ingenious printer of Boydell's magnificent edition of Shakspeare; A WORK which, having been uniformly conducted on liberal principles and intended for the honour of the country, should be patronized by the English Nation.

AUTHOR.

Why not all bare? less shame's in being mad. (a)

OCTAVIUS.

Hold :—and o'er female failings lightly pass,
 And may Aglaia (f) lead them to their glass,
 Connubial glories rising o'er their head,
 As life's domestic happier stage they tread ;
 There they may look, well pleas'd themselves to find
 The guardians, comforts, teachers of mankind.

AUTHOR.

(a) The dress of the present period has warranted the caricatures of the present day, particularly one, which is called "The dress of ladies as it will be." I write in A. D. Seventeen Hundred and Ninety Six. Juvenal, who wrote about the year Ninety Six, said on a similar subject "Nudus agas; minus est insania turpis." Sat. 2. v. 71. But strange to say, he was speaking of the dress of men.

(f) Aglaia is the name of one of the graces: she dictated to Mr. Pope the following line.

Let not each beauty EVERY WHERE be spied,

Where half the skill is decently to hide.*

The ladies should remember that the imagination is a busy power.

AUTHOR.

I listen with delight : that strain again ;

I'll bless the sex.

OCTAVIUS.

Now pass to titled men.

Mark, as Thalia calls in graceful air,

The soft patrician of St. James's square ; (g)

Her nuptial (h) voice at Blenheim Marlborough heard,

While lyrick Carlisle purrs (i) o'er love transferr'd.

Nay

(g) His Grace the Duke of Leeds, one of the very best bred men in the kingdom, and the most polite ; a great patron of the drama and its concerns.

(h) A private theatre often proves a convenient chapel of ease to Hymen.—Families of rank, distinction, and fortune, will at last be convinced, what is the natural and inevitable conclusion of boys and girls making love to one another upon any stage, public or private, particularly in a private theatre. If it terminates in marriage, the Fathers and Mothers should not be surprized or angry. If the end of it, is intrigue ; if the girls are debauched, and the boys come into life with the manners and morals of Players, the parents may be sorry, but it is their own work.

Nay Thurlow once, ('tis said) could sing or swear,
Like Polypheme, "I cannot cannot bear;" (k)

For

(i) Purrs.—Dr. Johnson says, "to purr is to murmur as a cat or leopard in pleasure." I have heard that Lord Carlisle (Quel d'amor travagliato † Sacripante) is writing an opera entitled, "Angelica e Medoro." Angelica is supposed to be rather advanced in life; and I think her grand-daughter is brought on the stage.—EVERETT (1796).—The Opera, as it is conjectured, is to be dedicated to THE RIGHT HONOURABLE Lady Jersey, in memory and in imitation of the gallant and accomplished Medoro, as recorded by Ariosto:

"Della Comodità che qui m'è data,
Io povero Medor &c.

Ariosto adds, of the noble Earl, or Count,

"Era scritto in Arabico, che IL CONTE Intendea così ben come Latino."

O. F. Cant. 23. s. 108.

(k) "Torture, fury, rage, despair,
"I cannot, cannot, bear."

Air (by Polypheme) in the Serenata of Acis and Galatea.

† If my romantic memory does not deceive me, Sacripante was jilted by Angelica. See Ariosto. But subjects of the highest importance are pressing on me so fast, that I am obliged to dismiss Lord Carlisle, Lady Jersey, &c. &c. and all the youths who are dying for places or for love, in the words of the poet.

Nè sono a Ferrau, nè à Sacripante,
(O sia CARLIGLIO) per donar più rima,
Da lor mi leva il Principe d' Anglante, &c.

O. F. Cant. 12. s. 96.

For ah ! presumptuous Acis (kk) wrests the prize,
And ravishes (l) the nymph before his eyes :

Such

(kk) Presumptuous Acis. (i. e. Mr. Pitt)—I allude to a circumstance not generally known ; but which, as I have never seen any public notice of it, these lines are meant to record. About two years ago the Serenata || of ACIS AND GALATEA (with some violation, I believe, of the fable, and not a little of the harmony and of the melody) was performed in Downing-Street to a private company. The part of Acis by Mr. PITT, Polypheme by LORD THURLOW, and Galatea, by LORD LOUGHBOROUGH. Mexxi Soprani, LORD KENYON and PEPPER ARDEN, with a sort of Messa Bassa † by EDMUND BURKE ; the other vocal parts by a select committee of both Houses à due cori. I was not present at the entertainment myself, but was informed, that Mr. Pitt, in the execution of the difficult passages, did not sufficiently attend to his

|| Mr. PITT patronizes musical performances on the principle of the gods according to Plato ; but with Apollo, Dionysus is not forgotten. “ Οἱ θεοὶ οὐκ ἐλάττωται ἀνθρώπων (some M. S. insert πολιτικῶν) ἐπιφανοὶ πρὸς ὅλον γένος, τὰς Μῦσας καὶ Ἀπολλῶνα καὶ Διονύσου ἐκιορταστάς ἰδοῦσιν.” Plat. de Legibus, l. 2. § In Mr. Pitt's musical ministry, the famous terms of the Εκλυσίς and the Εκβολή of Bacchius and Aristides are familiar and much used by this great modern artist. The Ψαλμὸς Ἀρτιφθογγός (see Athenæus l. 14. p. 635) between Mr. Pitt and Lord Thurlow was much admired by the Cabinet about the year 1794.

† All the Catholics know (and we have enough of them to tell us, as the Marquis and Marchioness of Buckingham know to their own and their company's cost) that the Messa Bassa is a silent mass whispered by the priest during a musical performance.

§ Plat. Op. Ed. Serrani. Tom. 2. p. 653.

Such feats his honour little Pepper (m) saw
In all the pride of music and of law.

AUTHOR.

If truth and joke, though pleasingly, combine,
What credit will attend the motley line?
Where is your trust?

OCTAVIUS.

his appoggiaturas, which indeed he seldom does; that the baritone of Lord Thurlow was quite Poly-phemish, and fully sustained; but that it was impossible to do justice to Lord Loughborough's diminuendo, when—he died away in the arms of Acis.

N. B. Bishop Hurd would say this note is allegorical, or eleusinian: the late Mr. Gibbon and Lord Sheffield would as stoutly deny it. (Written in 1796.)—For my own part I think there is much eloquent music in these metaphors, which record the political conversion of LORD LOUGHBOROUGH to Mr. Pitt's party.—Ab! la Grand Opera!!!

(f) The Nymph, i. e. Galatea, i. e. Lord Loughborough. This was more than a Sabine feat in my opinion. Who's afraid? not Mr. Pitt.

(m) Little Pepper, i. e. Sir Richard Pepper Arden, Kt. Master of the Rolls. His legal abilities have certainly been underrated, but I have done ample justice to his musical powers.

OCTAVIUS.

To this discerning land

I trust, and laugh: there are who understand.

If from state farces, when the House is up,

Some seek the green room and with Kemble sup,

(For who 'gainst modest merit shuts the door?)

Leeds says, 'so gentle Lælius did before;

Lælius, in whom each graceful act could please,

In wisdom mild, and dignified in ease,

With Terence oft the publick cares would shun.

AUTHOR.

TERENCE and Kemble;—the dispute is done.

I ever mark'd, (deem not the thought severe)

What bounds divide the actor from the peer:

Confound them, I'll believe a saint, a rogue;

Andrews writes farce, a Duke the epilogue;

Burke

Burke may the right of property invade;
 Steevens contract the Commentator's trade;
 To Erskine, Kenyon seem a classick wit;
 Or Paine apologize for holy writ;
 THE DRAMATIST (n) himself and fame belie,
 And leave the stage for truth and honesty;
 St. Helen's quit his diplomattick pomp;
 Siddons be comick; Jordan sink the Romp;
 Ireland prove Shakspeare; Bentley be Malone;
 Thelwall dread preaching, or high treason, Stone;
 Who hates not Merry, Jerningham may love;
 And Gifford Della Crusca's self approve.

OCTAVIUS.

Merry and Crusca!—Gifford's right: beware
 The very ground is his and Bavian air.

AUTHOR.

(n) See a Poem entitled, "The Political Dramatist of the "House of Commons in 1795: a Satire, 2d Ed. with a Post"script containing Remarks on the Declaration of the Whig
 "Club on the 23d of January 1796." Printed for J. Parsons, in Paternoster Row. This poem is recommended to the publick on those publick principles, which I consider as of the highest importance to these kingdoms.

AUTHOR.

No : I'll not seek the tracks his arrows fire
 With light that marks, but marks not to expire :
 The climes he roams, where'er his footsteps sped,
 I pass with caution or but lightly tread,
 Or pleas'd with flow'rs his fancy best can strew,
 I sit, and think I read my Pope anew. (1)

But grant the stage is noble; I believe Greek is plebeian, with Lord (n) Belgrave's leave :

H

Though

(1) The author of the Baviad and the Mæviad. Mr. Gifford is the most correct poetical writer I have read, since the days of Pope. Upon the whole I give the preference to the Baviad after much consideration, though both the Poems may be studied with pleasure and advantage.—I have not the honour of Mr. Gifford's acquaintance; and indeed, from the nature of my retirement, I probably may never see him.

(n) Lord Belgrave; a learned and accomplished young nobleman of the present time. At his first entrance into the House of Commons in all the honest enthusiasm of his heart, in academick freshness and classick vigour, he quoted a passage from

Though now some high imperial criticks chafe,
 To think not Æschylus himself is safe.
 Go to his text : revise, digest, compare,
 With Porson's shrewdness, or with Valknaer's care ;
 Then let the learned page once quit your sight,
 Some Scotch Greek swindling printer (o) steals your right.

But

from Demosthenes in Greek, This subjected him to the idle and impotent ridicule of the Dramatist of the House of Commons, whose schoolboy memory on that occasion happened to be more accurate. Lord Belgrave had done no more than I have often heard from Mr. Fox himself, who loves and understands Greek. As to the long and illustrious train of our young nobility and gentry, distinguished for their conduct and attachment to their country, I will say with some spirit and animation :

Dii patrii, quorum semper sub numine Troja est,
 Non tamen omnino Teucros delere paratis,
 Cum tales animos Juvenum, et tam certa tulistis
 Pectora ! †

(o) I allude to a transaction which seems to be unwarrantable. Mr. Porson, the Greek Professor at Cambridge, lent his manuscript corrections and conjectures on the text of Æschylus, to a friend in Scotland ; for he once had, and I hope still has, an intention of publishing that tragedian, though it may now be

† Virg. Æn. 9. v. 247.

But mark, the sea-birds found the note of doom,
 And venom'd insects (p) cluster round the tomb,
 The Grecian billows foam along the strand,
 In angry murmurs deaf'ning all the land,
 Ranging for vengeance from his native shore,
 ARCHILOCHUS is rous'd, to sleep no more.

H 2

be suspended. His corrected text fell into the hands of the Scotch printer Fowlis, and without the Professor's leave or even knowledge, he published a magnificent edition of Æschylus from it, without notes. I believe my statement is tolerably correct. I hope however that Mr. Porson will not be discouraged, but continue his labours on the Greek Lexicon of Photius, as the learned world are in eager expectation of a work so long, and hitherto so vainly, desired.—But, in my opinion, the lovers of literature would be infinitely more obliged to him, or to any other illustrious critick, for a new edition of the Greek Bibliotheca of Photius, which abounds with the most curious and valuable Excerpta of Writers whose integral works are lost for ever. At present it is troublesome even to read the remains of the laborious erudition of the Patriarch of Byzantium.

(p) The tomb of Archilochus was placed on the sea shore, (I think in the island of Paros), and the poets feigned that in the cavities of the stone, worn away by the waves, a swarm of wasps was concealed, ready to avenge the least insult that could be offered to it.—The subject of Greek learning is carried on in the Third Part of this Poem.

END OF THE SECOND DIALOGUE.

THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE THIRD

Εκλαβὲν δ' ἄρ' οἷοιτο ἀπ' ὤμων χρομάναι,
Ἄστυ κινηθεὶς· ὃ δ' ἦν Νυκτι βουκας.
Ἐξίτ' ἐπειτ' ἀπαυθεῖ νιν, μετὰ δ' ἰόν ἔκκε,
Δίητι δὲ κλαγγὴ γινετ' ἀργυροῖο βίβιο.
Οὐρας μὲν πρῶτον ἐπύχετο, καὶ ΚΥΝΑΕ ἀργαί,
Ἀυτὰρ ἐπειτ' ΑΥΤΟΙΕΙ βίβλος ἐχέπικας ἀφίης
Βαλλ'· αἰεὶ δὲ πυραὶ νικυὺν καίοντο θαμναί.

Hom. II. 1.

THE RESULTS OF LITERATURE

DIALOGUE THE THIRD

FROM H. 12

PREFACE

TO THE THIRD DIALOGUE†

OF THE

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

Ταυτα πανθ' ὑπὲρ Τμῶν, ὑπὲρ τῆς Αληθείας, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὁμογενεῖς Πολιτείας, καὶ τῶν Νομῶν, καὶ τῆς Σωτηρίας, καὶ τῆς Εὐσεβείας, καὶ τῆς Δόξης, καὶ τῆς Ελευθερίας, ὑπὲρ τῶν κοινῇ πᾶσι Συμφερόντων, ΑΚΡΙΒΟΛΟΓΟΥΜΑΙ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΕΞΕΡΧΟΜΑΙ †

I PRESENT the Third Part of this Poem to the publick, at the same time that I offer the Second: though I had intended to delay it. But some subjects are of an importance serious and urgent, not to be deferred: Where-ever the freedom of the press exists, (and WITH US may that

† First printed in May 1796.

† Demosthenes.

that freedom be perpetual !) I must assert that, LITERATURE, well or ill conducted, IS THE GREAT ENGINE by which, I am fully persuaded, all civilized states must ultimately be supported or overthrown..

It is not enough to say, a book is bulky or voluminous, and therefore can have no effect upon the mass of the people, because that opinion is not true. Such a book can not only be abridged and dispersed abroad, but a man like Thomas Paine, with a rude, and wicked, and daring manner of thinking, and with vulgar but impressive language, may blend the substance of the opinions with his own, and in a short popular tract make them familiar and intelligible to every apprehension. Thus are men fooled out of their understanding, fooled out of their security, and fooled out of their happiness: and when they have lost every blessing beyond recovery, they look round at each other in a stupid despair, clashing their chains and unable to shake them off, and ask, "How has all this been brought about?"

I am no enemy to the liberty of discussion, and the toleration of opinions; I am for no literary proscription. But I think it is plainly our interest, as well as our duty, (while yet we may) to strive to support THAT CONSTITUTION IN CHURCH AND STATE, which has hitherto been able to build us up, and to give us an inheritance, or rather the pre-eminence, among all those who have been strengthened by policy, or sanctified by revelation. What I would contend for also, is this; that among all who are worthy to be called scholars or legislators, criticism, observation, and watchfulness are peculiarly necessary;

cessary; that men may hear of their common danger, and be admonished to put a few plain questions to themselves; "WHAT are we going to resign or give up, and why? WHAT are we going to adopt and wherefore?" I repeat it, now, in this our day, while the bitterness of political death is passing upon almost every other nation in Europe. When we are opening the avenues to Reform, and to the consequent inevitable dissolution of our own government, is it possible that we can for a moment forget the tremendous Republic? Over every State, and island, and promontory of Europe she sits tyrant or arbiter.

ἸΩΔΕΥΒΑΡΟΙ

ἸΩΔΕΥΒΑΡΟΙ

ἸΩΔΕΥΒΑΡΟΙ

From every other state, but England, the sceptre has fallen by the arms, or the principles, or the treachery of France. What she can effect by war and invasion, that she most readily and most willingly accomplishes. But she has other means, nor less terrible, nor less certain. The subterranean wind of this fierce democracy has force enough to overthrow, or to transport, hills and rocks torn from Pelorus; (a) and by this explosion they too often have perished. In the agony of these reflections language will labour, || Callim. Hyn. ad Delum. 125.

(a) "L'alpestro monte, and 'è tronco Peloro."

Dant. Purg. C. 14.

Whence Milton took his famous words, P. L. b. 1. 232.

labour, and the images of nature and all her elements in conflict and convulsion will present themselves.

When indeed I consider this great, powerful, and yet opulent kingdom, with all its bearings and dependencies, I know not which to reprobate most, the folly or the wickedness of its internal enemies, and of the desperate French faction in the heart of its metropolis. When I think on these things, and at the same time reflect, that the eyes of a whole nation were originally opened by ONE MAN, and the systems of internal destruction and of irreverfible misery, which awaited us, were displayed† and confounded by HIS powers, I pardon and forget his eccentricities, and even his partiality for the Romish faith and its professors, and the heat and violence which too frequently and too fatally attended upon the uncontrouled Genius of EDMUND BURKE. Sometimes indeed, (it is when my heart burns within me) I pour out my thoughts by myself in contemplation of MY COUNTRY, which I love with ardour unabated, and of its GREAT CITIZEN, whom I approach with reverence, and in the words of the poet:

Quæ cum magna modis multis miranda videtur
Gentibus humanis Regio, visendaque fertur,
Rebus opima bonis, multâ munita virûm vi,
NIL tamen hoc habuisse VIRO PRÆCLARIUS in se,
Nec sanctum magis et mirum carumque videtur. †

But

† "Animo vidit, ingenio complexus est, eloquentiâ illuminavit." These are the words of Paternus concerning Cicero.—How natural to transfer them to EDMUND BURKE! (1796.)

† Lucret. L. i. v. 728.

But still on such a subject, of such a man, and at such a time, I would speak with precision, and admire with circumspection. Let us call to mind for a moment the few years just past and the transactions, the traces of which are felt and visible. I would pass over them rapidly, but I could wish the view to be impressive. We have been delivered from a state of much internal terror and impending anarchy, and from the confusion of a new political chaos, where all was brute and disorderly. Our constitution, our liberties, and our rights, (I fear not to name the word, we have and enjoy them all, RIGHTS public and private) all these have been preserved and confirmed. Every rank in society, the peasant, the lawyer, the mechanick, the farmer, the tradesman, the private gentleman, have all felt, and acknowledged, and obeyed the paramount call of their country. Peace is within our walls, and it is their work. In the higher orders of the state, and in the Sovereign, we have seen a gracious behaviour, a common interest, an equal exertion, and a regular defined, limited power. Of such a conduct security is the natural production; it blossoms into fruit. But with this, though man might be happy, he will not always, or indeed long, be satisfied. He will reach at perfection absolute and unqualified. He forgets, that theoretical perfection in government and practical oppression are closely allied. He will be more than man, and he becomes less. In the years 1788 and 89, the visionary prospect from the shore of France opened upon the eyes of our modern reformers. England looked upon these Reformers, and the government neglected them. Societies, in the very face of an insulted legislature, boldly multiplied, and magnified,

and

and consolidated each other. All grew up in silence. There was no publick apprehension among the well-affected, no distrust. We laughed at metaphysical distinctions, and idle terms of scholastick art, and revolutionary dinners, and republican toasts. It was an hour of general and of unaccountable indifference. The great chain of posts, and a species of telegraphick communication had been established unperceived. The English revolution in 1688 was held up to seeming approbation and reverence, but in reality to secret or rather to open contempt; and the Revolution of France in 1788, was the Revolution which they intended to realize and to celebrate. The Reformers strove to buy golden opinions of their fellow citizens, and to wear them in the newestst glos. The external decoration deceived the eye. The painted sepulchre was prepared and whited without, the vault and receptacle of all our ancient liberties, and rights, and securities, and properties, and common comforts. Still we beheld all this, but went our way, and forgot what manner of men these Reformers were. At this very hour, when the publick mind was darkened that it could not discern, when in every quarter of the heaven appeared vapour and mist, and cloud, and exhalation;

*La piovra maladetta, fredda, e greve,
(Regola e qualità (estrana e) nuova)
Grandine grossa, e acqua tinta e neve,
Per l'aer tenebroso si riversa; (a)*

(a) Dante Inf. C. 6. From what other Poet, ancient or modern, could I draw forth such expressions?

at this very hour the morning horizon began suddenly to redden. It was the dawn. Then indeed, "First in his EAST the glorious lamp was seen, Regent of Day!" This luminary was EDMUND BURKE. Light broke upon them all. The features of misrule and malignity, of tyranny and of oppression, the fabled spectres and hostile powers figured by poets and orators, were realized in the spirits of turbulence, dissatisfaction, sedition, rebellion, and democracy. But they were seen to be dispersed. The rays of the orb were direct, collected, and concentrated; they had power to illuminate and to consume. But the course of this orb, though marked, was short. It is set: never to return.†

ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ! — οὐδὲν ἔστιν ἡλικασμενός ἐσμεν, ΑΧΙΛΛΕΥΣ!

Οὐ μὲν Σὺ Σωτὴρ ἀνθρώπων, καὶ θεοῦτος, (b)

But I must proceed.

I confess, that I am not such a desperate lover of what is brought to me for abstract political truth, as never to make enquiry into the character of the proposers of it, their personal views, and the men and measures with which they are connected. I feel myself a member of regulated society, and I would maintain an established order. I acknowledge myself a subject of a mild and equitable government, (though under a most severe temporary pressure) and I would preserve that government which gives US ALL protection. And when I adopt the great rule, that "we should love our neighbour as ourselves," I have not yet made such advances in the theory of political justice and in the new wisdom, as coolly to assert, that

"this

† (August 1797.)

(b) Hom. Il. 23. v. 69.

"this maxim though possessing considerable merit as a popular principle, is not strictly modelled with philosophical precision." (a) I have not yet learned to treat the Revelations of God, or the institutions of my country, with contumely. I have no romantic ideas of virtues without motives, and of actions without regulations. I believe it to be a matter of general safety, that crimes should be discerned, as well as repressed, by legal sanctions; and that the nature of justice and of injustice should be declared, taught, and enforced, by law, by religion, and by education. Experience has instructed me, and reason and reflection have confirmed me in the belief, that Conscience may be erroneous; that it is a monitor which needs advice, and a guide which often calls for superior direction. I look upon justice as the foundation (b) and support, but not as the whole of human duty; and I cannot, in insulting language, resolve the sum and substance of all government and civil society into "Laws proclaimed by Heralds and expounded by Curates." (c)

Yet

(a) See an enquiry into Political Justice, by William Godwin. 2d. Edit. 8vo. vol 1. page 127.

(b) Δικα πολίων ασφαλες ΒΑΘΡΟΝ. (Pindar.) But who calls a foundation, a building?—The whole passage of the poet has such strength and grace, when applied to Great Britain, that I will present it to our Grecian patriots. "Οικον ἀμερον αὐτοῖς, ἔτι οἱ δὲ θρακῶντα, γινώσκονται οὐδὲν Κορινθίον, προθύρον Ποσειδάωνος, ἀγλαοκέραι. Εἰ τὰ γὰρ Εὐνομία ναιεῖ, κασιγνήται τε, Δικα πολίων ασφαλες βαθεῖν, καὶ ἑμοτροπὸς Εἰρήνη, ταμίαι ἀνδράσι πλάττει, χρυσῆαι παῖδες ἐνδύλου Θέμιτος, ἀλαξύν ὕβρι, κοροὺ ματέραι θρασυμύθον. Εἰ δὲ Μοῖσ' ἀδύπνητος, ἢ δ' Ἀρεῖ πῶν ὕλαις αἰχμῶσιν ἀνδρῶν. Pind. Olymp. O. 13.

Yet do I not speak professionally. I have no personal interference in the church, the law, or the state. But I speak again and again, with earnestness and with sincerity, from the mingled affections of regard, fear, and hope for us all (and I trust, we are the great majority) who yet remain firm, constant, and unshaken by such writers as these. I speak to all, who have the courage, and learning, and ability to repress them, not by force (God forbid!) but by reasoning, and by appeals to the understanding, and the social relations of their fellow creatures. I speak to all who can rescue them from the cold unfeeling tyranny of modern metaphysics, as exhibited in the new systems of government and manners, (religion they have none) and from nonsense which must at last be found impracticable, when every estate and condition of man has been overthrown, for their pleasure and experiments, that these new arbiters, or creators, of human destiny may introduce a government without principles, laws without mercy, and morality without a motive.

The main point of rest to every empire is the principle on which voluntary and habitual obedience is paid to established authority. Half a century is insufficient for any new power or constitution to find its level. It is indeed matter of great patience, as well as of deepest concern, to reasonable men, to observe what is still carrying on in this country in defiance of every evil which has

(c) See Godwin on Justice as above, vol. 2. p. 299.

Hæc Ego non credam Venusinâ digna lucernâ?

Hæc Ego non agitem?

Juv. Sat. 1. v. 51.

has been felt, and will long continue to be felt, from the introduction of new principles among other nations. For the sentence of final destruction seems to be now executing on the various governments of Europe.

“ Yes, I must weep for you, ye rival vales,
Arno and Andalusia ! but for thee
More largely, and with filial tears must weep,
O Albion, O my country ! must thou join,
In vain dis sever’d from the rest ?—”

I trust not in vain. (a) Still the last dispensation of mercy is offered TO THIS ISLAND: and it is only to be deserved and

(a) Historical facts of ancient times are wholly inadequate to the illustration of the present great events, but some passages are not unworthy of attention. In the 256th year of Rome, when the Latins declared for Tarquin, the Conscript Fathers were not terrified, though all their Allies, the Rutuli, the Volsci, and other powers deserted them. The Senate was still bold, though Rome had rebellious subjects in the heart of the metropolis, and the State and Constitution were preserved. There were men who, like the Tookes and Thelwalls of our days, taught the people, “ μη φιλοχωρεῖν ἢ πολὺ μὲνδος αὐτοῖς ἀγαθὸν μεταδίδουσι,” and enforced all the popular arguments of revolt and sedition. I refer to the fifth B. of the Roman Antiquities of Dionysius Halicarnassensis. Sect. 63, which is curious and instructive. But one sentence of this neglected Historian is so singularly applicable to our own immediate circumstances, (August 1797) that it may not be improper to insert it. It is from the 62d Section of the 5th Book. “ Οὐδὲν ἔβουλον οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι ταπεινωθέντες, ὃ παθὼν εἶκος καὶ τρεῖς μέγαυτε πόλεμον ἀναίρουμένους, καὶ ΠΑΣΑΣ ΑΠΕΓΝΩΚΟΤΑΣ ΣΥΜΜΑΧΙΚΑΣ ΕΛΠΙΔΑΣ, ἀλλὰ ταῖς οἰκταῖς δυνάμει πιστεύσαντες ἑαυτοῖς. πολλὰ προθυμότεροι πρὸς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους ἐγίνοντο, ὥς διὰ τὴν ἀναγκὴν ἀνδρὲς ἀγαθοὶ παρὰ τῆς κινδύνου ἐσομένης, καὶ ἐν πάσῃ τῇ πράξει, ταῖς ἰδίαις ἀρεταῖς κατορθώσαντες τὸν πόλεμον, ὅθεν κοινωσάμενοι τῆς δόξης.”

Dion. Halicarn. Rom. Hist. L. 5. S. 62.

and continued to us by firmness, temperance, and piety, and by perseverance in the constitution sacred and civil which now is, without daring to attempt any present innovation in theory or in practice. It is indeed by looking calmly, (not as slaves or bigots, but as wise men,) upon those imperfections, which human institutions never can prevent, or wholly remove, that we may yet hope, under Providence, to preserve for ourselves and our posterity the blessings of cultivated society, in the general convulsion of Europe. They are best secured to us by our present form of government and laws, which being just in their principle, temperate in their effects, impartial in their application, and merciful in their execution, have the sanction of time, of wisdom, and of experience. In whatever shape French Philosophy may approach, however recommended, or dignified, or disguised, by scholars, or by ignorant and seditious men, in Greek, in Latin, in French, or in English, I would resist and repel it. Whenever the machine appears before the walls, I shall never regard it as the gift of Minerva, but call aloud to try the temper and the substance of it, ferro Argolicas fœdare latebras, to distrust the present, and to reject the offer. Let the enemy be dragged forth to light and shewn as he is, and I will yet trust that the kingdom and the citadel may stand.

The THIRD PART of this poem opens with a playful subject, and it is treated as such. But as the poem advances, I must (to use a prophet's expression) shew my dark speech upon the harp, and must, now and then perchance, strike the strings somewhat loudly, and descend into a more severe and a more solemn harmony. But what I esteem to be necessary, that I will declare; and —hat I feel it to be my duty to represent, that I will have the boldness to publish. Through the whole course of my life, in every trying circumstance, and in every wayward event, publick and private, I have held fast the concise and strong admonition of the poet :

TU NE CEDE MALIS; sed contra audientior ito, Quam tua te Fortuna sinet.

My learning and researches, such as they are, I submit to scholars ; my opinions, my labours, and my services, in the integrity of affection, I offer TO MY COUNTRY ; my errors and defects I leave to public reprehension, in a respectful silence. Whether men will hear, or whether they will not hear, is not strictly my personal concern ; but my intention no man taketh from me.

THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE THIRD. (*)

Ματαιολογῶν Φημι προσηπτατο Ἑλλαδα μυσσπολων, σεφαι επιφθαι τεχνας ονειδος.

Athenæi Deipnosophist : L. 14. p. 617. Ed. Casaub.

OCTAVIUS.

WHAT then, shall none remain, to whom belongs
The care of Attick bards and Dorian songs ? (a)
Shall England boast no more, in order'd clans,
Her owls from Athens and her Delian swans ?

I 2

I 3

(*) First printed in May, 1796.

(a) The subject of Greek Literature is resumed. See the conclusion of the Second Dialogue.

Is no memorial left of ancient fame,
No dirge funereal, nor one Grecian game?

AUTHOR.

There is : lo, learned ~~Clerks~~ in fable stole,
Graceful in years pant eager for the goal. (aa)
Old NORB'RY (b) starts, and with the seventh-form (c) boys
In weeds of Greek the church-yard's peace annoys,
With claffick WESTON, (cc) Charley COOTE, and TEW, (d)
In dismal dance about the mournful yew.

But

(aa) I allude to the rage for translating Gray's Elegy into Greek verse, by so many combatants for the prize, of whom more in the following notes.

(b) The Reverend Doctor Norbury, late one of the Assistants and now one of the Fellows (or old boys) at Eton, published the first Greek translation of the Elegy.

(c) In Eton School there are but six forms for the boys.—These Reverend Divines, it seems, have only taken one step since they left school.

(cc) The Reverend Mr. Stephen Weston is a man of great classical knowledge, and skilled in various languages.

But first in notes Sicilian (e) plac'd on high,
BATES founds the soft preluding symphony ;

I 3

And

(a) Monsieur PELTIER (Editor of the Tableau de Paris, &c.) favoured me with the following record and extract, which I give in his own French terms, as they are very significant and forcible.

“ PLACE DE LA TRADUCTION.

“ JEAN NORBURY, Docteur en Théologie, Chanoine et Associé à Eton. Âgé soixante et huit ans.

“ ETIENNE WESTON, Bachelier en Théologie, Abbé, Voyageur, Versificateur, cidavant Recteur. Âgé cinquante ans.

“ CHARLES COOTE, Docteur en Théologie, Doien Irlandois, Âgé cinquante et deux ans, selon le registre.

“ EDOUARD TEW, Bachelier en Théologie, Chanoine et Associé à Eton, Âgé cinquante et sept ans.

“ GUILLOTINES à la Grecque, 25 Floreal Quintidi, 1796.

Extrait du Registre de la Guillotine Littéraire.”

N. B. Ils sont montés sur l'échaffaut avec assez de courage ; à dix heures et un quart du matin leurs têtes sont tombées.”

Extrait du Rapport fait AU CONSEIL DES ANCIENS, par l'Exécuteur de la haute justice littéraire.

† P. S. J'ai reçue une lettre très obligeante de la part de Monsieur Peltier, dont j'ai la plus haute considération, qui m'a informé, qu'il y a une petite méprise dans le Régistre au sujet de Monsieur le Docteur COOTE, Traducteur célèbre. Qu'il n'étoit pas Doien Irlandois &c, par conséquent, grand théologien, mais Docteur en Droit Civil en Angleterre, très instruit dans

And in sad cadence, as the bands condense,
The curfew tolls the knell of parting SENSE.

NARES

(r) Notes Sicilian.—JOAH BATES, Esq. as an old Etonian, and once Fellow and Tutor of King's College, Cambridge, was so obliging as to offer himself as Musical Conductor on the occasion. Some persons may think, that the "notes Sicilian" allude to the Ἀρχαὶ Σινδαυδαὶ τοῦ πινδαροῦ, ἀρχαὶ Μοῦσαι:‡ but they are no musicians if they think so. Mr. Bates's judgment naturally led him to adopt the Siciliana for this famous solemnity, as it is a movement slower and more marked than the Giga. While the Siciliana was playing, the combatants, before they entered the lists, approached the critick's throne moving in a sort of measured step. The Rev. MR. NARES, (editor of the British Critick, and in my estimation, and I believe in that of every member of Lincoln's Inn, a gentleman of worth, learning and ability, and to whom not the slightest disrespect is here intended) was appointed the judge or Βραβεύς, on the occasion, and beheld them without emotion, though the fight was luxuriant in the extreme.

O'er their warm cheeks, and rising bosoms move
The bloom of young desire, and purple light of love.||

—Had

dans la grammaire Grecque. Monsieur Peltier, avec le zèle le plus édifiant, pour la vérité et avec beaucoup d'onction, m'a prié de corriger le registre et la poésie, là dessus, et m'a informé, que Monsieur NARES Auteur très aimable en son genre, et editeur de l'ouvrage periodique, (The British Critick) la voulût aussi avec beaucoup d'empressement. Malheureusement c'est impossible; et j'ai répondu très franchement: "Mon cher Peltier, quand une fois la tête doctorale est tombée; eh! que faire?" (Nov. 1797.)

‡ Moschi Epit. in Bion. v. 1,

|| Gray's Progress of Poesy.

NARES (f) holds the prize, and stops the Doric din,

ELMSLEY (g) without and RIVINGTON within,

The volumes are arrang'd in order meet,

And all their ears erect these accents greet:

I 4

"Hail

—Had the combatants been political personages, I would have described the whole game, and the characters, and their speeches in the poem; but what interest have mankind in a few old Greek boys in gowns and cassocks?—I learned early from Cervantes the necessity of limitation and propriety in fiction: though this is a mere record of a matter of fact.

(f) I always admired the solemn irony, with which the Reviewers in The British Critick treated this Gracian game among the old boys. It appeared to me as if I saw their exercises looked over at Eton by Dr. Davies, who said, "Norbury, you have done pretty well;"—"Tew, you had a few faults, but a little more spirit than Norbury;"—"Weston, you have translated with some elegance, but you have no authority for your genitive absolute."—"Master Coote, I think you have one false quantity, but it is a doubtful syllable, and I shall pass it this time." It is something odd, that a Westminster man (I mean Mr. Nares,) should be the Judge of these old Eton boys.

(g) Elmsley † and Rivington, two London booksellers, one famed for shrewdness, and the other for orthodoxy. Very pro-

pet

† I know not why I should withhold the Testimonia Doctorum to Mr. Elmsley. To begin;—"Mr. Elmsley, whose deal for his Author can never be sufficiently commended," &c.—

See

“ Hail my fond masters of the Grecian lyre, “ Hear a Reviewer’s verse yourselves inspire :
 “ These books are yours, (oh, heed my tuneful voice) “ Take ’em, or (i) damn’em, as best suits your choice;

“ For

per assessors TO THE CRITICK. Mr. Elmsley was stationed at the door to keep the peace among the combatants, who were the rather noisy and troublesome from their number. Afterwards Mr. Elmsley took his seat with THE CRITICK. The place of the meeting was the celebrated Musical Room in Hanover Square. See a subsequent note.

(i) Damn ’em.—“ This (word) is to be understood in a very sober and decent sense. See Bishop Warburton’s note on one of the concluding lines of Pope’s Story of Sir Balaam, Moral Ep. 3. v. 401. Pope’s works edit. Warb. 8vo. vol. 3. p. 269.

“ The

See Mr. Bryant’s Letter to Mr. Richardson at the end. Hear Mr. Gibbon : “ Je trouve dans le Libraire Elmsley, un Conseiller sage, instruit, et discret.” Mr. Gibbon to Mr. Deyverdun. Letters, vol. 2. 4to. p. 596. Again : “ I was proud and happy, if I could prevail on Elmsley, to enliven the dullness of the evening.” Ib. p. 653. Booksellers of reputation have been always mentioned with respect ; The Socii by Horace, and Trypho by Quintilian : Mr. TONSON is recorded by a man of talents, † Mr. BECKET by Sterne, Mr. ELMSLEY by Mr. Bryant and Mr. Gibbon, and finally by his humble servant, the author of the Pursuits of Literature.

† George Steevens, Esq. editor of Shakespeare, in his Preface to the Poet’s works.

" For some are new, some foolish, and some old,

" Some pert in calf, and some in sheets are bold.

" Twelve British Criticks, new or little read ;

" Horsley's chaste sermon, (k) and his copper head ;

" Letters

" The devil and the king divide the prize ; which line the bishop with the utmost gravity declares to be ' a satire only on such ministers of state, which history informs us have been found, who aided the devil in his temptations, in order to, &c. &c.'" See the remainder of the note, or ask Mr. Pitt, or the Bp. of Lincoln, Dr. Prettyman. This it is to be a commentator on a mere badinage !!!

There certainly are books which may make a Reviewer or a Divine swear a little. I readily excuse Mr. Nares (as I do Mr. Grubb in the farce) for being a little hasty in his expressions. Longinus (who gives excellent directions, in his treatise on the sublime, for swearing to the best advantage) observes, " Εστιν ὁ τοῦ ὁρκωσῆαι τινα ΟΜΟΕΑΙ μὲν γὰρ, το δὲ πῶς, καὶ πῶς, καὶ ἡ ὥν καὶ αἰῶν, καὶ τίνος ἵνα."

De Subl. S. 16. The substance of which may be this ; " Swearing considered in itself and without reference to the matter and the manner, is by no means an accomplishment, or a source of the sublime, and should never be introduced, but in the proper place and occasion, and then only upon the most urgent motives and for the strongest reasons." From all which it appears, that discipline and instruction in this art are necessary before a man can swear as a gentleman, a scholar, an orator or a man of fashion. Therefore, no man should ever swear at random in conversation. See the Rev. Dr. Longinus's Sermon, as above, in toto ; to which the Rev. Mr. Nares certainly paid due attention.

“ Letters from Alciphron (1) to cool love's flame,
 “ And prove Greek whores and English just the same;
 “ The

(1) See his Sermon before the Magdalens, (in 4to) on April 22, 1795. I wish the Bishop had put an appendix (as the fashion is) to explain a little of it, though in some places it is very intelligible.—For instance, in the following passage, page 6. “ Numberless and ravishing are the beauties, which the “ mortal eye beholds, in the various works of creation and of “ art. Elegant and of endless variety the entertainments which “ are provided for the ear: whether it delight to listen to the “ sober narratives of history, or the wild fictions of romance; “ whether it hearken to the grave lessons of the moralist, to the “ abstruse demonstrations of science, the round periods of elo- “ quence, the sprightly flourishes of rhetoric, the smooth numbers “ and bold flights of poetry, or catch the enchanting sounds of “ harmony; that poetry, which sings of (something); that “ harmony which sans (one thing) and wasts (another) &c. &c.” And as if the Bishop had not been plain enough, he begins again; “ Infinite is the multitude of pleasurable forms which” do, as before observed. The reader will allow, he never before met with so much recondite truth, diversified with such beautiful and discriminating epithets. The Bishop might as well have said: What a charming place London is! what varieties “ and entertainments are provided for the eye and ear! First, “ there's the House of Lords, then, Westminster Abbey, then “ the Opera House and the Play-house. There's Doctor “ Gillies who provides sober history, and Mrs. Smith, wild “ Romance; there's Mr. Pitt with his round eloquence, and Mr. “ Erskine absolutely fainting in sprightly flourishes; there are “ Scotchmen

"The Hymns that Taylor, (m) England's gentle priest,

"Sung spousal at fair Psyche's marriage feast;

"The

"Scotchmen teaching grave morality and Greek; Dr. Hutton
"with abstruse demonstration how all things made themselves; there "is Mr. Jerminham with his smooth numbers, and Doctor Tasker "with his bold flights, Madame Banti at the Opera, and the "little children at the Foundling: there are &c. &c. &c."— All this might do well enough at a polite devotional lounge at some fashionable warm chapel from a popular preacher; but I am really ashamed that BISHOP HORSLEY should condescend to write or pronounce ex cathedra such trivial school-boy declamation about nothing at all, and then publish it. Men in high station and of high talents (like Bishop Horsley) should be careful, very careful, how they lessen themselves by their own words and works; and if Bishop Horsley goes on in this style, and as he has done in several of his later productions, whatever his poli-ticks may be, he certainly never will incur the danger of The Second Philippic.

(l) Translated from the Greek by two persons, whose time should have been better employed, and who now perhaps are rather ashamed of their production.

(m) Thomas Taylor, Translator of Plotinus, parts of Plato, the fable of Cupid and Psyche from Apuleius, Hymns, &c. the would-be restorer of unintelligible mysticism and superstitious pagan nonsense. All that Iamblichus revealed to Ædesius.— Mr. Taylor, in conjunction with Dr. Darwin, might solve the following

- " The alphabet in Greek by R. P. Knight ; (n)
 " Some rules for men to think and study right ;
 " An Eton foolscap, with the game of goose
 " Printed by Pote, types large and cover loose ;
 " An education sermon, rather long,
 " By Dr. Parr, all in the vulgar tongue ;
 " Last Horsley's master-piece, (nn) and merry plans,
 " To accent right the goods of courtezans.

" Nor

following problem ; " WHETHER a Platonic idea, hovering to the right on the orifice of chaos, might drive away the squadrons of democratical atoms ? Rabelais at the end of book 5. " Questions Philosophiques. For my own part I am not disposed to go any further, as Lycophron. Cassand. v. 14, expresses it, Λοξων ες διαξοδους ερωων.

(n) An analytical Essay on the Greek Alphabet, by R. P. Knight.
 —P. may stand for Payne or Priapus Knight, in allusion to his Essay on the worship of Priapus.

(nn) See a treatise on the Prosodies of the Greek and Latin languages, dedicated to Lord Thurlow by (Bishop Horsley). I allude to the Bishop's pleasant Comment, p. 47, so universally admired, on the Attick Law, Εταιρα χυποια η φερων δημοσια ιουα.
 My gallantry forbids me to use any accents at all upon these ladies, especially since the Bishop has shewn me, how dangerous it is to meddle

“ Nor books alone attend the CONQUEROR Bard, “ Him shall await a more sublime reward :
 “ Not the coarse joy a Grecian once could feel, “ Apples (o) for sauce, or parsley for his veal,

“ Or

meddle with them. In this short passage there are four personages virtually concerned ; Alexander Abrodisiensis, Aristotle, Venus, and Bishop † Horsley !!!! I assure his Lordship, I have as great an affection, as human infirmity can allow, for an Ox- ton, a Paroxyton, or even a Pro-par-oxyton ! Ladies never before knew the political importance of an accent.—While I am upon this Episcopal and Cyprian subject, I may observe that Proclus has a singular remark in his Chrestomathia preserved by Photius (Biblioth. Pag. 984, Ed. 1653.) Μὴδὲ τὰ Κοπρία ΠΡΟΠΑΡΟΞΥΤΟΝΟΣ ἐννέεσθαι τὰ ποιήματα.”

(o) Apples, &c.—There is now an affectation in modern young gentlemen, as soon as they have left their college, particularly in young lawyers and boy-members of parliament, of forgetting their Greek if they ever knew any. I shall therefore without ceremony remind them of the ancient rewards in the Grecian games, which consisted of some apples consecrated to Apollo in the Pythian, of a chaplet of parsley, in the Nemæan, of an olive garland in the Olympick games, and of a wreath of pine- leaves in the Isthmian solemnity.

† I shall express my opinion of Bishop Horsley, as a writer, in the words of Erasmus ; “ Ex libris deprehendi hominem esse ardentis ingenii, variæ lectionis, et multæ memoriæ, alicubi tamen majore copia quam delectu, ac dictione tumultuosa magis quam composita.” Erasm. Ep. 1248.

" Or beverage drawn from spruce or mountain pines,
 " With oil from Pisa's olive, when he dines;
 " No ode to praise the binding of his books; (p)
 " No print from Sheffield of historic cooks,
 " Of beauteous Gibbon's fair proportion'd shape, (q)
 " An old baboon, or foetus of an ape;
 " No

(p) I am sure Pindar † very seldom had so good a subject for his deep mouth. Mr. White, of Fleet-Street, and Mr. Edwards of Pall-mall, booksellers, would furnish me with much better materials for an ode than Pindar's, in their florid descriptions, (so animating to purchasers,) of gorgeous binding, little Dr. Gosset's milk-white vellum, and all its insignia.

(q) See in the title page to the posthumous Works of Edward Gibbon, Esq. in 2 v. 4to. published by Lord Sheffield, an engraving of THE HISTORIAN OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE, which his lordship declares to be "as complete a likeness of Mr. Gibbon, as to person, face, and manner, as can be conceived."!!! I have no doubt of Lord S's friendship for Mr. Gibbon, but why hang up one's friend in effigy to the ridicule of the present age and of all posterity? Figuram animi magis quam corporis
 " com-

† Not that detestable writer calling himself PETER PINDAR, of whom see the First Part of the Pursuits of L.

" There on the rack of satire let him lie,

" Fit garbage for the hell-hound Infamy."——Heroick Postscript to the publick, by the Author of the H. Epistle to Sir W. Chambers.

" No robe that waves in many a Tuscan fold ;
 " No lawn that wraps a bishop from the cold ;
 " But fine broad cloth, in choicest fashion wrought,
 " By modern hands to full perfection brought ;

" 'Tis

" complectantur," † said Tacitus ; and could Mr. Gibbon have seen this print, he certainly would have wished such a simulacrum vultus as this, to be imbecillum et mortale, or in plain English, to see the impressions burned and the plate broken.—I just remind all collectors of prints, that there is not only to be had the head of Doctor Gillies and the other historic cooks, of Dr. Denman the man-midwife, of Mr. William Coxe, traveller and friend to half the crowned heads in Europe, with his age at the bottom of the print, and of other great personages ; but there are still left some choice proof impressions of the striking head and likeness of Mr. John Farley, PRINCIPAL COOK at the London Tavern, (to be had separate from his great culinary work) being all that were left unsubscribed for by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, by the East India and Bank Directors and by Mr. Pitt and the elder Brethren of the Trinity-house. But I cannot ascertain the age of Mr. John Farley, which is a matter of the last importance, and for which I am truly sorry. The Homerick jucundity from Martial should have been the motto to our modern Mystillus ;

" Si tibi Mystillus cocus, Æmiliane, vocatur :

" Dicetur quare non T'arat' alla § mihi? Mart. Ep. l. i.

The reader of taste in print-collecting will thank me for reminding † Tacit. Vit. Agric. Sect. 46.

§ Μιστυλλοι τ'αρα τ'αλλα, κτλ. Hom. II. passim.

" 'Tis His,—“to wear FOUR SUNDAYS in the Park (q)

“ The best black suit of Doctor Courtney's Clerk!!!” (r)

To

minding him of Mr. John Farley's head, whose works are more relished than any traveller's or historian's that I know.

(q) Or in Kensington Gardens.

(r) I informed my readers in a former note, that the scene of action was the celebrated Musical Room in Hanover Square. I must now add, that the room was decorated on the occasion with appropriate scenery, laid out in belts and clumps of funeral trees, to represent a church-yard with the belfry, the yew tree, not forgetting the owl, with distant views of groups of labourers, and of cattle returning home by moonlight, highly picturesque. This was the scene of the famed solemnity, where Mr. NARES, with his assessors, Messrs. Elmsley and Rivington, booksellers, and the combatants, the Doctors, Norbury, Coote, &c. assembled. Dr. COURTNEY, then Bishop of †Bristol, now of Exeter (Aug. 1797.) and Rector of St. George's Hanover Square, was very kind on the occasion, as the decision was made in his parish; and with the consent of the Parish Clerk, made a liberal and voluntary offer of “THE SUNDAY SUIT †” furnished at the expence

† Doctor Courtney was then on the eve of a translation to Exeter, (Jan. 12, 1797.)—I also wish the Bishop health to wear his own best black suit, as well as another old Eton acquaintance, Bishop Cornwall, his successor.

† They who are acquainted with the dignity and magnificent deportment of Dr. Courtney's present CLERK of St. George's Church, Hanover Square, when in his full canonical Sunday dress, will best know how to estimate the prize offered to these Grecian combatants by Mr. Nares. Too happy if in such a garment THE VICTOR might be mistaken FOR THIS GREAT MAN.
 (1796.)

NARES rising paus'd; then gave (the contest done,)
 To Weston, Taylor's Hymns and Alciphron;
 To Tew, Parr's sermon, and the game of goose,
 And Rochester's (s) address to lemans (ss) loose;
 To Coote, the foolscap, as the best relief
 A Dean could hope; last to the hoary Chief
 He fill'd a cup, then plac'd on NORB'RY's back
The Sunday Suit (t) of customary black. (tt)

K

The

expence of the parish, and which, I understand, is worn by the Clerk during divine service in the morning only, on that day, and is very becoming. After the morning service the parish clerk appears in his ordinary dress as a common man. Such was the Ecclesiastical suit of armour made by the episcopal tailor, and hung up as THE CONQUEROR's prize (not pleno jure, but usufructuario,) for the Aeneas of the Sunday. (1796.)

(s) Not Lord Rochester, but my good Lord Bishop of Rochester, Bishop Horley's Address or Sermon to the Magdalens, mentioned above, not forgetting his lordship's Greek prosody for Lord Thurlow and the ladies.

.(ss) Leman is the old word for a lover, or a mistress.

(t) All my Eton friends well know Dr. Norbury's celebrated black wardrobe, and the Suits which appear, in the order of the Pythagorick rotation, from the chest or ark.

Supera ut convexa reuisant,
 Rursus et incipiant in corpora velle reuerti!

With

The gabbling ceas'd : with fix'd and serious look
 GRAY glanc'd from high, and own'd his rival Cook. (v)

OCTAVIUS.

With what propriety did the Reverend Mr. Nares make this famous decree!

(11) I must transcribe the concluding sentence of the Review of these famous translations, in THE BRITISH CRITICK for March 1795. vol. p. 245. I give the Critick the fullest credit for the conduct of this solemn irony, and confess that I conceive nothing superior in this species of wit, namely, that of looking gravely in men's faces, and telling them how foolish they are. The British Critick thus concludes: "We wish to avoid any invidious distinction, any undue preference. But were we absolutely called on to decide, we should from the purest and most unbiassed motives (see II. 23. v. 615) fill the golden cup with the most exquisite ονος, εἰς αὐτος, and not considering it as left without a claimant by the fall of any Eumelus, we should respectfully place it in the hands of THE ETONIAN NESTOR ;

Τῇ σοφίᾳ, καὶ σοφίᾳ τούτῳ, ΓΕΡΟΝ, καμηνίον ἐστὶν."

(v) I select this extraordinary genius, poet, critick, scholar, and orator, WILLIAM COOK, M. A. late Fellow of King's College, and Greek Professor in the University of Cambridge. "I knew him well, Horatio," melioribus olim auspiciis. I select him, as well for the singular and original excellence of his performance, (though there are some oversights and even verbal faults in it) as for the manner in which he published it. There was a spare leaf or two at the end of his very sensible edition of Aristotle's Poeticks, and there he printed it. Not in the pompous

OCTAVIUS.

Contract your smile, and quit this playful (a) search;
These are the lay amusements of the church,

K 2

Mere

pous manner, and with dedications to Lord Chancellors and I know not whom, as some of these Old Boys have done. I must own that in many passages, Nature, Gray, and Cook do seem to contend for the mastery; but above all in that famous stanza;

- " The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
" And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
" Await alike the inevitable hour:
" The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

GRAY.

Α χάρις ευγενειῶν, χάρις ἡ βασιλευσίδος ἀρχαί,
Δωρεῖς τυχαί, χρυσᾶς Ἀφροδίτης καλά τε δώρα,
Πάνθ' ἅμα τὰντα ταῦτα, καὶ ἡνθὲν μορσιμὸν αἵμαρ.
Ἡρώων κλέ' ὀλωλε, καὶ ὠχέτο † ζυνοὶ εἰς Ἀδαί.

Cook.

Bion or Moschus never exceeded these lines: I think, they never equalled

† Some persons object to the ο being made short before the ξ. It may be so. I leave Mr. Davies and Mr. Stephen Weston, the Hero of the Genitive absolute, to substitute κοίνοι if they please.

- " The rule is absolute," Lord Kenyon cries;
" Brisk from his genitive let Stephen rise."

Mere cobweb labours of their learned thought ;
 Though sometimes TEACHERS must themselves be taught

To weigh their office, raise their pow'rful breath,
 Nor leave the world to darkness and to death.
 Short be their folly : let example tell
 Their life, their morals pure, and all is well.

But should proud churchmen vie in sumptuous halls,
 In wines and soups, Carthusian Bacchanals,
 Nor think th'unwieldy superflux to shake,
 Where curates starve and helpless orphans quake, Wav'ring

equalled them. I write this Note, I will confess it, with all the friendly fondness which an Etonian could express :

HOC JUVENEM BOREGIUM PRÆSTANTI MUNERE DONO.†

(x) This subject from v. 1. to v. 63. of this part of my poem, is perhaps in itself a very trifling one. The names of some of the parties are obscure and of little note, and the concerns of Reviewers should in general be confined to their own little monthly

† Virg. Æn. 5. v. 361.

Wav'ring I ask, in this dark scene beneath,
Why lightnings scathe yon desolated heath? (5)

K 3

And

monthly blue books. But this example is of deepest consequence; that MEN, who aspire to be thought scholars, should be warned, even to all posterity, how they conduct their learning, and expend their time; and be taught from this ridiculous instance (which I have selected) to value themselves on such attainments alone, as are truly valuable. ὅτι γινώσκοντες ἂν ἡμῶν τὰς Νῆτας.—It cannot surely be conceived, that the slightest animadversion is here intended to be made on the exercises in the Greek and Latin languages, whether translations or originals, in the publick or private schools or in the Universities of this kingdom. The author of the P. of L. is of opinion, that the utility or rather the absolute necessity of them is so great and so indispensable, that they cannot be too much commended and too much encouraged. Compositions in Greek or Latin handed about in private circles of friends are indeed useless, but free from much reprehension, though at best rather idle in men of a certain age. But when MEN, dignified by their years and their sacred profession, the youngest having passed his fiftieth, and the eldest entering his sixty-eighth year, appear as rival candidates for publick fame from the translation of some excellent English verses into their own Greek; what can we say?

“Nunc cum ad canitiem, tunc, tunc, ignoscere—Nolo.”

Perfius.

(5) The unbounded luxury and extravagance of the French and Italian Ecclesiasticks should be a warning to the priests and ministers of all Christian altars, however dignified or distinguished, of whatever church or of whatever persuasion. Man-kind

And hark, the voice has thunder'd : and the word,
 Borne on the blast, a trembling world has heard
 In consummation dread ! the bonds of Rome
 Are burst, and Babylon's prophetick doom,
 With more than mortal ruin headlong cast,
 Proclaims the measure full : she groans her last.
 From climes (2) where piety no more was found,
 Where superstition wither'd all around,

The kind will know, and value them by their fruits. "For now is the axe laid to the root of THE TREES, and every tree which bringeth not forth fruit will (most assuredly) be hewn down."
 This is the warning voice which should be heard, and heard aloud in assemblies frequent and full, in all churches and in all cathedrals ; but chief in those twin sisters of learning, the Universities of England, Oxford and Cambridge, which can be supported on these principles alone, on which they were founded, and by which they have flourished.—While your place may yet be found, I will honour and will hail you both,

" Mothers of arts
 And eloquence, native to famous wits,
 Or hospitable in your sweet recess,
 City or suburban, studious walks and shades !"†
 But chief with pious gratitude, and with filial reverence, Salve,
 MAGNA PARENS ! (1796.)

† Milt. P. Reg. b. 4. v. 240.

The rights of nature barr'd, by heav'n resign'd
 To vile affections, in corruption blind,
 While, in the terrors of the world beneath,
 Permitted fiends of darkness round them breathe;
 Britain securely fix'd, invites from high
 With Charity's sedate, unalter'd eye.
 The sacred, exil'd, melancholy band,
 Passing from death and France, revere the land,
 Where streams of inexhausted bounty pour,
 And CHRIST still reigns, and bigots are no more.

AUTHOR.

Blest be the voice of mercy, and the hand
 Stretch'd o'er affliction's wounds with healing bland,
 In holiest sympathy! our best of man
 Gave us to tears, ere misery well began.

Still, still I pause: good nature's oft a fool,
 Now slave to party, and now faction's tool:

K 4

Attend,

(*) Alluding to the grand emigration of French Priests and others to England at the late revolution in France. See more in future notes.

Attend, nor heedless slight a poet's name :

Poet and prophet once were deem'd the same.

Say, are these fertile streams thus largely spread

A filial tribute o'er a mother bed ?

Say, are these streams (think, while avails the thought)

To Rome through Gallick channels subtly brought ? (22)

ROME touches, tastes, and takes ; and nothing loth :

But have we virtue ? yes of pagan growth. (a)

Ask,

(22) This is one of the most important points in the present situation of England and of Europe, in regard to national policy. I propose these questions. 1. How far, are the ministers of the public treasure of any Protestant kingdom justified in issuing large sums of money, for the express purpose of maintaining emigrant Catholic priests, AS A BODY ? 2. If they are justified in issuing any sums, in what manner and under what control should this publick money be expended and distributed ? 3. Whether in England at this time, there are not peculiar and paramount considerations which call for wisdom and prudence, to regulate and restrain the first natural and honourable impetuosity of mercy and humanity, to the end that THE CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND, IN CHURCH AND STATE, be preserved inviolate from open attacks, or from insidious attempts ?—These questions are proposed for the publick security, with sobriety, seriousness and charity to all, as of common importance. (1796.)

(a) It is well known that rigid Catholics hold, that the virtues of hereticks, or protestants, are to be considered in the light of

Ask, where ROME's church is founded? on a steep,
 Which heresy's wild winds in vain may sweep,
Alone where sinners may have rest secure,
 One only undefil'd, one only pure.
 Blame you her cumbrous pomp, her iron rod,
 Or trumpery relicks of her saints half-shod?
 Lo Confessors, in every hamlet found,
 With sacred sisters walk their cloister'd round:
 There read the list: (b) and calm the fate expect,
 When crafty, meddling, thankless priests direct.

Think

of pagan virtues. I think the bishop of St. Pol de Leon would agree to this opinion.

(b) See "THE LAITY'S DIRECTORY for 1796, (printed for J. P. Coghlan, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square) to which are added "THE COLOURS OF THE CHURCH;" words rather ominous. It is a pamphlet at the low price of sixpence, which I recommend to publick notice, and to which I refer the reader. It is a matter of some surprise and concern, to read the list of the almost incredible number of little books and tracts at the smallest prices, published and to be published, calculated for the general dissemination of POPERY in these realms;—the fatal display of all the existing and rising Romish seminaries, Romish boarding houses, and Romish schools for youth; the plenary indulgences (for one another;—) and the settlement of Nuns professed in monasteries erected in this kingdom, Clares, Benedictines, Sepulcharins;

Think you, their hate unquench'd can ere expire ?
 The torch not tipt with sleeping sulphurous fire ?
 Their doctrines round a careless land are blown ;
 They blast the cottage, and would sap the throne.
 What ? are my words too warm ?—I love my King,
 My Country, and my God ! the sounds shall ring

Ceaseless,

pulcharins, Austins, and Dominicanesses. Then, in this very same pamphlet, as if by a strange fatality and in the blunder of papal metaphor, they advertise even their drugs. The very medicine, it seems, is papal. Behold their “Laxative sulphurated pills (once exhibited in another form in these realms,) “The Medicated Snuff, a Cephalic of many virtues, prepared from the original receipt found in the Jesuit's Library ;” — “The Jesuits nervous pill,” — “The Jesuits Balsamic cordial.” In short, decernunt quodcunque volunt DE CORPORE NOSTRO ; body and soul, fortune and state. I understand them but too well. They know their hour, THEIR PROTECTORS OF NOBLE RANK, their opportunity, their advantages, their revenue from the state. They advance by approaches, not desultory, but regular. The papal genius never sleeps, no, not for a moment ; but directs, and animates, and acts, uniformly and constantly, at home and abroad, in cities, in towns, in villages ; it takes aid from stupidity and from ability, from above and from beneath. Their bishops, as yet, are but titular, but depend upon it,

Per solis radios, TARPEIAQUE FULMINA jurant,
Quidquid habent telorum armamentaria cæli, †

Depend

Ceaseless, till PIR (with all his host awake)

IN OUR GREAT CAUSE a nation's inquest take.

Look

Depend upon it, I say, they swear: but what the oath is, I shall not take upon me to describe. It may be well understood, and for aught I know, it is already registered.—I have compassion for the unfortunate; I have charity for plundered exiles; I have pity, and would wish and would give relief to the wretched and the suffering; I have veneration for the truly pious of every persuasion in the Christian faith. “There is ONE Lord!” But I have, and it is an Englishman’s duty to have, a watchful eye upon the insinuating or domineering spirit of the Romish church. I have no opinion of the sincerity of their attachment to us, or of their gratitude for our favours. I insist upon it, they regard THEMSELVES as the original and rightful inheritors of our land. I call upon the guardians of our church and state to be watchful, and to regard with attention the proceedings of ALL THE EMIGRANTS. If they refuse to hear, I wish most fervently, that Great Britain may never, in the anguish of an inconsiderate spirit, say of these numerous emigrant priests, and of all the rest sacred or profane;

Ejectos littore, egros

Excepi, et regni DEMENS in parte locavi!†

I send THIS NOTE into the world, whatever be its fate, with the famous papal inscription, but without the spirit, of Sixtus the Fourth to the Florentine Synod under Lorenzo the Magnificent, “IN FUTURAM REI MEMORIAM!” and the Bishop of St. Pol de Leon, and his Consistory, resident and acting in England, may reply to it, if they think proper.—(Written in the year 1796.)

† Virg. Æn. 4. v. 373.

Look from that vale what tribes the fortress (c) fill !
Then frown indignant o'er the opprobrious Hill. (d)

OCTAVIUS.

THESE THOUGHTS ARE FOR THE STATE : enough of Rome,
Her Gallick altars, and approaching doom.
But if from themes so grave (e) you never roam,

Alb

(c) THE GREAT COLLEGE OF PRIESTS, AND HEAD QUARTERS OF THE CATHOLICK CAUSE in the Castle or King's House at Winchester, tenanted by priests emigrant and non-emigrant, publicly maintained at the expence of the state. Read the preceding note. I am not speaking to those, who are indifferent about all or any religion ; but to those, who from their station, political or sacred, should understand the importance of the cause, the interests of Christianity and its purity, the evidence of history, the nature and the essential and unaltered spirit of the Romish priesthood, and their subtilty and peculiar arts by persuasion, or by terror over weak consciences. I am speaking to the governors of Great Britain, to the ministers of the crown, who should guard, and who I trust will guard, against the revival of the Romish Church now working in secret ; as well as against Ask at St. Paul's, is Prettyman (or) at home?

The

against the more open and more terrible democracy of some descriptions of the Dissenters. What is said to us all, is said at this hour to ministers and rulers of states with a more important and a more sacred emphasis, "WATCH, for ye know not THE HOUR when destruction cometh."—(1796.)

(d) Finally: I have to propose one plain and significant question to MR. PITT, or to any great minister of state: it is this: "Is there a single instance in the records of any modern history of Europe, where the governing and directing power of the state ever authorised, patronised, and supported with the publick money, under any circumstances whatsoever, A COLLEGE OF PRIESTS, in the heart of a kingdom, whose tenets and principles were not only different from the established religion of the country, but were in direct opposition and avowed hostility to it?—And particularly, when it was the original and fundamental purpose and constitution of that established church, to discountenance and extinguish the superstitious doctrines, and the political ecclesiastical tenets of that College of Priests, so authorized, patronised, and supported by the publick money, AS A BODY?" If this question must be answered, as I apprehend it must, in the negative, I maintain, (and if necessary will maintain more solemnly, if possible, and more at large,) that THE COLLEGE OF PRIESTS IN THE KING'S HOUSE AT WINCHESTER SHOULD BE IMMEDIATELY DISPERSED, † and not suffered to stand in that offensive, conspicuous, and opprobrious light in the face of the country. I am really speaking in mercy to them, and to us all, if I am rightly understood. I would

† This was effected in December 1796.

The Dean might smile, when you with happiest care

Blend

would support and preserve them from every want, privately, and in detached situations; but I would not suffer the ministry of a Catholick Bishop to direct the expenditure of that publick money so granted, for mere Catholick purposes; but with the most perfect toleration of all persuasions in religion, the Governors of the state should defend and exclusively support their own. This is prudence, this is policy, this it is to remember the beginning and progress of all great events, † (May, 1796.)

(c) I am not in the habit of perusing many of the various single sermons which are published; but I cannot resist the opportunity of recommending three, which I think are at this time important, and written with ability and spirit. One, by the Rev. Dr. Vincent, head master of Westminster school, (a Gentleman of very considerable erudition and exemplary conduct) preached for the Westminster Dispensary; another by Dr. Watson, bishop of Landaff, for the Westminster Dispensary also, with an Appendix, containing Reflections on the present

† Though the French priests were removed, by order of the Government, from the King's House at Winchester, at the close of the year 1796, yet I have strong and important reasons for leaving this whole passage, in poetry and prose, text and comment, unaltered upon record to posterity.—N. B. I refer the reader with much earnestness, (for the times demand all our faculties and all our circumspection) and I request his attention to a short tract, entitled, "A Letter to the Lord Marquis of Buckingham, Knight of the most noble order of the Garter, &c. chiefly on the subject of the numerous Emigrant French Priests of the Church of Rome, resident and maintained in England at the publick expence: and on the spirit and principle of that church sacred and political." BY A LAYMAN. (First printed in October, 1796.)

Blend Horsley's acid with the cream of Blair;
You'd rise at last.

AUTHOR.

sent state of England and France; the appendix is of peculiar merit; and a third, "On Gaming," written with great energy, erudition, piety, patriotism, and eloquence, by the Rev. Thomas Rennell, D. D. prebendary of Winchester.—While I am speaking on this subject, I think, it may be curious and pleasing, and perhaps useful to some persons, to see the list of books which WILLIAM WARBURTON, Bishop of Gloucester, recommended in some posthumous MSS. Directions for the study of Theology, which Bishop Hurd published in the 4to edition and in the 8vo supplement to his works. I refer to the tract, and merely give the books in the divisions, and order in which Warburton placed them.—Locke on the Human Understanding: Quintilian's Institutions.—Grotius de Jure belli et pacis; Woolaston's Religion of Nature; Cumberland on the Law of Nature; Cudworth's Intellectual System.—Maimonides Ductor Dubitantium; Spencer de Legibus Hebræorum Ritualibus; Walton's Polyglot Bible; Critici Sacri.—Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity; Burnet de fide et officiis Christianorum; Grotius's Comment on the Gospels; Locke on the Epistles; Joseph Mede on the Apocalypse; Episcopii Instituta Christianæ Theologiæ; Limborch's Theologia Christiana; Grotius de Veritate Religionis Christianæ; Stillingfleet's Origines Sacræ, 1st. ed. Limborch de Veritate Religionis Christianæ Amica Collatio cum Erudito Judæo, i. e. Isaaco Orobio; Chillingworth's Religion of Protestants a safe way to salvation; Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity, 4 first books. Taylor's Liberty of Prophecy; Stillingfleet's Irenicum; Locke's Letters on Toleration; Bayle's Comment on the words "Compel them to come in."—Mosheim's Ecclesi-

AUTHOR.

How strangely you mistake ;
The dream deceives not, when the man's awake.

Once

Ecclesiastical History ; Collier's Church History ; Fuller's Church History ; Sleidan Commentarii de statu Religionis et Reipublice Carolo Quinto Cæsare Commentarii ; Burnett's Hist. of the Reformation ; Dr. Clarke's Sermons, Dr. Barrow's Sermons ; Sermons du Pere Bourdaloue."

The Second Part of these directions could not be found ; but it may surprise some people to hear that Bishop Warburton's vigorous intellect regarded this plan, but as an introduction to the study of Theology. Hæc limina VICTOR ALCIDES subiit! Through such a vestibule did this high-priest pass INTO THE TEMPLE.—But if the reader is disposed to attend to the humbler suggestions of a very private layman on this subject, I think he would find great advantage in studying and considering the following works in English, (which are very few in number) and in the order in which they are arranged. 1. The View of the Internal Evidence of the Christian Religion, by Soame Jenyns, Esq. 2. The Evidences of Christianity in three parts, by W. Paley, D. D. 3. Grotius on the truth of the Christian Religion, in any translation. 4. The Evidences of Natural and Revealed Religion, by Dr. Samuel Clarke. 5. Mr. Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity, particularly the latter part of the tract. 6. Bishop Hurd's Introduction to the Study of the Prophecies. 7. Lord Lyttleton's Dissertation on the Conversion of St. Paul, and

Once in the morn of life, a wizard said ;

" He ne'er shall rise by benefice, or trade ;

L

" But

and 8. Dr. Butler's Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed, to the constitution and course of nature."—From these few volumes, if they are studied with care and an upright intention, I think it may be said, that " They shall see, to whom HE was " not (before) spoken of ; and they that have not (before) heard, " shall understand." These volumes are the works of laymen as well as of divines ; and if I am not mistaken, I think I perceive the following connection in the short plan which I have offered. Mr. JENYNS's View prepares the mind to think worthily of the Religion which is proposed, and demonstrates that there is the highest reason to think and conclude, that its origin is from above, and not from man. DR. PALEY's View of the subject displays, confirms, and establishes the direct historical evidence and proof, with all the plainness and candour of which it is capable, and independent of the particular tenets of any church or sect. GROTIUS and Dr. CLARKE present to us the faith, doctrine, and evidences in the form of propositions, with ample and learned illustrations, with force of reasoning, and with logical precision. Mr. Locke has been peculiarly happy in representing the consonance of the Christian doctrine to reason properly understood, and its necessity from the defects of all philosophy however distinguished. Bishop HURD, with the hand of a master, has opened the general View of the subject of prophecy, and freed it from the intricacies of speculation, and shewn its time, nature, end, and intent. LORD LYTTLETON has discussed the most illustrious instance of the conversion to this religion, in the person of St. Paul, a man of the highest natural talents, and profoundest reasoning and erudition : and he has accompanied the whole with remarks

" But find, remote from consequence or fame;
 " A local something, and a shadowy name;
 " Shall brave neglect; in England's cause contend;
 " Hopeless himself of virtue, but her friend;
 " Through crowds shall mark his solitary way,
 " Ardent, though secret, and though serious, gay;
 " Erect,

marks of weight and dignity on the general subject of Revelation. And last, to a mind disposed to view with calmness, humility and reverence, the whole system of Providence, as far as it is permitted to man to view "THE WORK WHICH GOD WORKETH FROM THE BEGINNING TO THE END," Dr. BUTLER has unfolded the Analogy or relation of the Course of Nature to Religion, by which all things are found to proceed in harmony from HIM, who hath made nothing imperfect. I think this great performance of Butler has peculiar force when it is considered in the conclusion of our religious researches, and not as part of the original proof, or as Lord Bacon expresses himself, "tanquam portum et sabbathum humanarum contemplationum omnium." (De Augm. Scient. Lib. 9.)—I speak merely my own sentiments to those who have not much time or leisure for deep study, and I speak in submission to scholars better informed than myself.—Reader, whoever thou art, if thou shouldst approve these introductory ideas to this great subject, inexhausted as it is and inexhaustible, prepare thyself, thy understanding, and thy affections. "Te quoque dignum finge Deo!"

(c) The Rt. Rev. George Prettyman, D. D. Bishop of Lincoln and Dean of St. Paul's; Tutor and Secretary to the Rt. Hon. William Pitt, before he was raised to the Prelacy. A man of learning and of ability.

" Erect, without a pension, to his end
" Unknown, unheard, unhonour'd, shall descend;
" Bow to no minister for golden views,
" His portion, memory, and best gift, the muse."

OCTAVIUS.

This of yourself?

AUTHOR.

'Tis so.

OCTAVIUS.

You're turn'd plain fool:

A vain pert prater, bred in (f) Erskine's school;

Talk of yourself?

L 2

AUTHOR.

(f) The Hon. Thomas Erskine, the celebrated Barrister. For a further account of his talents, abilities, legal knowledge, &c. see and ask—Mr. Erskine HIMSELF. (See also P. of L. Dial. 4.)

AUTHOR.

Why yes; I would be heard:

Mere walkers now, not writers, are preferr'd.

Look at that paper: (g) if you print the speeches,
Pitt seems George Rose, or like Sir Richard, preaches;

Nor tone, nor majesty, nor patriot fires;

Methinks the wit of Sheridan expires;

Lost in Dundas the Caledonian twang,

Though Pitt, and port, and property he sang;

Print negro speeches, and in reason's spite,

Lo, Wilberforce is black, and Francis white;

Who wonders at buffoons, or Courtenay's joke?

And we scarce slumber, though Sir William (gg) spoke;

'Tis Grey and grumbling; Curwen (h) all and clatter;

And Dent (i) and Dogs; and Pewter (k) pot and platter.

Shall

(g) Any newspaper or report of the Debates in Parliament.

(gg) Sir William Young, Bart.

(h) All the changes rung upon feudality, and tyranny, and I know not what, when the Game Laws were discussed at the close of the last parliament, April 1796, on the motion of Mr. Curwen.

Shall I not talk?—Few politicks will read,
Though Lauderdale should sketch his Scottish creed; (1)

L 3

Though

(i) Alluding to the long debates on the Dog and Bitch bill, brought into parliament in 1796, by Mr. Dent. The bill is a little allegorical, sometimes unintelligible, and often ludicrous. For instance; I shall not look to Mr. Pitt or Mr. Wilberforce for an explanation of the following clause in it: namely, "Provided always, that NO PERSON who shall KEEP ANY BITCH, &c. shall be charged with the payment of the said sum, until SUCH BITCH, &c. shall be of the age of —." § Sect. 2. Certainly the bill is allegorical, and THE KEEPERS of BITCHES, &c. complain, that they had taxes enough to pay for them before. Mr. Fox objected to it in the H. of C.; so did Lord William Gordon, and many other respectable and playful members; but in the H. of L. the Duke of Queensbury said, "It did not much signify." If Mr. Pitt means that taxes should be an object of wit, I shall soon expect to hear Mr. Sheridan, in the House, call the District of Downing-street "The Borgo Allegro." (1796.)

(k) This is another curious subject brought into the House in April 1796, and shews that Mr. Fox has eloquence of all materials and of all metals. GOLD, for his pension; BRASS, for his opinions; and PEWTER, for his constituents.

(l) See his Letters to the Scotch peers. All his affecting eloquence was thrown away upon them, even when they understood many of the passages, which they did now and then. (1796)

§ See the Act for granting to His Majesty certain duties on Bitches, Whelps, &c. &c. passed May 19, 1796.

Though Abram Jones (ll) and Jasper Wilson preach,
With names uncouth, but not unpolish'd speech.

Few mark the Journals of the dubious MOORE, (m)
We scent the tainted gale from Gallia's shore ;
Through England as his Various Views advance,
We smile, but trace the Mannerist of France.

GODWIN'S

(ll) Two assumed names of political writers, instead of Cato, Brutus, &c. but it is a foolish custom and should cease. Of Abram Jones I have no conjecture ; but I think I more than suspect the celebrated Mr. Roscoe of Liverpool in Jasper Wilson.

(m) John Moore, M. D. the celebrated author of Travels into France, and Italy, of Zeluco, of Edward, of various views of life and manners in England, &c. &c. &c. I speak of him only as a public author. He is a sensible and entertaining companion. His style is easy, always agreeable and pleasing, and his wit is playful. His pleasantry on physicians is little inferior to Moliere. Vineta cedit sua.† But I dislike the tendency of various parts of his writings when he speaks of the French affairs, I mean of the principles of the first Revolution, which led to the cruelties, misery and distress, which have been since felt by France and by all Europe. It is impossible that Mr. Moore or any other man of sense, can be an advocate for their present system. I dislike the perpetual ridicule which Mr. Moore throws upon hereditary honour, at a time like the present. (1796).

† Hor. Ep. ad Aug. v. 220.

GODWIN'S dry page (p) no statesman e'er believ'd,
 Though fiction aids, what sophistry conceiv'd;

L 4

Genius

(p) I have given some attention to Mr. Godwin's work, "ON POLITICAL JUSTICE,"† as conceiving it to be the code of improved modern ethicks, morality, and legislation. I confess I looked not for the republick of Plato, or even for the Oceana of Harrington, but for something different from both. I looked indeed for a superstructure raised on the revolutionary ground of equality, watered with blood from the guillotine; and such I found it. I cannot discuss a work in two large volumes in a note, (though some would dispatch it with a single word) but in general I can speak as much of it, as it deserves, in a short compass; I mean, as it appears to me. — The first trait of the work is, a certain cold-blooded indifference to all the mild, pious, and honourable feelings of our common nature, like all the Philosophers of the new sect, which I would describe, if Mr. Burke had not done it already. The next thing observable, is, a most affectionate concern and regard for the welfare of mankind, who are to exist some centuries hence, when the endless perfectibility of the human species (for such is their jargon) shall receive its completion upon earth; when the disciples of Dr. Darwin have learned to manage the winds, and direct their currents as pleasure, and the descendants of Abbé Sieyès have calmed the waves of a stormy people with the essential oil of democracy. Another trait is, that all political justice is essentially founded upon injustice; if plunder, robbery, and spoliation of all property in the outset may be termed injustice; ‡ though to be sure the † First published in 2 vols. 4to. and since in 2 vols. 8vo.

‡ i. e. If Mr. G's principles are to be adopted in any country, where property is now secured by the laws.

Genius may droop o'er Falkland's funeral cry :

No

the latter end of his commonwealth rather forgets the beginning. But I must say, he is not without some kind apprehension, that the population of states may be too great under the blessings of equal diffusion of property under the proposed government, for which he provides a remedy ; though, for my own part, I think such a government, like Saturn of old, will be reduced to the necessity of eating up its children. Again : another discovery seems to be, that as hitherto we have had recourse to the agency and interference of the Deity and his unalterable laws, to account even for the fall of a stone to the ground, the germination of a blade of grass, or the propagation of the meanest insect ; we are now to discard the superintendence of God in human and terrestrial affairs, and to believe in no providence but our own, and to re-make ourselves and our faculties. He seems to realize a modern fiction I once read, which supposes an assembly of certain philosophers before the Deity, when some of them are said to whisper in HIS ear, " Between friends, we do not believe that you exist at all." Further : as to suppose a divine sanction without a divinity would be absurd, therefore, every institution such as marriage, which in all civilized nations has been hallowed for the great end for which it was ordained, is to be vilified, ridiculed, argued away, and abolished. The tender sex, deprived of the support, comfort, and protection of their natural guardian, is to be delivered over to fancied freedom and wild independence, but in reality to misery and destitution beyond all calculation. Then by way of corollary, a few vulgar virtues and once honourable affections, as piety to parents and love to children, as such, are to be erased from the breast.

No patriot weeps when gifted villains die.

Who

breast. Gratitude for kindness and tears for the unfortunate are but weakness; there is nothing soothing in compassion, and friendship has no consolation. It would seem, that a well of water, an apple-tree, or any thing productive, is more valuable than man to man, abstracted from the mere use which one man can derive from another. "These are thy gods, O Israel, and this is the worship to which you are called!"—Nevertheless I shall still venture to mention with reverence and humility THE GREAT MORAL CODE, intended for all mankind, once delivered and ratified by HIM, who knew what was in man. In that code all is practicable, all virtue is founded in mercy, kindness, benevolence, and comfort, alike to him that gives and him that takes. There man plants, and God, not man, gives the increase; there we find no wild supposition of an interest which cannot be described, as it does not exist; no actions without a motive direct and reflected. I speak here of perhaps the least part of the Gospel Code, even of that Revelation which has given unto men in a manner at once clear and perspicuous, pure and unmixed, uniform and consistent, persuasive and convincing, powerful and authoritative, in the name and in the majesty of HIM who is from everlasting to everlasting. THE ALMIGHTY!—But if we regard mere human institutions; if a man wishes to see a practicable system of policy and government, founded and confirmed in the experience of ages, let him, if he has been awhile led astray by the meteors of Godwin, walk for a season in the steady light which Blackstone has diffused. Let him study the Commentaries on the English Laws, as they exist and uphold all that is valuable, or perhaps attainable, in a rational and civilized nation; and then let him consider the Theories of Godwin on political

Who now reads PARR? whose title who shall give?

Doctor

litical justice, and contemplate the government which would be raised on his principles. To me there seems to be no more comparison than between light and darkness. What the great Burnet† affirms of the Deist and the Atheist, considered merely as two sects in philosophy, is, I am convinced, not wholly inapplicable to the two political sects in question. "The hypothesis of the Deist reaches from top to bottom, both through the intellectual and material world, with a clear and distinct light every where; is genuine, comprehensive, satisfactory; has nothing forced, nothing confused, nothing precarious: Whereas the hypothesis of the Atheist is strained and broken; dark and uneasy to the mind, commonly precarious, often ingenious and irrational, and sometimes plainly ridiculous."—I can allow Mr. Godwin and other speculative writers on government to be ingenious. They must, in the course of their investigation, now and then throw out a new idea, but in general the greatest part of their works consists of very old ideas, which have been discussed again and again. They astonish by paradoxes, and allure the imagination by prospects without a limit; and when they have alternately beated and confounded the minds of men, they call them to the great work, namely, the subversion of what they call, per-judices, and the overthrow of the government, which is. "IN NOSTROS FABRICATA EST MACHINA MUROS." I can laugh at their † Burnet's Theory of the earth. b. 2. ch. 10.—See the tenth and eleventh chapters of that great man's work; "On the Author of Nature, and on Natural Providence;"—a master treatise of reason and eloquence. I wish these two chapters were published in a separate pamphlet.

Doctor Sententious hight, or Positioe & (1)

From

their metaphysicks, and even be amused with their pantomime fancies, as such. But when I know that their theories are designed to be brought into action, and when they tell us, that they hate violence, bloodshed, revolution, and misery, and that truth and happiness are their objects; I open my eyes to see, and my ears to hear; and having honestly exerted both faculties, I declare from private conviction and from publick experience, that I oppose the admission of these doctrines, whether recommended by Thomas Paine or William Godwin.—Yet a moment; take Mr. Godwin as a natural philosopher, and from his doctrines let the reader consider the state of his understanding. Let him also consider, how such a man is qualified not merely to reform, but first to overthrow and then to rebuild, the whole system of government, morality, and religion in such a kingdom as Great Britain. What opinion can we entertain of a man who seriously thinks that, at some future period, the necessity of sleep in an animal body may be superseded:—that men die merely by their own fault and mismanagement, but that the immortality of the organized human body, as it is now formed, might be attained by proper attention and care:—or who thinks “that, hereafter it is “by no means clear, that the most extensive operations may not “be within the reach of one man, or to make use of a familiar “instance, that a plough may not be turned into a field, and perform “its office, without the need of superintendence!” and then adds, “It was in this sense that the celebrated Franklin conjectured, “that “Mind would one day become omnipotent over mat“ter!!!” —Surely, we may say with the poet of Epicurus:

Naturæ

Perturbatur ibi totum sic corpus, et omnes

Commutantur ibi POSITURÆ PRINCIPIORUM†.

† Godwin, v. 2. p. 494. Ed. 8vo. † Lucret. L. 4. v. 670.

From Greek, or French, or any Roman ground,

In

I have quoted from the last edition of Mr. Godwin's work, as he has corrected or omitted many passages which were in the 4to edition. If he will but go on with more last thoughts, I think he will shortly reduce it to a very little pamphlet. I could make such a collection of Beauties (or what Rabelais might call, "Antidoted Conundrums") from this work, as would dazzle even a modern philosopher, whose "mind is omnipotent over matter," in Mr. Godwin's and Dr. Franklin's sense. I think these Beauties would form an assemblage of the most curious and incongruous ideas ever exhibited; fully sufficient, (as Mr. Godwin expresses it) to "rouse (any man) from the lethargick or LUVIOUS "POOL, out of which every finite intellect originally rose!" (vol. 2. p. 88. 8vo. ed.) Good heaven! what can Mr. Godwin mean by such ideas, and such words! unless he seriously believes that human souls are dipped in the river of oblivion, or drink of that stream as described by Virgil. Yet even this will not help or explain Mr. Godwin's words, for he says, that they "ORIGINALLY rose from the oblivious pool." Into what whirlpools of desolating nonsense are we to be hurried, as the sport, the scorn, the ludibria, the puppets of these new Creators of the moral world? Alas for man! wherever they lead us and themselves, methinks it is deeper and deeper, confusion worse confounded! The further I proceed, the more I learn to distrust swelling men and swelling words and swelling ideas, but above all in political subjects, from which most is to be dreaded. Political writers of this class are not to be considered as the speculators of former times. The lucubrations of Montesquieu and Locke were given as the result of long experience and continued meditation; and were not designed to produce subversion, but slow and gradual reformations, as

the

In mazy progress and eternal round

Quotations

the various states of Europe would admit. The writers of these days, on the contrary, throw out their ideas at a heat, and intend they should be brought into immediate action. They are not friends "to the world, or the world's law." For I would inculcate it again and again, that whatever may be held forth to us, or disguised by these philosophers, neither their plans, nor their reforms, nor their systems, can ever be erected or established IN THE KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN, but upon the overthrow of the Christian Religion, upon the annihilation or the disturbance of all orders and ranks in society, as they now exist. And this cannot be effected; but through the necessary and unavoidable medium of plunder, confiscation, revolutionary diurnal murders, and in the insurrection of the enterprising talents of gifted, bold, and bad men UPON ALL PROPERTY, publick and private, upon which all modern Revolutionists rest as their corner stone, and their final hope†.

† To such of my readers as are conversant in those authors of antiquity, whose precision, of thought and of language, has conferred dignity and stability on those principles by which all that is sacred, or venerable, or useful, or necessary to well-being is maintained, I would offer the words of an ancient Christian Philosopher in the early ages. The uncertainty, and weakness, and futility of modern and revived doctrines were never better exposed or expressed. "Ἡδὴ γὰρ μοι σκοτός ἀγνοίας ἅπαντα, καὶ ἀκατὴ μελαίνη, καὶ ἀπείρος πλάνη, καὶ ἀτέλης φαντασία, καὶ ἀκατάληπτος ἀγνοία. Ταῦτα τοίνυν διεξελθόν, βυλομένης διζῆαι τὴν ἐν τοῖς δογμασὶν ὕσαν αὐτῶν ἐναντιότητα, καὶ ἅς εἰς ἀπείροι αὐτοῖς καὶ ἀορίστοι προνοῖν ἢ ζήτησις τῶν πραγμάτων, καὶ τὸ τέλος αὐτῶν ἀτενιμαρτοὶ καὶ ἀχρηστοί, ἔργῳ μὴδὲν προδῆλω καὶ λόγῳ σαφεὶ βεβαιωμένον."

Hermias Διασυρμος (five Irrisio) τῶν ἐξω Φιλοσοφῶν. Pag. 175.—Sub fin. Ed. Paris. Justin. Martyris Op. 1636.

Quotations dance, and wonder at their place,
 Buzz through his wig, and give the bush more grace,
 But on the mitred oath that Tucker (1) swore Parr wisely ponder'd, and that oath forbore.
 He prints a Sermon; (2) Hurd with judging eye
 Reads, and rejects with critick dignity:
 Words upon words! and most against their will,
 And honied globules drip through his quill,

Mawkish,

N. B. If this note is too long, I have no inclination to make any apology for it. My conviction and my fears on this most awful subject, (while it may yet avail us to consider it) sometimes overpower me, till I absolutely sink under them. It is written, I hope we all know where, "Τέλειος ὁ ἀγωνὶς ΕΚΤΕΝΕΣΤΕΡΟΝ ἢ πολεμικόν!"

(1) Though the reader may possibly have a very good idea of a sententious or positive Doctor, in general; yet my specifick allusion is to the theology of the twelfth century, when the Doctors were divided into Doctores Dogmatici et Positivi, and the Doctores Sententiarum, or expounders of the famous Book of Sentences by Peter Lombard, Bishop of Paris.—At present Bishop Gregoire and Bishop Sieyes at PARIS, give their Doctors some famous books of sentences to expound, notis et commentariis perpetuis DOCTORIS GUILLOTINI, who causes great unanimity of sentiment among the Doctors, and arranges their several heads with admirable precision. (1796.)

(2) Josiah Tucker, D. D. Dean of Gloucester, ὁ πᾶν, once took an oath in a pamphlet that he would refuse a bishoprick, if offered to him.

Mawkish, and thick ; Earth scarce the tropes supplies,
Heav'n lends her moon and crowded galaxies ; {v}

Polemick

{ii} The unfortunate Education Sermon, which Bishop Hurd happened to dislike. Hinc illæ lacrymæ ! This produced the re-publication of Warburton's and Hurd's tracts, with the splendid and astonishing dedication by Dr. Parr. See the first dialogue of the P. of L. See also Rabelais's great Chapter, "How Gargantua spent his time in rainy weather," and the comment by Du Char.

{v} Dr. Parr's own words. See the P. of L. Dialogue 1. and Dr. Parr's own Dedication of Warburton's tracts, p. 151, &c. with all the display of beautiful earthly and celestial imagery, and all the melliti verborum globuli, which were exhibited on the occasion in such admirable confusion, "ut majus sit hæc contortionis orationis, quam signorum ortus obitusque, perdiscere." Cic de Fato, Sect. 8. Dr. Parr's strange verbiage & reminds me of some persons in The Wasps of Aristophanes ;

Answer

§ I have been misunderstood. I hold up none of Dr. Parr's sesquipedalia verba to ridicule ; it is his verbiage and phraseology which I reprobate. It would be ridiculous indeed to compare the Birmingham Doctor with Dr. Samuel Johnson. I am not his Biographer. It is not his life but his writings which I criticise. What has Dr. Parr written ? A Sermon or two, rather long ; a Latin Preface to Bellendenus, (rather long too) consisting of a cento of Latin and Greek expressions applied to political subjects : another preface to some English tracts, and two or three English pamphlets about his own private quarrels. And this is the man to be compared with Dr. Samuel Johnson !!! (Added, 1797.) Why am I forced into a confirmation of my opinion stronger and stronger ?

Polemick phrenzy and irreverent rage,
And dotard impotence, deform the page.

Let

Δύχους ἰχθυότις, καὶ μινυρίζουτις μίλοι
Ἀρχαιομαθνοιδανοφρονιχηράτα.

315. Σφραγ.

Or as Plautus expresses himself in one of his comedies;

"Salva res est, philosophatur quoque jam:

"Quod erat ei nomen?—Tbesaurochrysonicochrysfides."

Captiv. A. 2. S. 1.

The Doctor can construe all this, I believe, and the meaning of it.—Dr. Parr is so very learned, and has such a deep mouth, that some conjecture he was not born till the end of the eleventh month, like the great Gargantua; or περιπλομαν μηνιου, at the end of the twelfth month, as Homer speaks (Od. xi. v. 247.) of one of Neptune's children, and for which Aulus Gellius, (a favourite author with Dr. Parr) gravely assigns a reason, "Convenisse Neptuno majestatique ejus, ut longiore tempore fatus ex eo grandesceret. Lib. 3. Cap. 16. επι δε αποφωδιαι εναις Αθαντων!!!"—A few months after the Doctor's birth, he was found, like Gargantua, to be "a fine boy, and had a burly physiognomy; he monochordized with his fingers, and barytonized with his tail." Rabel. B. 1. C. 7. This was a presage of the noise the Doctor was to make hereafter; but from the nature of his boyish diet, (for his masters were styled Tubal Holofernes and Ponocrates Matzologus) it appeared that he was better fed than taught. If the child wanted a bit of bread, or a slice of mutton, or any common vegetable, he was not suffered to have any, till he had quoted all the Greek or Latin authors who had mentioned these natural substances, Pliny, Athenæus, Julius Pollux, Galen, Porphy-

ry

Let him but wrangle, and in any shape
Not insignificance itself can 'scape :

Horace and Coombe (*) go forth, a gentle pair,
Splendid and silly, to unequal war ;

M But

ry, Oppian, Polybius, Dionysius Halicarnassensis, Heliodorus, Aristotle, Plato, Aulus Gellius, Ælian, Theophrastus, and Dioscorides, down to Buffon and Sir John Hill. This habit the child never lost in his riper years, to the great edification of his hearers or readers, when he was furnished with pen and ink. When he was advanced to the Doctorate, the child was still the same, as appeared in his complimentary and satirical preface to Balladynus, in which, as usual, he discharged all the literary food he ever ate, after the Greek fashion of his masters Tubal Holofernes and Ponocrates Matæologus, and as prescribed by that great and consummate Theologian, "Joanninus de Barrauco in libro de copiositate reverentiarum," a writer who cannot be sufficiently recommended, and who is as well known as "MUSAMBERTIUS in Commonitorio ad Ramiresium de Prado," quoted by Mr. Porson in his title-page of his Letters, to regale Archdeacon Trayis.

(*) See the ridiculous controversy between Dr. Parr and Dr. Coombe, the little man-midwife and critick, about a pompous edition of Horace, published to be sure for no purpose that I can discover ; which the Doctor Positivus mangled and destroyed

* I recommend to Dr. Parr the following passage from Theophrastus's History of Plants, which he will understand : Εἰ τὰς ἀγλαῖς χερσὶς, πρὸς τὸ ΜΗ ΦΥΛΛΟΜΑΝΕΙΝ, ἐπιτιμῶσι καὶ στίχισιν τοὺς σίτοις Theophrast. Hist. Plant. Lib. 8. c. 7.

But while the midwife to Lucina prays,
 The Gorgon glares, and blasts the critick's bays.
 Parr prints a Paper: (y) well; in all things equal,
 Sense, taste, wit, judgment: but pray read The Sequel.
Sequel to what? the Doctor only knows;
 Morfels of politicks, most chosen prose,
 Of Nobles, Priestley, Plato, Democrats,
 Pitt, Plutarch, Curtis, Burke, and Rous, and rats;
 The scene? 'tis Birmingham, renown'd afar
 At once for half-pence, and for Doctor Parr.

OCTAVIUS.

stroyed in the British Critick without any mercy. See also Dr. Parr's strange Letter to Dr. C. on this occasion, signed "By an Occasional Writer in the British Critick."

(y) Dr. Parr published at Birmingham what he called a "printed Paper," and after that, "a Sequel to a printed Paper," a very large pamphlet, de omni scibili, as usual.—N. B. I really think it is impossible to point out any man of learning and ability, (and Dr. Parr has both,) who has hitherto wasted his powers and attainments in such a desultory, unmeaning, wild, unconnected, and useless manner, as DR. PARR.—In nullum reipublica usum ambitiosâ loquelâ inclavit."§—I have done with him.

§ Tacit. Ann. L. 4. Sect. 20.

OCTAVIUS.

Well, if none read such works, yet all admire—

AUTHOR.

The paper?

OCTAVIUS.

Yes; ten shillings every quire: (a)

The type is Bulmer's, just like Boydell's plays:

So Mister Hayley shines in Milton's (b) rays.

M 2

In

(a) Not Dr. Parr's paper or printing, which in some of his works is sometimes scarce legible; but I allude to and condemn the general needlessly expensive manner of publishing most pamphlets and books at this time. See the Pursuits of Literature Dial. 1. If the present rage of printing on fine, creamy, wire-wove, vellum, hot-pressed paper is not stopped, the injury done to the eye from reading, and the shameful expence of the books, will in no very long time annihilate the desire of reading, and the possibility of purchasing. No new work whatsoever should be published in this manner, or Literature will destroy itself.

In one glaz'd glare tracts, sermons, pamphlets vie,
And hot-press'd nonsense claims a dignity.

AUTHOR.

Non sense or sense, I'll bear in any shape,
In gown, in lawn, in ermine, or in crape :
What's a fine type, where Truth exerts her rule?
Science is science, and a fool's a fool.

Yet all shall read, and all that page approve,
Where publick spirit meets with publick love.
Thus late, (c) where Poverty with rapine dwelt,
RUMFORD's kind genius the Bavarian felt,

Not

(b) Mr. Hayley wrote a long life, or rather a sort of defence of Milton, as I think, prefixed to Boydell's grand edition of the poet. I like neither the spirit nor the execution of Mr. H's work.

(c) See the Experimental Essays, Political, Economical, and Philosophical, by BENJAMIN, Count of RUMFORD, &c. &c. &c. I hope the Directors of the interior Government of this country will have the sense and wisdom to profit from this most valuable
and

Not by romantick charities beguil'd,
 But calm in project, and in mercy (d) mild,
 Where'er his wisdom guided, none withstood,
 Content with peace and practicable good;
 Round him the labourers throng, the nobles wait,
 Friend of the poor, and guardian of the state.

Yet all shall read, (e) when bold in strength divine,
 Prelatick virtue guards the Christian shrine, and important work, whose truly philosophick and benevolent author must feel a joy and self satisfaction, far superior to any praise which man can bestow.

Pleas'd

(d) A distinguishing feature in all his plans for the relief of the poor, the idle, the abandoned, and the wretched. The mode of conferring mercy and apparent kindness is not always mild and merciful. I have too much respect for my readers to enlarge on this virtue. May they all feel experimentally, that the merciful, in the true sense, shall obtain mercy!

(e) See the important, convincing, and eloquent Letters addressed to Thomas Paine, author of the Age of Reason 2d. part, by the Rt. Rev. Richard Watson, Bishop of Landaff, styled, "An Apology for the Bible." Every person wishes, that the Bishop had changed, or even would now change, the word "Apology" to "Defence," or any other: not that the word "apology" is absolutely improper, but because the original meaning

Pleas'd from the pomp of science to descend,
 And teach the people, as their hallow'd friend ;
 In gentle warnings to the unsettled breast,
 In all its wand'rings from the realms of rest,
 From impious scoffs and ribaldry to turn,
 And Reason's age by reason's light discern ;
 Refix insulted truth with temper'd zeal,
 And feel that joy which WATSON best can feel.

True Genius marks alone the path to life,
 And Fame invites, and prompts the noble strife,
 Her temple's everlasting doors unbarr'd,
 Desert is various, various the reward ;
 No little jealousy, no ill-tim'd sneer,
 No envy there is found, or rival fear.

Methinks on Babylon fond fancy dreams,
 Her vale of willows by the mournful streams,

Where

meaning of it is obsolete. To write such a book as this is to do a REAL SERVICE TO MANKIND.—N. B. A cheap edition of it is printed, and it is hoped, will be circulated throughout the kingdom.

Where Hebrew lyres hung (cc) mute!—o'er Sion's hill
Blows the chill blast, and baneful dews distil. (dd)

Where

(cc) "The banks of the rivers of Babylon, the Euphrates, &c. were so thickly planted with willow trees, as the learned Bochart informs us, that the country of Babylon was thence called, "The Vale of Willows," and on those trees were suspended the lyres of the captive Hebrews neglected and unstrung." See PERSIAN MISCELLANIES, by William Ouseley, Esq. 4to. p. 101. abounding with learned, pleasing, and curious information. It is one of those works, which not being adapted to general reading, should be patronised and purchased by men of fortune and education. I beg leave for the same reasons, to recommend the ingenious Mr. MAURICE's History of Hindostan in 4to, and his Indian Antiquities in 8vo. The subject is indeed in the region of fancy and of conjecture, and Mr. M's work abounds with both. But such erudition, ingenuity, and unremitting diligence, should not fail of an honourable reward. Sint hic etiam sua premia laudi.† (See also P. of L. Dial. IV.)

(dd) I read with the greatest concern, the following passage in the very learned, ingenious, and venerable bishop of Worcester's Preface to the quarto edition of Warburton's Works, concerning Dr. Lowth, one of the greatest men whom our times have produced. Dr. Hurd says; "Bishop LOWTH's reputation, as a writer, was raised chiefly on his Hebrew Literature, as displayed in those two works, his "Latin Lectures on the Hebrew poetry," and his "English version of the prophet Isaiah." The former is well and elegantly composed, but in a vein of criticism

† Virg. Æn. 1 v. 461.

Where is the charm, that sense to virtue binds,
 The social sympathy of learted minds,
 The common int'rest, universal cause,
 And all that piety to genius draws?
 How sweet to hear on that Parnassian mount,
 Mild waters welling from the favour'd fount:
 Oh, never may Castalia's streams divide
 From Siloa's brook, and Jordan's hallow'd tide.

But hark, what solemn strains from Arno's vales
 Breathe raptures wafted on the Tuscan gales!
 LORENZO rears again his awful head,
 And feels his ancient glories round him spread;
 The Muses starting from their trance revive,
 And at their Roscoe's bidding, wake and live. (c)

The
not above the common; the latter, I think, is chiefly valuable, as it shews how little may be expected from Dr. Kennicott's Work, and from a new translation of the Bible for publick use." Pref. to Warb. 4to edition, p. 94. The necessity of any observation from me, in this note; is precluded by a very able Letter to Bishop Hurd, occasioned by his Strictures on Archbishop Secker and Bishop Lowth, by a member of the University of Oxford, which I recommend to the reader.—It is one of the few pamphlets which should be preserved.

The LATIAN GENIUS vindicates his state,

And

(c) See "The Life of Lorenzo de Medici, called the Magnificent, by William Roscoe." 2 vol. 4to. I cannot but congratulate the public upon this great and important addition to Classical History, which I regard as a phenomenon in Literature, in every point of view. It is pleasing to consider a gentleman, not under the auspices of an university, or beneath the shelter of academick bowers, but in the practice of the law and business of great extent, and resident in a remote commercial town, where nothing is heard of but Guinea ships, slaves, blacks, and merchandise, in the town of Liverpool; investigating and describing the rise and progress of every polite art in Italy at the revival of learning with acuteness, depth, and precision; with the spirit of the poet, and the solidity of the historian. It is pleasing to consider this. For my own part, I have not terms sufficient to express my admiration of his genius and erudition, or my gratitude for the amusement and information I have received. I may add, that the manner in which Mr. Roscoe procured, from the libraries at Florence, many of the various inedited manuscripts with which he has enriched the appendix to his history, was singularly curious: not from a Fellow or Traveller of the Dilettanti, but from a commercial man in the intervals of his employment. I shall not violate the dignity of the work by slight objections to some modes of expression, or to a few words, or to some occasional sentiments in the Historian of a Republick. But I recommend it to our country as a work of unquestionable genius, and of uncommon merit. It adds the name of Roscoe to the very first rank of English classical Historians.

MUSARUM SPONDET CHORUS, ET ROMANUS APOLLO.† (1796.)

† Sulpiciæ Sat. v. ult.

And proudly hails the great Triumvirate, (f) and Lords of the lyre, and fathers of the song,
 In Fancy's order as they pass along.
 There musing deep in philosophick groves,
 His Tuscan Academe, (g) LORENZO roves ;
 While prophets of his great reviving name,
 From isles of fragrance and Athenian fame,
 Sages and Bards in classick pomp appear :
 BESSARION, (h) and PHILELPHO's (i) form severe ;

MARSILIUS,

(f) Dante, Boccacio, and Petrarch.

(g) See Mr. Roscoe's account of the institution of the Platonick Academy at Florence, and the Platonick festival, and the effects of it. Vol. 1. p. 160, &c. &c.

(h) Cardinal Bessarion, a learned and eloquent prelate, honoured with the purple by Pope Eugenius the 4th in 1439.—For the most ample account of the restoration of Greek literature in Italy the reader must consult the learned Hodus de Græcis Illustribus, Linguae Græcæ literarumque humaniorum Instauratoribus, which may easily be procured ; and, if convenient, Tiraboschi's History, which is voluminous. Tiraboschi was the Librarian at Modena.

(i) Philelpho.—A Professor in various sciences in different parts of Italy, who introduced many curious Greek MSS. into that country ; a man of erudition, but turbulent and intractable in his temper. " Ingenium vagum, multiplex, volubile." See also the Academie des Inscriptions, tom. 10. p. 691—751.

MARSILIUS, (k) robed in olive, Plato's priest;

(l) JANUS, with treasures from the learned East;

And he, who from Eleufis flaming bore

The torch of science to his native shore,

Fam'd CHRYSOLORAS; (m) and LANDINO (n) bold,

In studious shades high converse form'd to hold;

POLITIAN,

(k) Marsilius Ficinus, the great disciple of Plato, whose doctrines alone occupied their attention, or rather devotion, and which appeared in all his conduct and conversation.

(l) Janus Lascaris, a man of eloquence and politeness, and of imperial descent. He was a literary missionary of Lorenzo, and brought with him from the east a treasure of two hundred manuscripts. See also Hodius de Græcis Illustribus, p. 294. for several curious particulars.

(m) Emanuel Chrysolòras, styled by his contemporaries, the Patriarch of Literature, principally the Græcian.

(n) Christophero Landino, a Professor of Poetry and Rhetorick in Florence, a writer of spirit and depth of knowledge; and author of a work, once celebrated, called the "Disputationes Camaldulenses," formed on a plan similar to the Tusculan disputationes. The scene supposed is a monastery in the wood of Camaldoli. The account of it by Mr. Roscoe, is particularly pleasing and judicious, Vol. i. p. 103, &c.

POLITIAN; (nn) chief of all th'enlighten'd race
 In Lydian softness, and Horatian grace;
 Aud MICHAEL, (a) whose bold hand the gods direct,
 The sculptor, painter, poet, architect,
 Michael, to Britain dear, so Genius spoke,
 When his last praise from parting(p)Reynolds broke;

And

(nn) See Mr. Roscoe's account of that finished and polite scholar and poet, Angelo Politiano. It were an injury to abridge it.

(a) Michael Angelo Buonarotti. I wish, however, to refer the reader again to Mr. Roscoe, vol. 2. p. 201, &c. who gives animation to any subject, new or old; for I know not how it is, but as it seems to me,

HUIC Musa indulgent omnes, HUNC POSCIT APOLLO.†

(p) In Sir Joshua Reynolds's final address to the Royal Academy, as their President, he concluded an able panegyrick on that mighty master, by saying that the last word he wished to pronounce from the Chair was, "MICHAEL ANGELO." It was a word heard by the audience with the deep silence of regret. It absolutely repairs me to talk of these great men. Such is the power of departed genius!—Far pleasanter to me is the language of commendation than the tone of censure. I wish to expatiate freely, when I can, in the groves and retreats of the wise, the virtuous and the eminent, with philosophers, and statesmen, and poets, and † Vidæ Art. Poet. L. 1. v. 327.

And all whose brows, with ivy grac'd or bays,
Brighten'd their Læo's visionary days.
Names, which I long have blest, nor blest in vain!
Oh! were I number'd in their sacred train,
To realms of purest light, where heroes dwell,
Her bolder notes the willing Muse should swell
In lyric intonation grave and deep,
Nor dream with folly, nor with dulness sleep;
To Cowper and to Gifford leave the rod,
For songs celestial, and the Delian God:
Then calmly to the secret mount retire,
Bid Satire glance on folly, and expire.

OCTAVIUS.

Give me my Sabine grove, tir'd Horace cried;
For Cumæ thus the great Aquinian sigh'd:
But
and historians, and orators of higher fame. I love the regions of the morning, and the light of the sun;

Οἶκον καὶ χοροὶ ἐνὶ καὶ ἀντολῇ ἡλιασίων †

† Hom. Od. L. 12. v. 3.

But when wild waves, and wars, and tempests rage,
 Ah, who can find the soft Saturnian age?
 'Tis your's awhile to frown on claflick toys,
 Black letter Dogs, or hoary seventh-form (q) Boys;
Awhile to war with dunces, fools, and knaves,
 Hirelings of state, or opposition slaves,
 And all who dare profane the MUSE's dome;
 With idle random fierceness they may foam,
 None shall HER column's stately pride deface:
 The snake winds harmless round the marble base. (r)

(q) i. e. The modern Commentators on Shakspeare, (see Dial. 1. of the P. of L.) and the translators (not quite The Septuagint) of Gray's Elegy into Greek. See Dial. 3. of the P. of L. v. 1. to v. 60.

(r) My friend Octavius means by this allusion to observe, that the proper, constant, and undeviating application of time, learning, and talents, must ultimately resist the malignity of criticism, and rise superior to temporary neglect, in any department of literature, of government, or of society. And as I concluded the first part of this Poem with a sentence from Swift, I wish to recommend another from that great master of life, as obvious perhaps, and as little attended to. The sentence is this: "It is an uncontroled truth, THAT NO MAN EVER MADE AN ILL FIGURE, WHO UNDERSTOOD HIS OWN TALENTS, NOR A GOOD ONE, WHO MISTOOK THEM."

END OF THE THIRD DIALOGUE.

THE DIALOGUES
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE FOURTH AND LAST.

Οὐδ' αλαοσκοπὴν ἔχει κρείων Εὐροστίδων·
Καὶ γὰρ ὁ θαυμάζων ἦτορ Πτολεμοντι Μαχάντι,
Ἰψὺ ἐπ' ἀκροτάτης κορυφῆς Σαμῦ ὕλησσης
Θρηίκης· ἐνθὲν γὰρ εἴφαινετο πάντα μιν ἰδὴ
Φαιντο δὲ Πριάμοιο πόλις, καὶ νῆες Ἀχαιῶν.
Λύτικα δ' ἐξορίος κατέβησάτο παῖπαλοινοῖς.
ΤΡΙΣ μιν ὀρέξαν' ἰών, ΤΟ ΔΕ ΤΕΤΡΑΤΟΝ ἴκιστο τιμῶν.
Αἰγὰι, ἐνθα δὲ οἱ κλυτὰ δώματα ΒΕΝΘΕΣΙ ΛΙΜΝΗΣ
Χρυσία, μαρμαίροντα τιτυχάται, ἀφθίτα αἰνί.

HOM. II. 13. v. 10.

But when I saw the...
Ah, who are you? the son of...
The young man... in a...
...

...

...

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE

And all who are... the...
...

With the... the...
...

DIALOGUE THE FOURTH AND LAST

None... the...
...

The... the...
...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

PREFACE

TO THE

FOURTH AND LAST DIALOGUE (a)

OF THE

PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

L'OMERA SUA TORNA CH'ERA DIPARTITA!

Dante.

"Hear his speech, but say thou nought."

"But one word more:—"

"He will not be commanded!"

Macbeth.

AS I have now brought my Poem to the conclusion which I intended, it is proper and, as I think, respectful to offer some considerations to the publick, for whose use it was written. No imitation of any writer or of any poem was proposed, except the adherence to the principles of just composition, and a general observation of the finished models of classical literature, be considered as such. In

N

the

(a) First printed in July 1797.

the Preface to the First Dialogue I said, what I now repeat, that I would not have printed it, but from a full conviction of its tendency to promote the publick welfare. My particular ideas on the nature and subject of SATIRE I expressed clearly and fully in the Advertisement to the Second Dialogue, and under the influence and impression of those sentiments I wrote the Poem. In my introduction to the Third Dialogue, feeling the importance of my subject in its various branches, I asserted that, "LITERATURE, well or ill conducted, is THE GREAT ENGINE by which," "I am fully persuaded, ALL CIVILIZED STATES must" "ultimately be supported or overthrown." I am now more and more deeply impressed with this truth, if we consider the nature, variety, and extent, of the word, Literature. We are no longer in an age of ignorance, and information is not partially distributed according to the ranks, and orders, and functions, and dignities of social life. All learning has an index, and every science its abridgment. I am scarcely able to name any man whom I consider as wholly ignorant. We no longer look exclusively for learned authors in the usual place, in the retreats of academic erudition, and in the seats of religion. Our peasantry now read the Rights of Man on mountains, and moors, and by the way side; and shepherds make the analogy between their occupation and that of their governors. Happy indeed, had they been taught to make no other comparison. Our unsexed female writers now instruct, or confuse us and themselves in the labyrinth of politicks, or turn us wild with Gallick frenzy.

But there is one publication of the time too peculiar, and too important to be passed over in a general reprehension. There is nothing with which it may be compared.

A le-

A legislator in our own parliament, a member of the House of Commons of Great Britain, an elected guardian and defender of the laws, the religion and the good manners of the country, has neither scrupled nor blushed to depict, and to publish to the world, the arts of lewd and systematick seduction, and to thrust upon the nation the most open and unqualified blasphemy against the very code and volume of our religion. And all this, with his name, style, and title, prefixed to the novel or romance called "THE MONK." (b) And one of our publick-theatres has

N 2

allured

NOTE.

(b) "THE MONK, a Romance in three volumes by M. Lewis, Esq. M. P." printed for Bell, Oxford Street. At first I thought that the name and title of the author were fictitious, and some of the public papers hinted it. But I have been solemnly and repeatedly assured by the Bookseller himself, that it is the writing and publication of M. LEWIS, Esq. Member of Parliament. It is sufficient for me to point out Chap. 7. of Vol. 2. As a composition, the work would have been better, if the offensive and scandalous passages had been omitted, and it is disgraced by a diablerie and nonsense fitted only to frighten children in the nursery. I believe this 7th Chap. of Vol. 2. is indisputable at Common Law. Edmund Curl in the first year of George II. was prosecuted by the Attorney General (Sir Philip Yorke, afterwards Lord Hardwicke) for printing two obscene books. The Attorney General set forth the several obscene passages, and concluded, that it was an offence against the King's peace. The defendant was found guilty and set in the pillory.* See Str. 788. 1 Barnardist. 29. We

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

* The indictment (in Mich. Term 1 G. II. begins thus: "Edmund Curl, Existens homo iniquus et sceleratus nequiter machinans et intendens bonos mores subditorum hujus regni corrumpere, et eos ad nequitiam inducere, quendam obscenum libellum intitulas," &c. &c.—See Sir John Strange's Rep. p. 777. Ed. 1782. In allured the public attention still more to this novel, by a scenic representation of an Episode in it. "O Proceres, Censore"

NOTE.

We know the proceedings against the book, entitled "Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," by John Cleland. To the passages of obscenity, (which certainly I shall not copy in this place) Mr. Lewis has added BLASPHEMY AGAINST THE SCRIPTURES; if the following passages may be considered as such. "He (the Monk) examined the book which she (Antonia) had been reading, and had now placed upon the table. It was THE BIBLE. 'How,' said the Prior to himself, 'Antonia reads the Bible, and is still so ignorant?' But upon further inspection he found that Elvira (the mother of Antonia) had made exactly the same remark. That prudent mother, while she admired the beauties of THE SACRED WRITINGS, was convinced, that unrestricted, no reading more improper could be permitted a young woman. Many of the narratives can only tend to excite ideas the worst calculated for a female breast; every thing is called roundly and plainly by its own name; and THE ANNALS OF A BROTHEL WOULD SCARCELY FURNISH A GREATER CHOICE OF INDECENT EXPRESSIONS. Yet this is the book which young women are recommended to study, which is put into the hands of children, able to comprehend little more than those passages of which they had better remain ignorant, and which but too frequently inculcate the first rudiments of vice, and give the first alarm to the still sleeping passions. Of this Elvira was so fully convinced, that she would have preferred putting into her daughter's hands Amadis de Gaul, or the Valiant Champion Tirante the White;

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

two or three days after the point had been solemnly argued, and the judges had given their respective opinions, Sir J. Strange observes, "They gave it as their unanimous opinion, that this was a temporal offence." And they declared also that if the famous case of the Queen against Read (6 Ann. in B. R.) was to be adjudged (by them) they should rule it otherwise; i. e. contrary to Lord Ch. J. Holt's opinion.—The Judges were Sir Robert (afterwards Lord) Raymond, Fortescue, Reynolda, and Probyn.

Censere opus est, an Haruspice nobis ?" I consider this as a new species of legislative or state-parricide. What is it to the kingdom at large, or what is it to all those whose office

N 3

NOTE.

"White; and would sooner have authorised her studying the lewd exploits of Don Galaor, or the lascivious jokes of the Damzel 'Plazer de mi vida.' (p. 247, 248.) &c. I state only what is printed. It is for others to read it and to judge. The falshood of this passage is not more gross than its impiety. In the case of Thomas Woolston, in the 2d. of George II. for blasphemous discourses against our Saviour's miracles, when arrest of judgment was moved; Lord Raymond and the whole Court declared they would not suffer it to be debated, whether to write against Christianity in general (not concerning controverted points between the learned, but in general) was not an offence punishable in the temporal Courts of Common Law. Woolston was imprisoned one year, and entered into a large recognizance for his good behaviour during life. Sir Philip Yorke, afterwards Lord Hardwicke, was Attorney General at the time. The case of the King against Annet, when the Hon. Charles Yorke was Attorney General, (3d of Geo. III.) for a blasphemous book entitled "The Free Inquirer," tending, among other points, to ridicule, traduce and discredit the HOLY SCRIPTURES, is well known to the profession. The punishment was uncommonly severe. Whether the passage I have quoted in a popular novel, has not a tendency to corrupt the minds of the people, and of the younger unsuspecting part of the female sex; by traducing and discrediting THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, is a matter of publick consideration.—"This book goes all over the kingdom;" are the words of Judge Reynolds, in the case of E. Curl. What Mr. Lewis has printed publicly with his name, that I state publicly to the nation. Few will dissent from the opinion of Lord Raymond and the Court, in the case of Curl above stated, as reported by Strange and Barnardiston to this effect; "Religion is part of the common law," and therefore whatever is an offence against that, is an offence against THE COMMON LAW." With this opinion, I conclude the note.

office it is to maintain truth, and to instruct the rising abilities and hope of England, that the author of it is a very young man? That forsooth he is a man of genius and fancy? So much the worse. That there are very poetical descriptions of castles and abbies in this novel? So much the worse again, the novel is more alluring on that account. Is this a time to poison the waters of our land in their springs and fountains? Are we to add incitement to incitement, and corruption to corruption, till there neither is, nor can be, a return to virtuous action and to regulated life? Who knows the age of this author? I presume, very few. Who does not know, that he is a Member of Parliament? He has told us all so himself. I pretend not to know, (Sir John Scott does know, and practises too, whatever is honourable, and virtuous, and dignified in learning and professional ability) I pretend not, I say, to know, whether this be an object of parliamentary animadversion. Prudence may possibly forbid it. But we can feel that it is an object of moral and of national reprehension, when a Senator openly and daringly violates his first duty to his (d) country. There are wounds, and obstructions, and diseases in the political, as well as in the natural body, for which the removal of the part affected is alone efficacious. At an hour like this, are we to stand in consultation on the remedy, when not only the disease is ascertained,

NOTE.

(d) All members of the legislature, Peers, or Commoners, should join in sentiment and in character with the Athenian orator, and be considered as speaking to their country in these words:—

“Ἡμεῖς, δις ἱερὰ καὶ ταῖς προγόνων ὑπαρχουσιν ἐν τῇ Πατρίδι, καὶ διατρέβαι, καὶ συνθηκαὶ μετ’ ὑμῶν εὐεργετοὶ, καὶ γαμοὶ κατὰ τὰς νόμους, καὶ κηδεσται, καὶ τινα, ἀξιοὶ τῆς ὑμετέρας πίστεως. κτλ. Æschin: περί Παραπρεσβείας.”

Sect. 11.

certained, but the very stage of the disease, and its specific symptoms? Are we to spare the sharpest instruments of authority and of censure, when public establishments are gangrened in the life organs?

I fear, if our legislators are wholly regardless of such writings, and of such principles, among their own members, it may be said to them, as the Roman Satirist said to the patricians of the empire, for offences slight indeed, when compared to these:

"At vos Trojugenæ vobis ignoscitis, et quæ Turpia cædoni Volesos Brutosque docebunt." (e)

There is surely something peculiar in these days; something wholly unknown to our ancestors. But men, however dignified in their political station, or gifted with genius and fortune, and accomplishments, may at least be made ashamed, or alarmed, or convicted before the tribunal of public opinion. Before that tribunal, and to the law of reputation, and every binding and powerful sanction by which that law is enforced, is Mr. LEWIS this day called to answer.

I would also, in this place, select a work by a Roman Catholick Divine, for that animadversion it so solemnly demands. I mean the Preface to the Second volume of DR. GEDDES's Translation of the Bible. I really would not trust myself to criticize the Translation itself, after I had read the fifth Chapter of Judges, v. 30. where for the words, "To every man a damsel or two," Dr. Geddes translator, translates, by way of a spirited and inviting improvement, "A Girl, A COUPLE OF GIRLS to each brave man!" I will have nothing to do with THE DOCTOR'S Bravery; but I intend to make a few observations on the Preface alone, which is very extraordinary indeed, and by no means in the spirit which the sacred writings seem to recommend. I am always pleased with every serious attempt to elucidate the Scriptures, and am as ready as any man to acknowledge the merit and learning of an industrious and ingenious scholar. But though I differ essentially from Dr. Geddes, I am sure I shall never call him "apostate, infidel, or heretick" in general terms, as he knows some persons will do; (Pref. p. 4.) but I may oppose an opinion to an opinion. The cause in which he is engaged is not a trifling cause, nor is it, as we are sometimes told, an object of mere classical criticism. I think there is an unbecoming levity in the Doctor's manner more frequently than I could wish, and he expresses his sentiments in language not easily understood at all times, nor according to the genius and common grammar of the English tongue. But his meaning and opinion is, that "the Historical Books of the Old Testament were not divinely inspired." He tells us (p. 12.) of "a partial and putative inspiration," and that the writers had not "a perpetual and unerring sufflation." I do not quite understand the terms, as they are too sublime for a plain Englishman, but I suppose they are very fine, and I suppose their meaning from other sentences in the preface. He says, (p. 3.) that "The Hebrew Historians wrote them from such human documents as they could find, popular traditions, old songs, and public registers." Singular materials truly for divine inspiration! But he says also, "I venture (and

N 4

"it

"it is indeed venturing a great deal) I venture to lay it
 "down as a certain truth, that there is no intrinsic evi"dence of the Jewish Historians being divinely inspired;
 "that there is nothing in the style, or arrangement, in the "whole colour or complexion of their compositions, that "speaks the guidance of an unerring spirit, but that on the "contrary, every thing proclaims the fallible and failing "writer." (p. 5.) Dr. G. declares also, "After reading
 "the Hebrew writings, and finding to his full conviction
 "so many intrinsic marks of fallibility, error and in"consistency, not to say downright absurdity;" (p. 11.) he could not believe their inspiration, even if he were taught it by an angel. I have thus introduced the reader to the Doctor's most explicit opinion; but I will also present him with his solemn affirmation, and he will easily decide on the propriety, the reasoning, and the consistency of it. "I "value them not the less, (says Dr. Geddes) "because I "deem them not divinely inspired." (p. 12.) If a man can seriously assert, that the Scriptures inspired by God (upon that supposition being granted) are not more valuable than the productions of a mere fallible wretched creature like man, in his best estate, I really could not lose my time in argument with that man however learned, or however gifted. He has degraded himself from that rank of literature and of sound understanding, which gives him a title to be answered. Dr. Geddes, as a scholar, should re-consider his character, and as a professed Christian, he should re-examine his principles. I cannot discuss the doctrine of inspiration in this place; it cannot be expected that I should. But the tendency of all the proceedings of our scholars and guides in literature, and in the state, and in religion, should be carefully watched. The open blasphemy

phemy and low scurrility of Thomas Paine has been set aside by just argument, and the law of the land has armed itself against its effect in society.* Mr. LEWIS, Member of Parliament, has attacked the Bible, as I have just shewn, in another and in a shorter manner †, blasphemous as far as it goes, and tending to discredit and traduce its authority. And last Dr. GEDDES, a Translator of the Bible, versed in the original language and in Hebrew criticism, has now begun his attack also on the historical parts, which, if they are not part of the inspired writings, are not intitled to the name of sacred Scriptures. It is difficult to say, where these attacks will end. The times are so precarious, and revolt from all authority human and divine so frequent, that the magistrate, the satirist, and the critick have an united office. If the historical parts of the Bible are given up, another man will arise and object to the poetical parts. These will be allowed to have sublimity, and dignity; but it will be asked, why should they be considered as inspired? All poetry, we shall be told, is in some sense inspired; Homer and Æschylus and Shakespeare, and why not the Hebrew bards. The moral portion of the Scriptures is evidently full of wisdom and of the soundest sense, and I suppose we shall soon hear it may be the work of a philosopher, and that morality is not matter of inspiration. A fourth writer may

NOTE.

* I am glad to bear testimony to the excellence of Mr. Erskine's eloquent declamation in the court of K. B. in the cause, on Newton, Boyle, Locke, and other great men, the defenders of Christianity.—But my general opinion of Mr. Erskine's talent for writing and publick speaking is very different. Out of Westminster Hall he absolutely sinks into nothing. Tantum in pistrinum aliquod detrudi et compingi videtur. (See a future note on this Poem, Dial. 4.)

† In "The Monk, a Romance." See above. Pref. p. 195. of Dialogue 4.

may first insinuate with great respect, and then prove that all prophecy is ambiguous; and that the prophecies in the Bible may be conjectural, and therefore no reliance can be had on their inspiration. Lastly we may be loosely and indiscriminately told, that the doctrinal parts are so much above as well as contrary † to human reason, that they could not come from God. Thus might the whole fabrick vanish into air, into thin air: or to reverse Mr. Gibbon's phrase, thus might "the triumphant banner of the heathen Capitol be again erected on the ruins of the Church of Christ." Still we are to sit silent, still we are to hear with patience the outrageous presumption of man before his merciful Creator! while "The world and its adorable AUTHOR, his attributes and essence, his power, and rights, and duty (I tremble to pronounce the word) be all brought together to be judged—BEFORE US."§ We are to assemble in the Temple with all our princes, and lords, and potentates,

NOTE.

† As the subject is so important, and words are so frequently misapplied or misapprehended; it is always of use to remember the words Faith and Reason, as contradistinguished to each other. Mr. Locke has defined them with a clearness and a precision which never can be exceeded, and which never should be forgotten, in thought or in conversation. "REASON, as contradistinguished to Faith, I take to be the discovery of the certainty or probability of such propositions or truths, which the mind arrives at by deductions made from such ideas which it has got by the use of its natural faculties, namely, by sensation or reflection.—FAITH, on the other side, is the assent to any proposition not thus made out by the deductions of reason, but upon the credit of the proposer, as coming from God, in some extraordinary way of communication. This way of discovering truths to men, we call Revelation." Locke's Essay on the H. U. B. 4. C. 18. An attention to this accurate definition would prevent all confusion, and oftentimes, very idle or profane jargon in conversation. Mr. Locke's whole chapter on this subject should be studied.

potentates, and venerable orders, and our high officers, in all the gradations and dignities of our state and hierarchy, till some CHAMPION of anarchy and infidelity be brought forth, as in sport, and placed between the pillars. He may "bow himself with all his might," but his strength, I trust, will not be from above; he will "feel the nature of the pillars whereupon the house standeth!" I speak this in general. I do not apply it to Dr. Geddes, or any such scholar. It is not now for the first time that the Canon, and the inspiration, and the authenticity of the Scriptures have been examined; and their internal evidence has often taught a different lesson. I cannot help offering one suggestion, as it is new to me. If there is a subject in the Bible which has been particularly singled out for profane ridicule, it is that of Jonah being swallowed up in the whale's belly three days and three nights. Yet, as if to confound human wisdom, or sagacity, or vanity, and as an eternal lesson to human presumption on the fitness and unfitness of

NOTE.

§ Ogden's Sermons, Hallifax's edit. vol. 1. p. 2.—There was something peculiarly amiable in the kind and disinterested office which the late Bishop of St. Asaph, Dr. HALLIFAX, undertook in the vindication of the memory and writings of two great men, (qualer et quantos viros?) Bishop Butler and Dr. Ogden. It will be an eternal honour to that very acute, learned, and most judicious prelate. Cicero shall speak for this prelate. No man once better understood the strength and application of his language, when he filled the professorial chair of Civil Law, the ULPIAN of his day, in the University of Cambridge. "Idoneus meâ quidem sententiâ, præsertim quum et ipse Eum audierit et scribat de mortuo; ex quo nulla suspicio est amicitie causâ eum esse mentitum." Cic. de Clar. Orat. Sect. 15. What such a writer as Dr. Hallifax has told, who would tell again? I only speak in honour to the memory of a Scholar, whose name, and high attainments in science, should be recorded. Το γὰρ γινώσκω τοι θαύμαζω.

the subjects of inspiration, THE SAVIOUR OF THE WORLD HIMSELF thought proper to choose and to appropriate this event TO HIMSELF. § “As Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale’s belly, so shall THE SON OF MAN be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth!” St. Matt. c. 12. v. 40.—I solemnly protest, I have no other object in view in whatever I have written, but the good of man in all his best interests, complicated as they are, at this awful and pressing hour. More is yet in our power than we may even imagine; but all the orders of the state must unite vigorously and powerfully in their specifick functions to preserve it. The priests and ministers of the Lord must also stand between the porch and the altar, and exert themselves “before their eyes begin to wax dim that they may not see, and ere the lamp of God goeth out in the temple of the Lord, WHERE THE ARK OF GOD WAS!”†—I am desirous that all persons of literature and good sense, and lovers of their country, should be convinced to what end we may at last be conducted, if we are not aware of our danger.

But to return. The objects of publick regret and offence are now so numerous and so complicated, that all the milder offices of the Muse have lost their influence and attraction. It is indeed unfortunate that scarce a subject in literature can be interesting without the science and matter of politicks. They give a colour to our very

NOTE.

§ Ἰησοῦς Ἰωάνη τῷ Προφῆτῃ! are the very words of Christ. Can words be more explicit? Yet a German professor, J. G. Ecchhorn, the successor of the great Michaelis, thinks it justifiable to expel the prophetick book of Jonah from the present canon or the Scripture.—See his German Introduction to the Old Testament.

† Sam. b. 1. ch. 3. v. 3.

very thoughts. (f) We are borne down with a force not to be resisted,

NOTE.

(f) "Quibus occupatus et obsessus animus quantum loci bonis artibus relinquit!" Dialog. de Oratoribus C. 29.—I cannot resist giving an opinion at this time. (July 1797.) My prime objection to any proposed Ministry of Mr. Fox and his adherents is this. I believe their principles are too popular for the good, the safety, or perhaps for the existence, of this country under its present constitution. I believe, that their design is to throw such a weight of power into the House of Commons, by means of a Reform, as would ultimately mould the two Houses of Parliament not merely into a resemblance, but into the actual form and relative power of the Council of Five Hundred, and the Council of Ancients. I am also of opinion, that the authority and influence of the Crown of Great Britain, would be reduced far below that which is lodged in the Executive Directory of France. I think the proposed Reforms lead, beyond a controversy, to this issue. I conceive, that a great Personage, in the case of a change of Mr. Pitt's Ministry, must be apprehensive, to whom he is to be delivered, and to what he may be reduced. The pride of a statesman's understanding, like Mr. Fox's, in the plenitude of dignity, will overbear all ideas of a balance of power in the orders of the state, and of the safety of the country, upon its ancient principles. He has declared his opinion; he must not recede. All will be sacrificed to that pride in a moment of phrenzy. The example of every state, nation, and city, subdued by French arms, French principles, and French treachery, is to be weighed well, as an awful warning in this kingdom, which may yet be preserved. The encroachments of such a statesman, as Mr. Fox, (paramount as he is in ability and in political eloquence beyond any man) are to be watched and resisted by all who think soberly, and are independent of party. Yet Mr. Fox neither could, nor would, satisfy the raving and tyrannical ideas of Horne Tooke and the French crew. They would make use of him to a certain point. They would then declare him an enemy to his country, and conduct him to the scaffold. "Corpora lentè augescunt, cito extinguuntur."§ The security of property, publick and private, is shaken by the proposed system, and a Revolution (which we never yet have known but in mere name) might then be at hand. A govern-

§ Tacit. Agric. ap. init.

resisted, when our very existence, as a nation under its ancient laws, and constitution, and establishments, has been rendered dubious. I would particularly recommend the serious perusal of the account given by Thucydides of the democratick sedition in Corcyra. The reader would be convinced, that the same peculiarities mark all popular seditions and insurrections, the same pretexts, the same motives. The insurgents declare the friends of the lawful and established government enemies to the popular representation and interest. Some of these insurgents have private enmities to revenge, and others have debts to cancel. Death is the universal solvent. (ff) The historian observes, they held forth either the specious offer of greater equality of power among the citizens, or a more temperate form of aristocracy,

NOTE.

ment which once relaxes, is not easily recalled to the vigour of its ancient principles. We have among us statesmen of determined and of true patriotism, and this final misery may yet be prevented. We have a King, who has courage, virtue, and firmness. Of his Minister, the Right Hon. Wm. Pitt, I have given my opinion often in another place; I have not altered my sentiments.

I certainly cannot say with the great Satirist under Louis the 14th,

“Que ma vue à COLBERT inspiroit l'allégresse.” §

I speak, and I have spoken, most impartially of Mr. PITT. I am neither for a proscription of any political talents, nor for an hereditary claim to the publick office of Prime Minister. But if the principles of any statesman are such, as to induce a real and effectual change in the government, that statesman should not be admitted to rule. If the ancient and established principles of (ff) Hear the great Historian: “Τὴν μὲν αὐτίαν ἐπιφέροντες τοῖς τοῖν ἄνθρωποις καταλύουσιν. Ἀπιδανόν τινες ἰδίαις ἐχθραῖς ἰνέα, καὶ ἄλλοι χρημάτων σφίσιν οφειλομένων ὑπὸ τῶν λαβόντων. L. 3. Sect. 81.

§ Boileau Ep. 10.

policy, or some state expedient varying with the hour; but each leader in reality had his own private views of ambition, or power, or riches, but accommodated his speeches to the prevailing humour of the day. (g) This

NOTE.

of the English constitution are maintained, a Prime Minister may conduct publick affairs, even with a mediocrity of talent. It is neither Mr. Pitt, nor Lord Lansdown, nor Mr. Fox, nor Mr. Grey, who are necessary to the function. But, by the disastrous consent of the whole nation and its Parliament, thinking rightly, proposing soundly, and meaning honestly, are nothing without SPEAKING WELL.—Let me add a word or two on a subject not quite foreign to this note.—The example of a very learned and, in my opinion, of a very virtuous and honourable man, to whom the country is under much obligation, Mr. REEVES, will deter any man from volunteer effusions in favour of any Minister. It would not be amiss, to be sure, if Mr. R. or any other writer, would read Aristotle and Quintilian on tropes and metaphors, before he adorns his native language with all the richness of imagery, and exerts the command, which nature gives him, over the figures of speech. Trunco, non frondibus, efficit umbram. For my own part, when his pamphlet, “Thoughts on the English Government,” was published, I never felt more indignation than when I saw this gentleman ungenerously and shamefully abandoned, and given up by Mr. Pitt in the H. of Commons to the malice of his avowed enemies, and to a criminal prosecution in the Court of King’s Bench. He was solemnly acquitted of any libellous intentions; but his language was imprudent. He fell a victim to metaphorical luxuriance † and state-botany.—(See “Thoughts &c.” as above, pag. 12 and 13 for Mr. Reeves’s Simile of the Constitutional Tree and its Branches.)

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

† It was the deep and important observation of Aristotle; Εὐ μεταφορῶν ἔστιν εὐ θεωρεῖν.—See also the tenth chapter of Aristotle’s Rhetorick, Book 3. which I recommend to all political writers and speakers; De Urbanis Metaphoris, or περὶ τῶν αἰσθητῶν, καὶ τῶν εὐδοκίμωνων. Those great critics, Messrs. Fox and Sheridan, differed however essentially from Aristotle in this point, in their Commentaries, read publickly in the H. of C. on this text: Τῶν Μεταφορῶν εὐδοκίμοις μάλιστα αἱ κατὰ ἀναλογίαν. Rhet. L. 3. c. 10. s. 3.

as we have all known; has been transacted step by step upon a great and tremendous scale in France. The Italian and Belgian states are following them with headstrong and infuriate revolution. We have indeed more to PRESERVE THAN ANY OTHER COUNTRY under heaven; and we may, by wise regulations, hereafter, restore even the finances of the state. We must never forget that the stability of our present Constitution is the sole stability of all property, publick and private. I speak from awful and trembling conviction, OUR RUIN CAN BE EFFECTED BY POLITICAL REFORM ALONE, and our Enemies at home, and in France, know that I speak the truth. We in Great Britain, who are yet in a condition to preserve ourselves, see and read and feel these things. The grant of one demand leads necessarily to another when any material alteration in a state or government is conceded. If the second is refused after the first has been granted, we are then told, that there is a want of consistence in the plan, and that it were more advisable to have kept the state as it was, than to admit only a partial reform. We surely cannot be said to be duped and fooled by Reformers, without warning from history and from experience. The constitutional statesmen of Great-Britain cannot now be ignorant of the nature of "Modern Reform in any state of Europe." The greater the
O difficulty

NOTE.

(g) Hear Thucydides again in his own language. "Οι εν ταις πολιτειν προσταντις μετ' ονοματις ικανοι ευπειθες, πληθυσ Ισοπορειας πολειτικης, και Αριστοκρατίας ευφρονος προσημαρ, τα μεν κοινω λόγω διαπραγμαρτις αλλα επωκντο, παρτι-δε τροπω αγωνιζομενοι αλληλων περιμνησθαι—και η μετ' ψηφου αδικια καταγνωσας, η χειρ' εταρμιναι το κρατιν, ιτοιμοι ησαν την αυτικη φιλοτικιαν επιμειλαναι." Ib. Sect. 82.

difficulty and danger, the greater the fury of the Revolutionists. Pindar was a poet and a statesman; he said: *Ἀνθρώπων Ἐγὼ τὸν ὀκρίσας ἡνείκεν A man of a poetical mind either wanders into futurity, or recalls the images of other times and of other empires. He can sometimes even descend into the regions of terrifick fable, and give to his own country the sentiments and passions of antiquity, and body forth contending parties which are no more, of the virtuous and the valiant, of the wicked, the desperate, and the frantick. At such an hour as the present, and with the objects which we see and hear and feel, with the exultation of the bad, and the dejection of the good, and the labours of great statesmen to preserve us from final misery, can we forbear to contemplate the picture drawn by that poet, whose only Muses were Cæsar, and Brutus, and Cato, and the genius of expiring Rome.†

Tristis FELICIBUS UMBRIS

*Vultus erat; vidi Decios natumque patremque, Lustrales bellis animas, flentemque Camillum.
Abruptis Catilina minax fractisque catenis
Exultat, Mariique truces nudique Cethegi:
Vidi ego lætantes, popularia nomina, Drufos
Legibus immodicos, ausosque ingentia Gracchos.
Æternis chalybum nodis, et carcere Ditis
Constrictæ plausere manus, CAMPOSQUE PIORUM
POSCIT TURBA NOCENS! (gg)*

The

NOTE.

* Nem. Od. ii.

† Lucan. Pharsal. L. 6. v. 784.

(gg) In the great question of a Reform in Parliament (i. e. in the House of Commons) I certainly do not mean to call figuratively

The present Poem was not composed for a trivial purpose, or without mature thought. It is the fruit and study of

O 2.

N O T E.

figuratively the Ministerial ground, the Campi Piorum, but I call the Constitution of England and its defenders, in or out of Parliament, by that name. Nor would I by any means rank the gentlemen of opposition with the Turba nocens. That turba nocens are the levellers and the partisans of democracy and revolution. But the licence of poetry we are told is considerable, if assumed with modesty. The question itself has nothing to do with invention, though, as I think, much fiction is employed in the support of it. I am of opinion, that in the outset there is a fiction or a deceit. We are told we must recur to the original principle of the H. of C. the principle, as I suppose, on which it was founded, and that principle is declared to be popular in the modern sense of that word. In this argument historical truth is not asserted; I would maintain, that it is violated. It is contrary to matter of fact. The very origin of the House itself (the best antiquaries will tell you so) is rather doubtful. The more remote your enquiry, the greater the demonstration of its original weakness, nay, (I say it with grief) of its political insignificance. It was a Council, which grew out of a greater Council, and it was designed to represent the property of the kingdom. I will not insult my reader with information on the subject. But it is matter of plain historical knowledge that its powers, its functions, its freedom, and its consequence have been all progressive to a certain period. That period was the Revolution (as it is foolishly called) in 1688. At that æra the House of Commons under the Old Whigs, attained to the consummation of its glory and to the fulness of its dignity. As I here speak of the original principle, I have nothing to do with the subsequent corruptions. I must own I do not wish for the famous Roman plate of brass; I am for no unqualified Lex Regia.† Let it rest in

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

† See a Dissertation "de Ænea Tabula Capitolina Romæ 1757." Heineccius and Gravina also published this "Lex Regia."

of an independent and disinterested life, passed without the intumbrance of a profession or the embarrassment of business.

NOTE.

in the Capitoline Museum, that splendid effort of Michael Angelo. I abhor abject servility and all its monuments. I never wished, I am sure I do not now wish, to see any Senate divest itself of all power. I would not see a Vespasian in any country make and repeal laws, or exercise unlimited authority, without the advice and consent of a well-constituted Senate. I venerate the institution of the House of Commons, and would preserve it with my life; but I shall raise up no tree, trunk or branches, for a fatal simile, like Mr. Reeves. I look for no pasture in the fields of Ministers or of Booksellers: nor would I be turned out by Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheridan to graze on the verdant lawns of the King's Bench, once intended for the Chief Justice of Newfoundland, or at best to grub and delve in Mr. Pitt's Strawyard. I neither recur to Montesquieu nor to Machiavel. I want not to be told by the former, that "our system was found in the woods," or to hear from Signor Machiavel and Mr. Fox, that "States may grow out of shape." For my

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

"Regia." It may be read at full length in Gruteri Inscript: Antiq. By this Law the Roman Senate in the most abject stile authorised Vespasian to make and repeal laws, to declare peace and war, and to exercise every act of an absolute sovereign, without waiting for their consent or even asking their advice.—This authority however was not granted to all the Emperors indiscriminately; they selected (before Vespasian) Augustus, Tiberius, and Claudius. I leave the reader to his own reflections.

§ The words of Machiavel quoted by Mr. Fox in the H. of C. on May 26, 1797, in his speech on the reform of Parliament. The founders of the French Republick, and the Re-founders of it (for it has been founded three time already) seem always to have had Michiavel's Discourses on Livy in their view.

business. It was not intended merely to raise a smile at folly or conceit; but it was written with indignation against my own part, I would rather find a system in the woods, than in modern France; and I do not look for a new political Dancing Master every time there is a twist in the body. To hear Mr. Fox, as I perpetually do in the House, one would really think he was a rival to Vestris or Diderot. He has been long trying his art and giving lessons to Mr. Pitt gratis. That Right Honourable Gentleman's gait still continues as awkward and stiff as usual. He will not bend. A graceful bow is not his ambition, and Mr. Fox dances before him every day without the least effect. Mr. Fox, I believe, is of the opinion and principle of Monsieur Marcel, the famous dancing master in Queen Anne's reign, who said, when the Earl of Oxford was made Prime Minister, "He was surprised, and could not tell what the Queen could see in him, for his own part he never could make any thing of him." To be sure Mr. PITT is every day placed between THE DANCING MASTER AND HIS MAN, but he has not yet learned grace from Mr. Fox, or wit from Mr. Sheridan. Indeed I have been informed that, the three celebrated Dancers and view. He says, that if any power or powers, (princes, warriors, or demagogues) take or subdue any city, province, or realm, "they should make all things new in the state." The words are most particular. "Fare ogni cosa di nuovo in quello stato, nelle Città fare nuovi governi con nuovi nomi, con nuova autorità, con nuovi nomini, fare i poveri ricchi, disfare delle vecchie città, cambiare gli abitatori da un luogo ad un altro, e in somma, non lasciare cosa niuna, e che non via sia nè grado, nè ordine, nè stato, nè ricchezza, che chi la tiene non la riconosca." "DATE!" Machiav. Discorsi Lib. 1. Chap. 6. The French have religiously observed the advice. We are told in the H. of C. by Mr. Fox, that the authority of Machiavel is great. In my opinion, ALL TYRANNY is uniform in its maxims.

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

against wickedness, against the prostitution of superior talents, and the prophane violence of bad men. It was indeed and Ballet masters, Messrs. Fox, Sheridan, and Grey, are preparing a new Serious Divertisement, or Pas de Trois, with new scenes, dresses and decorations, called, "LE DIRECTOIRE EXECUTIF." If it can be got up time enough, it will be brought forward this season; but as there is a necessity for a re-inforcement of the troop FROM PARIS, it is feared the old dances must continue to the end of this season, June 1797. It is proposed that light should be thrown on the stage in a quite new manner; but the Ballet-masters will suffer no persons to be on the stage, or to view the machinery behind the scenes. Lord Galloway and Lady Mary Duncan have expressed their approbation of this rule, so much for the interest of THE GRAND OPERA: though the noble Earl is contented with the present Grand Ballet-Master.—On a kindred topick I would observe to the classical reader another singular circumstance in ancient times. It is from the Roman state. Since we have all been arming at home with alacrity and prudence, and (what is consequent to that) with effect, against our enemy, and the militia laws have been extended, it is curious to call to mind the emphatick clause in the ancient Roman law concerning the exemption of particular persons from military service, called "DE VACATIONE," as learned Civilians well know. The Clause is this: "Nisi BEL-LUM GALLICUM exoriatur;" in which case not even the Priests were exempted. I will illustrate this law from Plutarch and Cicero, but I will not translate the passages. Plutarch has this singular remark in the life of Marcellus: "Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ μέγα ἢ τι χρεὼν παρῆχε φόβον, διὰ τὴν γυντνιασιν, ὁμοῦ καὶ προσοικῶν πόλεμον συνοιστομένοις, καὶ τὸ παλαιὸν ἀξίωμα τῶν Γαλατῶν" (the Gauls or French) ὅς μαλιστα Ῥωμαῖοι δύσας δοκῶσιν, ἅτι δὴ καὶ τὴν Πόλιν ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἀποβαλόντες, ἐξ ἑκινῶν δὲ θιμνοὶ Νομόν, ἀτίλεις εἶναι στρατίας τῆς Ἱερίας, πλὴν ἢ μὴ Γαλατικός παλιν ἐπιλθεὶς Πόλιν. Ἐδήλῳ δὲ καὶ τὸν φόβον αὐτῶν ἢ τι Παράσκηνη. Μυριάδες γὰρ ἢ ὅπλοις ἄλλα τοσαῦτα Ῥωμαίων ὅτι πρότερον ὅτι ὕστερον γινώσθαι λέγονται." Plut. Vit. Marcel. p. 244. Vol. 2. Edit. Bryan.—The other illustration is from Cicero in his oration for deed, (to use a poet's illusion) poured forth as a libation from the cup of Achilles, consecrated and appropriated :

N O T E.

Οὐτις τιν' ἐπιιδίοντι θίωσι, ὅτι μὴ Διὶ Πατρὶ. (b)

It is proposed, in its degree and according to its subject, for the defence of truth, and with an honest wish to uphold society and the best interests of mankind, but chiefly those of our own country. In it there are no imaginary subjects. I have raised no phantoms of absurdity merely to disperse them ; but the words, the works, the sentiments, and often the actions of the authors are before us. It might be known hereafter from this poem how we wrote for Fonteius ; (the object of which was to inculcate, " Gallis " fidem non habendam, hominibus levibus, perfidis, et in ipsos " Deos immortales impiis.") The words are these : " Ut oportet, " BELLO GALlico, ut majorum jura moresque præscribant, " NEMO EST, Civis Romanus, qui sibi ulla excusatione utendum " putet." Orat. pro Fonteio. Sect. 16. sub fin. Cic. Op. Ed. Barbou. Vol. 4. p. 393.—We have not, and I trust we never shall have, the same cause for apprehension from the French as the Romans had from the Gauls. They never have taken our city; and while we are true to ourselves, as we now are, they never will or can take it. But the danger is and ever will be great, from their vicinity, διὰ τὴν γειττονίαν. The words are from Plutarch : Mr. Burke has written the commentary.† " Vocem adyti dignam templo !" (July 1797.)

NOTE.

(b) Hom. Il. 16. v. 227.

NOTE ON THE NOTE.

† Two Letters on the Peace. (Ed. Rivington 1796.) pag. 113, &c.

wrote and thought in this age, and not unfrequently how we conducted ourselves.

There is one subject which I have pressed upon the attention of the nation, which in this respect seems to be in a state between slumber and alarm; in the supineness which attends the former, and with that confusion in ideas and measures, which too frequently accompanies terror. Compassion, mercy, self preservation, integrity of principle, Christian charity, the uncertainty of the mortal condition, the convulsion of empires and of states, have all and each variously conspired to direct the measures of our government with respect to the French Roman Catholic Emigrants, and in particular, to the French Priests. I have stated in different places my opinion on this important subject. I continue to call aloud upon this country and its ministers to regard, with minute circumspection, THESE MEN AND THEIR CAUSE. The most reprehensible part of Mr. Burke's publick conduct has been in this point. Great and venerable as I hold him, in this I praise him not. I maintain that the vigilance of the Roman Catholics is erect and on the tiptoe of expectation; it is scarcely suspended by slumber. I speak also on another account. There is such a connection between superstition and atheism, and their allies cruelty and tyranny, that the wisest and most experienced statesmen and moralists have declared it to be indissoluble. In their cause, they would unite with any, even with Jacobin, principles. Hear Dr. Hufsey the titular Bishop of Waterford in Ireland in his late pastoral Letter. (i) "THE CATHOLICK FAITH (i. e. the tenets, the doctrines, the superstitions, the absurdities, the follies, the cruelty, and the tyranny ranny, of the Church of Rome, and whatever makes it to differ from any other external establishment of Christianity)

The

(i) See "A Pastoral Letter to the Catholick Clergy of Waterford and Lismore in Ireland, by the R. R. Doctor Hipsley." London, reprinted by P. Coghlan, Duke Street, Grosvenor Square. 1797. His titular Lordship's idea of "a man of true liberality is this; "that he lives in charity, in concord, in amity, with all others of every religious persuasion; with whom a difference in religious opinions makes no difference in social life, &c. &c." (p. 6.) Very liberal indeed; this is the text. But his Lordship, in the natural confusion of ideas in his country has prefixed the comment. See the preceding page. The words are these: "Remonstrate (says his Lordship) with "any parent, who will be so criminal as to expose his offspring "to those places of education (the Charter Schools, &c. &c. as I "suppose) where his religious faith and morals are likely to be "perverted. If he will not attend to your remonstrances, (he is "speaking to the Roman Catholick Clergy) refuse him the participation of Christ's body; if he should still continue obstinate, DENOUNCE HIM TO THE CHURCH, in order that, according to Christ's commandment, he be considered as a heathen and a publican." p. 5. We know the sense of Christ; and we know the sense which the ROMAN CATHOLICK CHURCH annexes to these words. But this is LIBERALITY!!!—Hear his titular Lordship once more. Speaking of the total repeal of the Popery Laws in Ireland, he warns those who oppose it in these terms, page 10. "THE VAST ROCK is already detached "from the mountain's brow, and whoever OPPOSES its descent and "removal, MUST BE CRUSHED by his own rash endeavours." Is the common sense of England and Ireland drunk? Or if it has slept, will it not now awake? Can any man say, that the political spirit of the Roman Catholick Religion is extinct, that it is dead, that it is dying? This titular bishop warns us plain enough. He has rocks and mountains at command, and the powers of nature in their gigantick admeasurements appear at his great bidding. In Ireland it might be of use to discuss this pastoral Letter in toto. If I were an Irishman, I would do so; but the business in England is yet very different. Let me add a word

The Catholick faith (says his titular Lordship) is suitable to all climes, and all forms of government, monarchies or republicks,

NOTE.

a word or two. It may be worth while at this period when all establishments are shaking, to consider frequently, that "a Religious Establishment, under any form, is not the religion itself, but the mode of preserving, inculcating, and continuing the religion." There is a religion which may be and is political, and another which is real. I will give a passage from the admirable Preface to the translation of Xenophon's Cyropædia, written with great compass of thought and precision of argument, by a gentleman of fortune, family, erudition and virtue, the Hon. MAURICE ASHLEY. I cannot refrain from observing with pleasure, that LORD MALMESBURY and myself may have a natural partiality for the memory of that accomplished and well-instructed gentleman. "Real Christianity" (says he) is none of all these changeable establishments and human institutions, nor ever can be, but stands upon its own foot. Whether it be the religion of the multitude, and national or not national, or whatever be the forms of it in national establishments, it is one and the same in itself, firm and unalterable, and will undoubtedly remain so to the end of the world, whether owned or not owned by any publick establishment indifferently." Mr. A's Pref. pag. 8. I enter not into the expedience, institution and relative excellence of religious establishments in this place. It is not here the question; if it were, I am not without my sentiments or without words to enforce them. I hope indeed we may, and shall, still justify the expressions of a great writer: "We are separated from the errors, and freed from the chains of POPERY, without breaking out into a state of religious anarchy." But I give Mr. Ashley's words as a general observation to all those who esteem the downfall of such an establishment as Popery to be the downfall of the Christian religion, than which no opinion can be more unfounded. To the Roman Catholick system of religion, whether in its vigour and plenitude of power, or in its decline, or in its struggle for revival, the words of the poet may be applied figuratively and literally:

publicks, aristocracies, or DEMOCRACIES." (p. 9.)
 Right. Does his Lordship speak intelligibly? That which is true of Christianity in itself and by itself alone, independent of any establishment whatsoever, that they assert of their own tyrannical superstition. They will shew the arm, and the sword, of heaven interested and active for them. They will tell you, (whenever they have the power or even the probability of attaining that power) that their cause alone is from above. They separate their spiritual rulers from the temporal governors of the state, and assert the superior dignity and paramount authority of the former; and this they thunder in the ears of an armed soldiery. They tell you, that the opposers of the Roman Catholick cause are sacrilegious in the eye of heaven; and that upon them, in a mass, THE GREAT STONE will fall and grind them to powder. I know the state of Ireland,† and the declarations of the titular bishops in

N O T E.

In sua templa furit, nullâque exire vetante
 Materîa, magnamque cadens magnamque revertens
 Dat stragem latè, SPARSOSQUE RECOLLIGIT IGNES.

Lucan. L. 1.

† There is something peculiarly ungrateful in the conduct of this titular Bishop of Waterford. Particular attention has been paid to Dr. Hussey by the administration of Ireland, as Lord Camden knows. But in this country I should hardly be understood if I were to enumerate the particulars which I know. I have spoken in terms very moderate indeed of this Pastoral Letter, under the circumstances of its publication. My reprehension has been confined to the spirit of it. It will be perceived by some persons that I write EUSTACI.

Talibus ex adyto dictis CUMÆA SIBYLLA
 Horrendas canit ambages, antroque remugit
 Obscuris vera involvens!

in that country. But that subject is not properly mine, though it is intimately connected with it. All I have to do is to shew, (and I think I have shewn it to all who will attend,) that, "the Spirit of the Roman Catholic System is yet unaltered." In England the French Priests, in a body, have been chased from the King's Castle at Winchester: but our government has yet a sacred fortress or two at Reading, and Shene, and in Yorkshire; and it appears that a sum of FIVE HUNDRED AND FORTY THOUSAND POUNDS (b) has been issued for the use of the French Emigrants, sacred and profane, in the course of the year 1796. This is ratified by the vote of Parliament. On this particular topic I shall say nothing further in this place.

The

N O T E.

(b) On the 21st of Dec. 1796, "The House of Commons" in a Committee of Supply, among other sums, voted a sum "of 540,000l. for the relief of the suffering clergy and laity of "France." Woodfall's Parliamentary Register. 1796. Vol. 1. page 524. It is singular (and it will be remembered by those who are versed in the interior politicks of this country in the reign of Queen Anne) that in Swift's Examiner Nov. 1710, No. 16. the exact sum of 540,000l. is stated humorously, as "a Bill of British ingratitude," to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, viz. "Woodstock 40,000l. Blenheim, 200,000. Post Office grant, 100,000l. Mildenheim, 30,000l. Pictures, jewels, &c. 60,000l. Pall Mall grant &c. 10,000l. Employments &c. 100,000l. The total exactly 540,000." Thus at the beginning of this century did the British nation remunerate THE CONQUEROR OF FRANCE! And thus, at the close of it, are the Services of the French Emigrants, sacred and profane, annually requited by the munificence of the British Parliament!!! We know where it is written in letters of marble;

EUROPE HÆC VINDEX GENIO DECORA ALTA BRITANNO!

The subjects of this poem have been from necessity various and numerous, far beyond my original conception. But a mighty and majestick river in its course through a diversity of countries not only winds and murmurs in the vallies, but contends and foams among rocks, and precipices, and the confluence of torrents. Still its tendency is to the ocean, to which it pays its last tribute, and is finally lost in that immensity. In literature the mind resembles such a course. All its exertions may be turned into one grand and general direction. The mind, if well regulated, remembers from whence it came, and feels that all its powers and faculties are but ministerial. I think it is somewhere expressed in the concise sublimity of Plato, ἡ ψυχή τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὡς ποταμὸς. Under the influence and persuasion of this great and master principle the mind is so prepared, whether serious, or gay, or thoughtful, or sprightly, or even fantastick in its humour, is still performing its proper office. Philosophy and criticism cannot reach some subjects, which sap the foundation and support of well-being. Playfulness, ridicule, wit, and humour, are the auxiliaries and light-armed forces of truth, and their power, in detachments, is equally felt with the main strength of the body.

There is one description and sect of men, to whom more than common reprehension is due, and who cannot be held up too frequently to the publick scorn and abhorrence. I mean the modern philosophers of the French system. Mr. Burke has thundered upon them, and his lightning shone through their darkest recesses. "The sudden blaze far round illumined Hell." This monstrous compound of the vanity and weakness of the the intellect, and the fury of the passions in some of them, this "facinus majoris abollæ," should be exposed with the full strength of argument and of reason, and with occasional ridicule, to the English nation in every point of view. In other philosophers of this system, there is a calmness and composure in their mental operations, more savage than the violence of the former. Their subject is the living man. Before them he is delivered, bound hand and foot. On him their experiments are to be tried; and when his whole composition, moral and political, is either racked, or disjointed, or the minuter parts of it laid bare to the eye, and the very circulation of the fluids, as it were, shewn in the agonizing subject; this they savagely call, studying and improving human nature by the new light. But I will not proceed on this subject. Great and venerable is the name and influence of the true philosophy. The word may be disgraced for a season, but the love of wisdom must always command respect. When we compare these modern philosophers who reject all revelation, with the philosophers of antiquity, and in particular those of the Stoick sect, who were ignorant of it, the difference, to say no more, is indeed striking. What were Socrates, and Plato, and Epictetus, and Cicero, and Antoninus! Before such lights, shining in the darkness and gloom of the heathen firmament,

Conditur omne

Stellarum vulgus, fugiunt sine nomine signa. (d)

As I am speaking of Philosophy, I may be excused if I say a few words of that language, in which its power has been been most conspicuous. I see no more pedantry in the knowledge and study of the Greek tongue, than of the French or the German. But when I consider that every subject in philosophy, in history, in oratory, and in poetry, whatever can dignify or embellish human society in its most cultivated state, has there found the highest authors; that the principles of composition are better taught and more fully exemplified than in any other language; that the Greek writers are the universal legislators in taste criticism, and just composition, from whom there is no appeal, and who will be found unerring directors; I would with a peculiar emphasis and earnestness request young men of fortune, ability, and polished education, not to cast off the study of the Greek writers, when they leave the university. A few hours devoted to this study in every week will preserve and improve their knowledge. It will animate the whole mass of their learning, will give colour to their thoughts and precision to their expressions. There is no necessity either to quote or to speak Greek; but the constant perusal of the historians, philosophers, orators, and poets will be felt and perceived. In parliament and at the bar it would be most conspicuous. (a) They who are wise

(d) Manil. Astron. L. i. v. 470.

NOTE.

(a) Plutarch describes the first Marcellus, (the first of that distinguished race) as a warrior of experience and intrepidity, humane and polished in his manners, and a great lover of the Greek literature; the words are these: Τῇ μὲν μπιρία πολυμικῆς, τῇ φύσει φιλοπολεμὸς τῷ δὲ ἄλλῳ τρόπῳ σωφρον, φιλανθρωπὸς, ἑλληνικῆς παιδείας καὶ λόγων, ἀκρι τὴ τιμῇ καὶ ταυμάζειν τὴς κατορθυντάς, ἡρώτης." Plut. Vit. Marcell. p. 242. vol. 2. Ed. Bryan.—As we have now so many gentlemen of fortune wife will secretly attend to this recommendation, which must be disinterested, and proceeds from long experience.

In regard to the manner and the plan of this Poem on the P. of L. I have something to say, but my respect to the reader prevents me from saying much. It aspires not to the manner or the praise of THE DUNCIAD, or to any thing whatsoever in common with that great performance. The original motive of it however, in my opinion, is as far superior in importance and dignity, as the power and ability of the author fall short of that poetical excellence, which none hereafter must hope to rival or perhaps to attain. Its general subject is LITERATURE however exerted, whether for the benefit, or for the injury of mankind. It has nothing of the mock epick. It is a dialogue; has something of a dramattick cast, and is an excursus. The subjects follow each other; and if I am not mistaken, they are neither confounded nor confused. If there be in the whole composition any passage, any sentence, or any expression, which, according to the specifick nature of the subject, can justly offend even female delicacy: which, from the manner of it, a gentleman would refuse to write, or a man of virtue to admit into his thoughts: which violates the high, and discriminating, and honourable, and directing fortune and family and education and ability among the officers of the army and the militia, I wish they may read this note, and be induced to employ some of their vacant hours in valuable studies; and, like the great chiefs among the ancients, resume and vindicate the honour of leatued military leisure, directing principles of human conduct, it is to me matter of serious and of solemn regret. I am not conscious of having admitted any such passage; or sentence, or expression. I have never yet heard such an objection to my work. If it can be pointed out, I will erase it with much concern and great indignation.

NOTE.

I should also give a few words to the manner of the notes which I have annexed, and which are so frequent and so copious. I wished not, as Boileau expresses it, to prepare tortures for any future Salmassius, (f) and I too well know my own insignificance to expect any comment on my writings, but from my own pen: I have made no allusions which I did not mean to explain. But I had something further in my intention. The notes are not always merely explanatory; they are, (if I have been able to execute my intention) of a structure rather peculiar to themselves. Many of them are of a nature between an essay and an explanatory comment. There is much matter in a little compass, suited to the exigency of the times. As they take no particular form of composition, they are not matter of criticism in that particular respect. I expatiated on the casual subject which presented itself; and when ancient or modern writers expressed the thoughts better than I could myself, I have given the original languages. No man has a greater contempt for the parade of quotation (as such) than I have. My design is not to quote words, but to enforce rig t

P

senti-

(f) "Aux Saumaïses futurs preparer des tortures."

Boil. Sat. 9. v. 64.

sentiments in the manner which I think best adapted to the purpose, after much reflection. To most of my readers those languages are familiar; and if any person, not particularly conversant in them, should honour the notes with a perusal, I think the force of the observations may be felt without attending to the Greek or Latin. In all regular compositions I particularly dislike a mixture of languages. It is uncouth or inelegant, and sometimes marks a want of power in the writer. In works of any dignity or consequence, it is adviseable, if a passage from any ancient author is quoted, to translate that passage in the text, and put the original at the bottom of the page, if necessary. We have in this respect the authority and example of Cicero, Bishop Hurd, and Sir William Jones.

In general, I could say all I wished in the text and comment. Some subjects are indeed so important, that they should be held forth to publick light, and viewed in every point. SATIRE, in this respect, has peculiar force. Vice is not unfrequently repressed, and folly and presumptuous ignorance, and conceit sometimes yield or vanish at the first attack, and like the fabled spirits before the spell of the enchanter.

Primâ vel voce Canentis

Concedunt, QARMENQUE TIMENT AUDIRE SECUNDUM. (g)

I again declare to the publick, that neither my name, nor my situation in life will ever be revealed. I pretend not not to be "the sole depository of my own secret", but where it is confided, there it will be preserved and locked up for ever. I have an honourable confidence in the human character, when properly educated and rightly instructed. My secret will for ever be preserved, I know, under every change of fortune or of political tenets, while honour, and virtue, and religion, and friendly affection, and erudition, and the principles of a gentleman, have binding force and authority upon minds so cultivated and so dignified.

(g) Lucan, L. 6. v. 527.

My Poem and all and each of the notes to it were written without any co-operation whatsoever. I expect the fullest assent and credit to this my solemn assertion. I expect it, because I speak the truth. I have not been assisted by Doctors in any faculty. If indeed I had written to please a particular man, a minister, a chief in opposition, a party, any set, or any description of men exclusively, literary or political, there is not a man of understanding in the country who does not perceive that I should, or rather that I must, have written in another style, thought and argument. Of such motives I profess myself not skilled nor studious. My appeal is direct to my Country. I know and feel the situation in which at this moment SHE stands. There is now no balance left in Europe. All is preparing to sink under ONE DESOLATING TYRANNY. My opinion however is, that by the mercy of Providence, and by the unremitted attention and labours of our constitutional statesmen, and the united efforts of all that are loyal, brave, opulent, powerful, or dignified, WE may yet "be able to stand IN THIS EVIL DAY, and "having done all TO STAND." Let us stand therefore, as the chosen nation of old, the insulated memorial of true Religion, and the ONLY Asylum of balanced Liberty. I profess myself convinced, and therefore have I written. I entered into the sanctuary of the Hebrews and heard the voice of their prophet: "Credidi, propter quod locutus sum." This was the voice which I heard, and it was a voice, as Milton would express it, "thundering out of Sion." Under this persuasion and conviction, I will say of this work, there is in it but one hand, and one intention. It will be idle to conjecture concerning the author, and more than foolish to be very inquisitive. To my adversaries I have nothing to reply. I never will reply. I could with the most perfect charity sing a requiem over their deceased criticisms, if I were master of what Statius calls the "Exequiale sacrum, carmenque minoribus umbris utile. (b)" Those whom I wished to please, I have pleased. If I have diffused any light, it is from a single orb, whether temperate in the horizon, or blazing in the meridian. My aspect is not in conjunction: if I culminate at all, it is from the Equator.

Thus much to silly curiosity and frivolous garrulity. But to persons of higher minds, and of more exalted and more generous principles, who have the spirit to understand, and the patience to consider, the nature and the labour of my work, I would address myself in other language, and with other arguments. I would declare to them, that when I consider the variety and importance and extent of the subjects, I might say that it was written, "though

(b) Stat. Theb. L. 6. v. 123.

“ though for no other cause, yet, for this, that posterity may know, that we have not loosely through silence permitted things to pass away as in a dream.” I would declare also to them, that I deliver it as A LITERARY MANIFESTO to this Kingdom in a season unpropitious to learning or to poetry, in a day of darkness and of thick gloominess, and in an hour of turbulence, of terror, and of uncertainty. Such persons will be satisfied, if the great cause of mankind, of regulated society, of religion, of government, and of good manners, is attempted to be maintained with strength and with the application of learning. To them it is a matter of very little, or rather of no moment at all by whom it is effected. They have scarce a transitory question to make on the subject. To such understandings I willingly submit my composition, and to them I dedicate the work.

I shall only add, that if they should read all the Parts of this Poem on the Pursuits of Literature with candour and with attention, whatever the connection between them, or whatever the method may be, they will most assuredly find “ that uniformity of thought and design, which will always be found in the writings of the same person, “ WHEN HE WRITES WITH SIMPLICITY AND IN EARNEST.”

THE
PURSUITS OF LITERATURE.

DIALOGUE THE FOURTH AND LAST.

Οὐκ ησυχός

Δαφνηφαγὼν φοβάζει ἐκ λαιμῶν οὐκ.

Lycophron. Calland. v. 3.

AUTHOR.

OH, for that sabbath's dawn ere Britain wept,
And France before THE Cross believ'd and slept!
(Rest to the state, and slumber to the soul!)
Ere yet the brooding storm was heard to roll
In fancy's ear o'er many an Alpine rock,
Or Europe trembled at the fated shock;
Ere by his lake GENEVA'S ANGEL stood,
And wav'd his scroll prophetick (a) o'er the flood,

With

(a) It is remarkable that in Switzerland appeared THE THREE PERSONS, whose principles, doctrines, and practice, (as it seems

With names (as yet unheard) and symbols drear,
Calvin in front, and Neckar in the rear;

But

to me) have primarily and ultimately effected the great change and downfall of regal and of lawful power in Europe. Calvin, in religion; Rousseau, in politics; and Neckar by his administration. Calvin and his disciples were never friends to monarchy and episcopacy. I shall not here contend politically or theologically with Bishop Horsley concerning Calvin. Indeed I never yet stood gaping on that copper oracle. A poet's words are better for a poet. I have looked into history and, as I think, have found them true. Dryden speaks of Calvin thus, and remarkably enough;

The last of all the litter scap'd by chance,

"And from Geneva first infested FRANCE."

(Hind and Panther. B. 1. v. 172.)

ROUSSEAU, (I speak of him only as a political writer) by the unjustifiable, arbitrary, and cruel proceedings against him, his writings and his person, in France, (where he was a stranger, and to whose tribunals he was not amenable) was stimulated to pursue his researches into the origin and expedience of such government, and of such oppression, which, otherwise, he probably never would have discussed; till he reasoned himself into the desperate doctrine of political equality, and gave to the world his fatal present, "The Social Contract." Of this work the French, since the Revolution, have never once lost sight. With them it is first and last, and midst, and without end in all their thoughts and publick actions. Rousseau, is, I believe, the only man to whom they have paid an implicit and undeviating reverence; and, without a figure, have worshipped in the Pantheon of their new idolatry,

But chief Equality's vain priest, Rousseau,

A sage in sorrow nurs'd, and gaunt with woe,

By

latry, like another Chemos, "the obscene dread of Gallia's sons."

—Different from these, came NECKER. With intentions, as I am still inclined to think, upright, pure and just, but with a mind impotent and unequal to the great work, and with principles foreign to the nature of the government he was called to regulate, reform and conduct, a fatal stranger for France. He oppressed every subject sacred and civil with too much verbiage. He was sanctioned by popular prejudice, and marked by aristocratical hatred; a sort of "Arpinas Volsorum a monte." He came to lay open and disclose (and he did lay them open to the very bottom) the mystery and iniquity of French finance and of French treasuries. But he brought with him to the concerns of a great and tottering empire, (which perhaps might have been maintained and consolidated) the little mind of a provincial banker, and the vanity inseparable from human nature, when elevated beyond hope or expectation. What was the consequence? for a while indeed,

Hic Cimbros et summa pericula rerum

Excipit, et solus trepidantem protegit Urbem.†

But the original leaven in his political composition was popular; and that leavened the whole lump. We know the rest. His advice, first in the calling together (at all) of the States General, and afterwards in the formation and distribution of them, gave the devoted King to the scaffold, and the monarchy of France to irreversible dissolution. I speak this independently of the grand conspiracy † Juv. Sat. 8. v. 249.

By persecution train'd and popish zeal,
 Ripe with his wrongs, to frame the dire (b) appeal,
 What time his work THE CITIZEN began,
 And gave to France the social savage, Man.
 Was it for this, in Leo's fost'ring reign
 Learning uprose with tempests in her train;

Was

conspiracy against Christianity, regal power, and social order, which has been so awfully and so convincingly disclosed by the eloquent Abbè Barruel†, and Professor Robison; since I first wrote the preceding reflections.—For my own part when I contemplate the convulsions of Europe, and the fatal desolation which attends republican principles, wherever they are introduced, I cannot but rest with a momentary pleasure on the picture, which Plato in his imaginary republick (the only one I ever could bear) has drawn of a man fatigued with the view of publick affairs and retiring from them in the hope of tranquillity: the sentiments are such as the French formerly would have called, "Les Dèlassements de l'homme sensible." The words are these:

"Ταυτα πάντα λογισμῷ λαβὼν, ἡ συχίαν ἔχων καὶ τὰ αὐτῶν πράττων, εἰδὼν ἐν χιμῶνι κοινοῦσθαι καὶ ζῆλῳ ὑπὸ πνεύματος φερόμενον ὑπὸ τύχῃ ὑποστάς, ὁρῶν τὴν ἀλλοτρίαν καταπιμπλάμενυσ ἀνομίαν, ἀγαπᾷ ἢ πῃ αὐτὸς καθάρος ἀδικίας τὸ καὶ ἀνοσιῶν ἔργον, τὸν τι ἐνθάδε βίον ζῶσθαι, καὶ τὴν ἀπαλλαγὴν αὐτοῦ μετὰ καλῆς ἐλπίδος ἰδέσθαι καὶ ἐννοεῖν ἀπαλλαγεῖσθαι.

Plato de Repub. L. 6. p. 496, Op. vol. 2. Ed. Serrani.

(b) "Le Contrat Social, par J. J. Rousseau, CITOYEN de Geneve.

† The Reader will find more on this subject in a future note.

Was every gleam deceitful, every ray
But idle splendor from the orb of day?
Say, were the victims mark'd from earliest time,

The Flamens conscious of a nation's crime?
Why smok'd the altars with the new perfume,
If heav'n's own fire descends but to consume?
Alas, proud Gallia's fabrick to the ground
What arm shall level, or what might confound!

Oh for that hand, which o'er the walls of Troy (c)
His lightning brandish'd with a furlous joy,

Her

(1) It certainly would be convenient, (if we can for a moment trifle with such a subject as the present French war) to march to Paris, "and like another (Bryant) fire another Troy." We have little hope, but from such assistance.—See "a Dissertation concerning the War of Troy, and the Expedition of the Grecians, as described by Homer; shewing, that no such expedition was undertaken, and that no such city of Phrygia existed." Published in 1796, but there is no date to the title page. I find it difficult to give an opinion on this ingenious treatise. Whatever comes from the author of "The Analysis of ancient Mythology" should be treated with very great respect. His character is † venerable, and his erudition, as I think, without an

† See Mr. Bryant's character delineated in the Pursuits of Literature, Dialogue II. v. 189, &c.

Her state, her arms, her fleets, her very name
 Gave, as in mock'ry, to poetick fame,
 And

an equal. Of all subjects, I should have thought this subject was one, on which an enquiry might have been instituted without offence. Yet this has not been the case. The offence has been considered as deep and wide, and the influence of the principle, in some respects, dangerous and alarming. The faith of history has been represented as attacked in its strongest fortress, and even the sacred writings, as matter of historical faith, implicated in the discussion. Some persons have even declared that Mr. Bryant had no right to touch the subject. That nothing can be more contrary to reason than to suppose that the existence of a city, and a war, of which we have read with delight, from our boyish days, should be called in question. That their pleasure is snatched from them: and such a poem, without an historical fact for a basis, cannot be interesting. They allow the amplification of poetry, and its embellishments, and even the anachronisms of Homer. But Troy did exist, and the Grecians did once besiege it, and Hector, Achilles, Agamemnon, and Diomedes were as real heroes, as the Archduke Charles, Buonaparte, Lord Cornwallis, or Tippoo Saib in modern wars. I really should smile at many of these objections, if they did not frequently come from persons of consequence and of learning. Most certainly however I will quarrel with no man "about Sir Archy's great Grandmother." They who are acquainted with the science and subject of probabilities will best decide the question for themselves, and I will not intrude my judgment. It is a question of probability, and not of proof. I am equally pleased with a poem founded on the metamor-

And with the fire of Philip's son, unfurl'd
His classick standard o'er a wond'ring world,

Till

metamorphosis of Apuleius or on any modern fiction, if all the essential and integral parts of a poem are preserved: if the characters, manners and actions are human, and consistent with the supposed situations of the personages. This to me is sufficient; and perhaps poetry, as such, may be a gainer by Mr. Bryant's interpretation. I rather hail the omen in these times of poetical sterility. But nothing can be further from the dignity of Mr. B's character, than the imputation of having attacked the faith and credibility of ancient, or of any, history. It is scarcely entitled to notice. What was Troy? with what part of history is it connected? Is not the Trojan war an insulated solitary fact? If it were done away, is any historical event whatever made to fall with it? When it is stated that four hundred and thirty ships (no matter of what size) were employed by the Grecians in the Trojan war in the twelfth century, and only eighty-nine in the Peloponnesian war in the fifth century before Christ, is this matter of serious history? Is not the whole allowed to pass even the bounds of any probability, but the poet's? I remember hearing a gentleman state similar questions to these with much earnestness and apparent conviction, but without warmth. He seemed to understand something of the subject; and though I thought some points were pressed indirectly and unnecessarily by Mr. Bryant, I replied that I thought nearly as he did, and I said with the most good-natured Euxa of the Academicks, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Bryantian."—I think they who are the strongest in opposition to Till "Homer's sprite did tremble all for grief,

 "And curs'd th' access of that celestial thief." (d)
 Oh, for a Bryant's hand!—

OCTAVIUS.

to Mr. Bryant, if they were even Inquisitors, and could force him to hold a lighted torch in his hand, and make a retraction of his errors, and the amende honorable in the Eglise de notre Dame de Cybele Mere de tous les Dignes Païens, would be contented with the Catholick form of words: Questi erano gli scherzi d'una penna poetica, non gli sentimenti d'un animo catolico!" Yet considering all that I have heard, and the quarter from which it came, Curius quid sentit, et ambo Scipiade, and the insignificance of the question itself, but as a matter of amusement; though in common with many others, I should have lost such individual gratification and instruction, yet I wish this Dissertation on the war of Troy had never been written at all.

(d) Two lines from Sir Walter Raleigh's Sonnet, prefixed to Spenser's Fairy Queen.

§ I am sure Gilbert Wakefield is even more than an Inquisitor in all his principles literary, civil, and religious. See his indecent letter to Mr. Bryant on the war of Troy. But above all, see his Letter to Mr. Wilberforce. The Secretary to the Duke of Alva under Philip II. or the Publick Accuser of the Revolutionary Tribunal, under Robespierre, never exhibited such a paper. There is no deceit in Gilbert Wakefield: He is, just what he seems. It is plain to see what he expects, and why he writes.

OCTAVIUS.

Methinks you smile,

And fain would land me on the wand'ring isle,
Where the learn'd drain Acrasia's foaming bowl,
Till round the Sun their heads with Gebelin's (e) roll;

Nor

(e) Gebelin.—If many of the learned world have thought Mr. Bryant unadvised in the discussion of the war of Troy in the twelfth century A. C. what must we say to Mr. Court de Gebelin, who has actually endeavoured to reason us into a belief, that, the Founders of the Roman State, ROMULUS and REMUS, were only allegorical personages, and were in reality representatives of the Sun and worshipped as such. Mr. Gebelin is a man of the most various erudition, and if he were as well known as Mr. Bryant, his attempt would have been noticed. But few people perhaps have had the curiosity to look into nine volumes in 4to of the "Monde Primitif analysé et comparé avec le Monde Moderne par M. Court de Gebelin." It may be entertaining to some persons, if I give a few particulars of this singular question. The Fourth Volume of Mr. Gebelin's work consists of the "Histoire Religieuse du Calendrier, ou des Fêtes Anciennes." The fifth Chapter of the second Book (Vol. 4.) is the "Histoire des Gâteaux Romains Romulus et Remus." Mr. G. says, "Les Romains, eurent aussi leurs Allegories sur le double Soleil succédant de l'année; ils l'appliquèrent à leur Remus et Romulus. Les noms sont allegoriques, et tous relatifs à l'année," p. 264. Remus, it seems, signified THE SUN in the winter, and Romulus,

in

Nor heed the pause of (f) Douglas, Wakefield's rage,
Nor Hallam (g) trembling for the sacred page,

Nor

in the summer! By an easy proof, he says, "Ils en firent la fête des Lemures pour Remures, &c. p. 263. In the sixth chapter of the same book, we read: 'Nous avons vu dans le chapitre précédent, que ROMULUS étoit LE SOLEIL; que tout le prouvoit:—And what is the proof? Truly this; "Le nom de sa mere, celui de son pere, son frere, la mort de son frere (Remus), son propre nom, &c. &c." Q. E. D.—Mr. Gebelin has not yet done, nor is Mr. Gebelin yet satisfied. He next converts, by means of his solar microscope, Romulus into Hercules! Hear his words. "Ce qu'exprimoient à cet égard les Grecs par l'Apothéose d'Hercule, les Romains l'exprimerent par l'Apothéose de Romulus." But when he speaks of Quirinus, another name of Romulus, the force of art and of proof can go no further. La voici. "Quirinus (nom de Romulus) la traduction littérale de Melcarthe, ou Melicerte, que portoit Hercule chez les Tyriens, EST UNE AUTRE PREUVE, qu'on regardoit ROMULUS comme LE SOLEIL." p. 269!!!!—I cannot help observing that in this same 4th Vol. p. 422. Mr. Gebelin informs us that, "Sur le 18 Février on célébroit la Fête de Romulus, (and at the same time, rather inauspiciously to be sure) on célébroit LA FETE DES FOUX." I suppose on the celebration of LA FETE DES FOUX, cards of invitation were sent round by the Pontifex Maximus to the Antiquaries of those days, and I really think, if Mr. Gebelin had been produced at that time he would not have been without his card, with a few others, to be distributed among his friends.—Indeed these deliramenta doctrinae are sometimes amusing, but in reality they are rather a subject of serious regret from their consequences

Nor Gillies (b) crying, what shall we peruse?
 What is my work? mere records of the Muse;
 And trust to Buonaparte's iron pen, (i)
 The tale of Rome shall be Troy's tale again.

Q

AUTHOR.

quences on the public mind. There is no end of the absurdities from this source, when we resolve all ancient persons and events into allegories and Egyptian mysteries; till, as we have just seen, ROMULUS AND REMUS, the Founders of the Roman Empire, become (according to Monsieur Gebelin's Order of Firing after a grand Escopetterie, or volley, of serpents and stars) transformed into ROMAN SUNS; Remus in the Winter, and Romulus in the Summer!—See the proofs above.

(f) The Rt. Rev. Dr. JOHN DOUGLAS, the present Bishop of Salisbury; (1797.) Author of the Criterion, and of other acute pieces of reasoning, which will be long remembered and admired.

(g) Dr. Hallam, the present Dean of Bristol (1797.)

(h) Author of a History of Greece; but I shall say no more than that Dr. Gillies's solicitude is groundless, when he fears that it will be mistaken for the work of the Muses.

(i) The tremendous conquests of Buonaparte in Italy and in Germany remind us too much of the words of the Roman Historian. "Si CAPTIVOS aspiceret, Molossi, Thessali, Macedones, Bruttii, Apulii; si POMPAS, aurum, purpuræ, signa, tabulæ, Tarentinæque delicias." Flor. Lib. 1. C. 18. (1797.)

A U T H O R.

No ; other thoughts my lab'ring foul employ,
 That springs anew to long-forgotten joy ;
 I range in Fancy's consecrated round,
 And meet the poet on a poet's ground,
 Nor seek historick truth of time and place,
 But truth of manners, character, and grace.

The Bards, who once the wreaths of glory wore,
 Cloath'd in translucent veil their wondrous lore ;
 The tales they sung a willing age believ'd,
 Charm'd into truth, and without guile deceiv'd :
 Where'er they rov'd, young Fancy and the Muse
 Wav'd high their mirror of a thousand hues ;
 They gaz'd ; and as in varying guise pourtray'd,
 Aëreal phantoms hov'ring round them play'd,
 Gave to each fleeting form, that shot along,
 Existence everlasting as their song ;
 And as by Nature's strength the tablet grew,
 Rapture the pencil guided as they drew.

OCTAVIUS.

OCTAVIUS.

Nay, now you soar indeed; another flight,
 And the wing'd courser bears you from my sight:
 You're strangely mov'd.

AUTHOR.

The matter is my own;
 I never shar'd the profits of the gown,
 Nor yet, with Horace and myself at war,
 For rhyme and viſtuals (b) left the starving Bar;

Q²

I never

(b) This was lately done by an ingenious Gentleman, educated at Eton school, William Boscawen, Esquire, a Commissioner of the Viſtualling office, and (by an easy transition) Translator of Horace. He resigned his gown, as a Counsellor at law, to superintend the publick viſtuals, and to give himself up to the charms of poetry, and at last to present the hungry publick with Horace's works done into English verse. The translation has had the usual fate of mediocrity, and therefore I say no more. I can have no objection to any Gentleman's amusing himself with making verses in his morning rider. I think such a custom is recommended, as very wholesome, by Pliny in one of his letters. It may be tried, when other medicines fail. "Vitæque et membris, si non opus utile fama." Mr. Boscawen, as an Etonian, may conjecture, but he never can know, from whom these observations come.

I neyer lov'd Dean DEWLAP's vacant looks,
 Or purchas'd empty praise from empty books ;
 I leave at sales the undisputed reign
 To milk-white (i) GOSSET, and Lord (k) Spencer's train.

No

(i) Not a bookseller of reputation in London, Payne, Edwards, White, Robson, Egerton, Faulder, &c. &c. is unacquainted with Dr. Gosset's "milk-white vellum books," when he wishes to make an exchange. The Reverend little Bibliopolish Dr. Gosset is President at all Booksales in the metropolis. He certainly is a scholar ; and I believe the auctioneer always waits for his entrance, as the Speaker of the H. of C. waits for Mr. Pitt before publick business begins. He is Inquisitor General of all editions, from the Editio Princeps of the Florence Homer, down to the last edition of Ignoramus. Doctor Gosset's priced catalogues in his own hand are said to be in an uninterrupted series, except one. They are also said to be equal in use and value to "The curious collection, in regular and undoubted succession, of all the Tickets of the Islington Turnpike from its first institution to the 20th of May inclusive," recorded among the presents made to the Antiquarian Society, when Sir Matthew Mite was admitted Fellow. (Foote's Nabob, Act 2.) I believe, (but see the Society's Archælogia for the record) that it took place before the Reverend Mr. Brand was † the reading Secretary,

or

† Mr. Brand often puts the Antiquarian Society in mind of the famous Epitaph :

" Oh READER ! if that thou canst read, &c. &c.

No German nonsense sways my English heart,
 Unus'd at ghosts and rattling bones to start;
 I never chose, in various nature strong,
 Logick for verse, or history for song;
 But at the magick of Torquato's strain,
 Disarm'd and captive in Armida's chain,
 To Godfrey's pomp Rinaldo still prefer,
 Nor care, if ranting Wakefield thinks I err,
 To HURD, not (I) Parr, my Muse submits her lays,
 Pleas'd with advice, without a lust for praise,

Fond

or the Earl of Leicester the eloquent PRESIDENT OF THE SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES. N. B. No person is now obliged to make an inauguration speech, when he is admitted Fellow of the Antiquarian Society. The President observed in one of his speeches, that the custom ceased and determined at Sir Matthew Mite's election, as appeared by the record, copied by Mr. Foote and inserted in his Nabob.

(I) The Rt. Hon. Earl Spencer, the munificent, and I may add, the learned, sensible, and intelligent collector of every valuable work in literature. I record with pleasure his "Palatine Apollo," that munus Apolline dignum!

(I) See my account of Dr. Parr's style and writings. P. of L. Dialogue III. &c. with the notes. When the reader has considered

Fond to correct, but never to defend,
 And him, who marks her errors, deems her friend;
 With patriot aim and no irreverent rage,
 Without one stain of party on the page,
 From Grecian springs her strength, her art she draws,
 Firm in her trust, ennobled in her cause,
 Her moral none, the verse (m) some few disdain,
 Yet not a note she sounds shall sound in vain,
 While

sidered the whole, perhaps he may be inclined to say with the comic poet of Athens,

Πῆλοι το μῦθον ΚΟΜΠΟΛΑΚΥΘΟΥ πρὸς!

Aristoph. Acharn. Sub fin.

(m) George Steevens, Esq. Editor of Shakspeare and some other ingenious Gentlemen, whom at present I shall not name, have affected to say, with equal discretion and wit, that my verses are only a peg to hang my notes upon. They are not quite original in the expression. Pindar said long before Mr. Steevens, Ἀπὶ ΠΑΣΣΑΛΟΥ φορμύγγα λαμβάνει. (Ol. 1.) But Mr. Steevens and Co. rather put me in mind of a story told of a sailor in the late mutiny (April 1797.) aboard the fleet, who after he had undergone a rather severe discipline, and was standing dripping upon the deck, looked up significantly to the yard arm and said, "Well, my friends, I think I am now wet enough to be hung up to dry."—So much for George Steevens, Esq. and his Brethren, "Gentlemen of the Peg."

While BRYANT in applause with BAKER (n) joins,
 GIFFORD (o) approves, and STORER (p) loves the lines:
 Though still, a stranger in the sacred clime,
 Some say, I love not poetry, but rhyme.

Offspring of other times! ye visions old,
 Legends, no more by gentle hands unroll'd,
 Magnanimous deceits! where favour'd youth
 Finds short repose from formidable truth!
 Oh witness, if e'er silent in your praise,
 I've pass'd, in vice or sloth, inglorious days,

But

(n) Sir George Baker, Bart. Physician to the King, a Gentleman of deep and extensive classical knowledge. His compositions are written in the purest Latinity, worthy of an Etonian. His situation in life sufficiently declares his professional talents.

(o) William Gifford, Esq. Author of the Baviad and the Mæviad.

(p) ANTHONY STORER, Esq. a Gentleman of fortune and fashion, talents and accomplishments. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge. His attainments in literature are various and considerable; and few men have a nicer skill in the principles of just and legitimate composition than Mr. Storer. He has read QUINTILIAN with effect, (Mr. Storer will understand me perfectly) and he has drawn his knowledge and judgment from the best writers and criticks, of antiquity and of modern times.

But rais'd for you my firm unalter'd voice,
Fancy my guide, and solitude my choice.

Though now no Syren voice be heard, no strain
Ascend from Pindus (q) or Arcadia's plain ;
Nor Graces round th' Olympian throne of Jove
Bid the nine Virgins raise the chant of love :
The harp of Talieffin (r) lies unstrung,
Close by the loom, where Death's dread sisters sung ;
Unfelt each charm of Odin's magick tree,
With many an uncouth Runick (s) phantasy :

Though

(q) I mean by these and several following lines to observe, that the Pagan Fable is now exhausted, and the specious miracles of Gothick Romance have never of late years produced a poet. Perhaps the latter were more adapted to true poetry than the pagan inventions. Witness the sublimer productions of modern Italy.

(r) A year or two ago proposals were offered by Mr. Owen to publish the works of the Bard Talieffin, but no encouragement could be obtained. Such is the time.

(s) Mr. Mathias, (the Author of the Essay on the Evidence, &c. on the long-disputed subject of the poems ascribed to Rowley

Though now no temper'd lance, no magick brand,
 Nor Durindana (†) waves o'er fabled land;
 No nightly-rounding Ariel floats unseen,
 Or flames amazement o'er the desert green;
 No wizards hold, some blasted pine beneath,
 Their horrid sabbath on the darken'd heath;
 Say, are the days of blest delusion fled?
 Must Fiction rear no more her languid head?
 No more the Muse her long-lost transports know,
 Nor trace the fount whence living waters flow?
 Awake, ye slumb'ring Rulers of the song!
 Each in your solemn orders pass along;
 In sacred radiance o'er your mountain old
 Yet once again your dignities unfold,
 And fill the space; your scepter'd glories claim,
 And vindicate the great Pierian name.

OCTAVIUS.

Rowley in the 15th century, and which I mentioned in a note to the First Dialogue of the P. of L.) several years ago attempted to excite the curiosity of the publick to the remains of northern antiquity, by a lyrical imitation of some Runic fragments. I wish the example had been followed.

(†) The name of the sword of Orlando in Ariosto.

OCTAVIUS.

Are these a poet's only themes ? I fear,
No verse like this will find a patient ear.

AUTHOR.

Hear yet awhile :—the dread resistless pow'r,
That works deep-felt at inspiration's hour,
He claims alone—

OCTAVIUS.

Who claims ?

AUTHOR.

The favour'd BARD, (u)
Who nobly conscious of his just reward,
With

(u) I mean here to give a character of the Poet, as such, and of the sources whence the art itself is drawn. I would wish to express generally, what Proclus (in one of his dissertations on the Πολιτικά of Plato, Ed. fol. Basil. 1534. p. 430.) would call with a sublime dignity, the “ Πασαν Ποιητικὴν ἔξιν διαλαμπύσαν,” when

With loftier soul, and undecaying might,
Paints what he feels in characters of light,

Hears

when the poet exerts his highest faculties, or (in the language of Proclus in the same place) ‘Ὅταν ἐνθουσιάζῃ, καὶ ταῖς Μουσαῖς κατοχῆς ᾖ, κατὰ τὴν πρῶτην ἐνέργειαν καὶ ἐνθῶν ποιητικὴν.’—A selection of various chapters from this work of Proclus on the Πολιτεία of Plato, which relate to poetry, might be made, and published by some ingenious scholar. They would be perfectly new and original to most persons. I know not (better Greek scholars than I am may know) whether at present there is any edition at all, but that printed at Basil, in Greek, without any Latin translation. They exhibit what this philosopher of genius terms, the “τῆς τῶν ποιητῶν μανίας κίνησιν καὶ ἀνάσταν, καὶ πληρῶσιν ἀνάσταν, καὶ εἰς ἄλλαν διαπορεύουσιν τὴν ἐκείνῃ ἁλλοτρίαν.” (page 401 in the chapter on the Τρεῖς ἰδέαι τῆς Ποιήσεως.) Philosophers like these, Apollo and all his choir were once supposed to address in strains, which few scholars will hear without delight. They are to be found in the life of Plotinus, the Platonick, which was written with some eloquence (at least Politian thought so) by his disciple Porphyrius: *

Κληῖζω Μουσας ζῆναι οὔα γηρυσσασθαι.

Παμφανοῖς ἰσχυροῖς παναρμονιαῖσι τ' ὁραῖς,

Οἷον ἐπ' Αἰακίδῃ στήσαι χορὸν ἐκληῖζαν

Ἀθανάτων μανιαῖσιν, ὁμηρῖαισι τ' αἰδαῖς.

Ἀλλὰ γὰρ Μυστῶν πρὸς χορὸς ἀπυστῶμεν,

Εἰς ἐν ἐπιπνιούτῃ αἰδῇ τετρατά πᾶσις,

Υμεῖς καὶ ἐν μισσαῖσιν Ἐγὼ Φοῖβος βαρυχαίτης!

* Plotini Vita. In limine edit. Oper. Plotin. Ficini. Basilæ.

Hears in each blast some consecrated rhyme,
 Trac'd by the spirit of the troublous clime.
 He turns : and instantaneous all around
 Cliffs whiten, waters murmur, voices sound,
 Portentous forms in heav'n's aerial hall
 Appear, as at some great supernal call.
 Thence oft in thought his steps ideal (*) haste
 To rocks and groves, the wilderness or waste;

To

(*) I speak of the effect of local situation on the mind of the poet. But if he is deprived of the power of visiting these great and awful scenes of nature, (sometimes assisted and improved by art,) an imagination, bold and fervid, may in some degree supply that want by recourse to the most finished representations of them by the more sublime painters and artists. Stuart, Wood, and Piranesi may raise ideas worthy of the Poet, and pour upon his fancy all the ancient dignity of Athens, of Palmyra, or of Rome.—I cannot but present my reader with the form of an Oath on such a subject, from the last classical Poet under the expiring monarchy of France, the famous Delille. I am as ready on this subject, as himself, to swear at the high altar of the Muses :

“ Hélas ! je n'ai point vu ce séjour enchanté,
 Ces beaux lieux où Virgile a tant de fois chanté ;
 Mais j'en jure et Virgile et ses accords sublimes,
 J'irai : de l'Apennin je franchirai les cimes,
 J'irai, plein de son nom, plein de ces vers sacrés,
 Le lire aux mêmes lieux qui les ont inspirés.

Les Jardins L. 1.

To where old Tadmor's (y) regal ruins lie
 In desolation's sullen majesty ;
 Or where Carthusian (z) tow'rs the pilgrim draw,
 And bow the soul with unresisted awe,
 Where Bruno, from the mountain's pine-clad brow,
 Survey'd the world's inglorious toil below ;
 Then, as down ragged cliffs the torrent roar'd,
 Prostrate great Nature's present God ador'd,
 And bade, in solitude's extremeſt bourn,
 Religion hallow the ſevere ſojourn.

To HIM the Painter gives his pencil's might ;
 No gloom too dreadful and no blaze too bright,
 What time to mortal ken he dares unveil

THE inexpressive FORM (a) in ſemblance frail,

To

(y) He built Tadmor in the Wildernels." Chron. B. 2. ch. 8. v. 4. It is remarkable that Mr. Wood obſerves, that the natives, at this day, call Palmyra by the original appellation of Tadmor.

(z) The famous monaſtery, called "The Grande Chartreuſe." The retirement of Saint Bruno.

(a) The Pictures of the Supreme Being by Raphael and Michael Angelo. There is one picture of THE SUPREME BEING ſeparating

To the strain'd view presents the yawning tomb,
Substantial horrors and eternal doom.

To Him the pow'rs of harmony (b) resort,
And as with random glance and fiercer port
He scans th' ethereal wilderness around,
Pour on his ear the thrilling stream of sound,
Strains, that from full-strung chords at distance swell,
Notes, breathing soft from musick's inmost cell,
While to their numerous pause, or accent deep,
His choral passions dread accordance keep.

Thence musing, lo he bends his weary eyes
On life and all its sad realities ;
Marks how the prospect darkens in the rear,
Shade blends with shade, and fear succeeds to fear, separating the light from the darkness, in the Vault of the Capella Sestina in Rome, by Michael Angelo which, I believe, has never been engraved. Mr. Fuseli, I think, said so when I enquired about it. I allude also to the picture of the Last Judgment, by the same Master.

Mid

(b) The powers of Musick on the mind of the Poet.

Mid forms that flit through the malignant gloom,
 'Till Death unbar the cold sepulchral room.

Such is the Poet : bold, without confine,
 Imagination's "charter'd libertine," (c)
 He scorns in apathy to float or dream
 On listless Satisfaction's torpid stream,
 But dares ALONE in vent'rous bark to ride
 Down turbulent Delight's tempestuous tide ;
 While thoughts encount'ring thoughts in conflict fierce
 Tumultuous rush, and labour into verse,
 Then, as the swelling numbers round him roll,
 Stamps on th' immortal page the visions of his soul.

OCTAVIUS.

Nay, if you feed on this celestial strain,
 You may with Gods hold converse, not with men ;
 Sooner

(c) "The air, a chartered libertine, is still."

Shakspeare. H. V.

Sooner the people's right shall Horsley (d) teach,
 In judgment delicate, with prudence preach,
 And o'er his bosom broad forget to spread
 Bath's dangling pride, and Ribband rosy-red ; (e)
 Friend of the Church the pious Grafton (f) prove;
 Or Sutton (g) cease to claim the publick love,

And

(d) I allude to Bishop Horsley's intemperate and unadvised speeches in Parliament. An injudicious friend is worse than an enemy. I believe Mr. Pitt thinks so.—Inconsiderate sentences uttered publicly by members of either house are very dangerous. The dogma is remembered, and the comment is forgotten. Bishop Horsley and Mr. Wyndham (both men of great natural and acquired ability) should be more attentive in this particular.

(e) Bishop Horsley is Dean of the Order of the Bath, and is a bold rival to the late learned knight, Sir William Draper, in making "that blushing ribband, the perpetual ornament of his person." See Junius, in his third Letter, and Bishop Horsley every where.

(f) See the Duke's Hints.—Rather broad.

(g) Dr. CHARLES MANNERS SUTTON, Bishop of Norwich. A Prelate whose amiable demeanour, useful learning, and conciliating habits of life, particularly recommend his episcopal character. No man appears to me so peculiarly marked out for THE HIGHEST DIGNITY of the church, sede vacante, as Dr. SUTTON.

And e'er forego, from dignity of place,
 His polish'd mind and reconciling grace ;
 Or Yorke, (b) regardless of his sacred trust,
 To unobtrusive merit be unjust ;
 Moore to his synod call of unction (i) full ;
 Or Barrington be meek ; or Watson dull.
 Sooner Stentorian (k) Davies cease to talk,
 And for his Eton quit his Bond-street walk ;

R

Summer

(b) The Right Rev. James Yorke, D. D. Bishop of Ely. The voluntary unsolicited offer of the Mastership of Jesus College in Cambridge, to the Rev. Dr. Paley, so well known in the literary and ecclesiastical world, deserves to be publicly mentioned as an instance, almost solitary, of generous liberal discernment, in the important collation of academical dignity. The University regrets the absence of Dr. Paley, one of the ablest instructors she ever could boast ; and Bishop Yorke must be recorded as one of "the friends of learning." It is no mean honour to associate the name of Paley with that of Yorke. "Et mea, si quid loquar audiendum, vocis accedet bona pars."

(i) Unction.—"That which melts to devotion." Johnson's Dictionary.

(k) The Rev. Jonathan Davies, D. D. Provost of Eton College ; a learned, pleasant, generous, open-hearted, good-tempered man, but rather too much of a Stentor in conversation :

Sumner (1) drink deep of the Castalian spring ;

Or

Σταυροῖς ὑσταμένοις μεγαλήτορι χαλκισφώνῳ,

Ὅς τοσοῦτ' ἀνδραγαθὸν ὍΣΟΝ ἈΛΛΟΙ ΠΕΝΤΗΚΟΝΤΑ.

Hom. Il. 5.

Mr. PROVOST has an invincible partiality for the charms of London, whenever his duty does not oblige him to be at his Lodge. The reason is simple. The air at Eton now and then bites shrewdly, &c. &c. &c.

Extract from a M.S. found in Long Chamber at Eton, the hand writing conjectured to be by Dr. HEATH the Head Master, and one of the Assistants. It was found on one of Mrs. HEATH's Ball Nights during Lent, given to the Lantorum Pueri for the advantage and credit of the School.

ETON SCHOOL, like many other great and useful public schools, stands in need of many new and strong regulations, which the interests of this kingdom, in common with the demands of the time, call for with a voice not to be disregarded by the masters and governors. It is not to be dissimbled, (it is my office to speak openly and boldly) that Boys now actually divide themselves into political parties. There is indeed a general licentiousness of spirit among modern boys, which the public good requires to be effectually and powerfully repressed. It is not by false and specious liberality that this evil is to be subdued. If masters and governors are firm and inflexible in their regulations, what can the children do? I laugh at the idle apprehension of rebellion in a School. If I were the Head Master of Eton, I would begin by THE ABOLITION OF THE MONTEM immediately. It is very improper, and very foolish. There is a meanness, and sometimes an audacity, in this authorized mode of collecting money on
the

Or Langford leave off preaching to the King ; (m)

R 2

Or

the highway, which I wonder young Gentlemen of birth and family are not ashamed of, and can even wish to continue. IT IS SOMETHING BETWEEN ALMS AND PLUNDER. Harrow school has no longer its ancient and dangerous custom of "shooting for the silver arrow." I mention the abolition of THE MONTEM (though it occurs but once in three years) only as an introduction to many other salutary and necessary restrictions in ALL publick schools. I have seen the nature of a rebellion (as it is called) in a college and a school, and nothing can be more foolish and impotent. If the Parents, Friends, and Guardians co-operate with Masters of Schools and Colleges, what can children and young men ultimately effect, when it is considered, by what laws and hopes their future interest and advancement in life are bound-in, cabined, and confined? The majority of such petty Revolutionists and embryo Democrats are always restrained in a short time, and their successors never feel the absence of what they never expected. Let every Master of a College and a publick School boldly, and vigorously, and instantly adopt the words and spirit of Cicero to his friend Atticus. "In qua Ego natus, ut mihi videbar, LOCUM RESECANDÆ LIBIDINIS ET COERCENDÆ JUVENTUTIS, vehemens fui, et omnes profundi vires animi atque ingenii mei, non odio adductus alicujus, sed spe reipublicæ corrigenda et sanandæ civitalis. AFFLICTA EST RESPUBLICA!"—Cic. Ep. ad Attic. L. I. E. 18. I hope this note will be regarded with the attention it calls for from the publick.—At all events, now and ever; "Salve, magna parens doctrinæ, ETONIA TELLUS, Magna VIRUM!"

(1) The Rev. Humphry Sumner, D. D. lately elected (Nov. 1797) Master of King's College in the University of Cambridge. So it is: Mussat tacito DOCTRINA timore. I can have no personal

Or Warren (o) in his well-curv'd palm confound

An

fonal objection to a very good-natured man, but publick considerations make me reflect deeply on such a subject. We lament the loss of a Provost venerable in advanced age, dignified in his deportment, and of classical erudition deep, useful, and extensive. In the extremest boundary of human life, without the throbs of agony, or the cold gradations of dissolution and decay, and supported and sustained by female filial piety, (that blessed bounden duty) he came as a shock of corn to the ground in his season. Such was William Cooke, D. D.

But when I think on all the eligible doctors and learned men, worthy of succeeding to the office, who belong to our paramount and royal College, I must own the choice surprises me at such a time as this. I comfort myself that I have no vote. At the very moment when defence is more than ever called for, it seems as if we had recourse to the system of inefficiency for publick support. I know not into what form our University may at last be changed. It may be turned, for aught I can tell, into an Academia degli Arcadi e degli Buffi caricati. It may be supported by the violation of every principle of Academick dignity, and by an unworthy familiarity of learned gowns-men with mechanicks and shop-folks. It may become an appendage to the Corporation of the Town of Cambridge. Are we not elbowed on the floor of our own Senate House by an impudent, unqualified intrusion of Borough-mongering Mercers and rustling Men-milliners? Oxford might teach us better lessons. She knows her dignity, and preserves it. I have nothing left but to deplore the change among ourselves. Would to heaven, I could avert it. "Uni quippe vacat, studiisque odiisque carenti, NEWTONI lugere genus!" Let the University of Cambridge however be converted into any thing, but a seminary for French principles and tutorial democracy. Let us consider a little to whom we give our confidence. Should the revenues of any College be entrusted

to

An ancient guinea with a modern (p) pound;

Sooner

to the suspicious administration of spruce, antiquated democrats? Should the insigne of a Chancellor's authority be borne by a mongrel robustious satellite of a French Directory? I think not. The robe of Cæsar was folded gracefully, when he fell in the Senate. Let us at least remember that. I confess it boldly; my principles are strong unto salvation; and if I had authority, I would thoroughly purge the floor. It may be done now; but how long the power may be continued to us, I fear to conjecture. The Monasteries were dissolved, when they became useless. His Grace of Grafton, our Chancellor, has indeed given Hints; but they are for dissenters and Socinians: the orthodoxy of the High Steward, Mr. Pitt, might yet support the establishment. Some Colleges have watched over the principles of the men proposed for the tutors; but all have not so watched.

I would not suffer the muse of Satire to descend among Schools and Colleges, but upon the most mature and the most weighty deliberation. Perhaps this is the last public remonstrance which will ever be made. I would not scatter my words lightly in every ear, but I would graft them where they might grow and bear. At this hour the State is shaking through all her departments. Nothing is indifferent, which can either supply aliment for health, or remedies for a mortal distemperature. The grand and chief supporters of our Country in the Parliament, the Law, and the Church must proceed from the Universities. Upon them, primarily and ultimately, as to our governors and legislators, Domus inclinata recumbit. Nothing should be suffered to diminish or to sully the character of our Athens, and pollute the fountains of Ilyssus. In these retirements, every science, and every art, and every accomplishment which is good and essential to man in civilized society, may be pursued with effect; and a solemn account rendered to the kingdom. In them,

Sooner one Prelate hate th' unequal glass,

And

them, the Youth of this Kingdom may best learn the foundation of all knowledge; the principles of evidence in sacred and human affairs; the nature of legitimate argument; the eternal power of truth opposed to the subtleties of sophistry; the proofs of revelation, and the best introduction to it, the higher philosophy of Greece and Rome; the sources of history; the finished models of classical literature, and those alone; the life springs of taste and of good conduct; the principles and laws of ancient composition; and the abhorrence of conceit and forced thought. Whatever can bring forth, strengthen, amplify, cultivate, enlighten, purify, and direct the powers of the human mind, within those limits which are prescribed by its great Creator, and not beyond them; all these, and if there be any other praise, or any other virtue, which preserves and continues to man the blessings of lawful government, and of subjection to God, the Author of all Order; it should be there prosecuted, recommended, taught, enforced, and inculcated. I call upon the servants of the Crown, upon the solemn Council of the Nation, upon every one who bears legal rule and legislative authority in the kingdom, to hear me, and to answer me. Has the State nothing to do with the Governors and Tutors of such hallowed and important retreats of arts, and eloquence, and wisdom, and religion? By their very nature they are consecrated to a high and holy ministry, to a strict fealty, and bounden service to their country. Their dignity and necessity can be laid prostrate by themselves alone. If they are true to their own cause, if they will rouse themselves into a vindication of the great, original, master principles on which they were founded, they may continue to be the lights of the kingdom. They will again be, what they always

And round (q) his table let the Claret pass;

O'er

always should be, a Γενος εκλεκτον, a Λαος εις περιποιησιν, a Βασιλειον Ισραηλιτικον. The best and the strongest literary bulwark and fortress against deception, error, sophistry, anarchy, and the wildness of political and religious confusion. I am not speaking out of season, or without necessity; I am speaking in soberness and in truth. While the words are passing from me, JAM THEBÆ JUXTA ET TENEBROSA VORAGO!†

I will extend an observation or two, on the method of Academical study. I own, I never had a very great fear or apprehension, that the severe and most indispensable studies of Mathematicks and Natural Philosophy should be generally carried too far. Into the inmost recesses of any study few are permitted to enter. In Academical education, the great aim and end should be, to recommend the study of original works principally, I think almost exclusively. If these are not attended to at the University, they are seldom, if ever read, (I am sure with little effect) at any other period of life. I am rigid in this opinion. I have seen its good effects in men of eminence who adhered to it. "Say, wouldst thou hear it from our mouths or from our Masters?" were the words of the weird Sisters; "Call them, let me see them;" was the reply of Macbeth. In this spirit would I consider the books proposed for the subjects of publick lectures. By way of instance, Locke, Grotius, Puffendorf, Cumberland, and Woollaston, should be preferred to the writers who have arisen since their day. I would object to Dr. Paley's moral and political Philosophy, as a Lecture book, solely upon this principle; for it is a book of great merit, and of general utility. New morality, new metaphysics, and new politics, are introduced unawares,

† Stat. Theb. L. 6.

O'er his true church the crafty St. Pol (r) sleep,

Or

unawares, from the contagion of the time. I would call the rising youth of this country, to the intense, and fervent, and unremitting study of the ancient classical writers, (whom I need not name) as their primary choice. I call upon them to have the courage, to be ignorant of many subjects, and of many authors, at their inestimable age. Never to pretend to study, in their first academical years, what they design as the ultimate end of their labours, I mean, their profession. Their whole business is to lay the foundation of knowledge original, sound, and strong. In particular, the study of the Law, as such, should never be entered upon, even in limine, before the first degree in arts is obtained. The first volume indeed of Blackstone's Commentaries may be read, in the same manner as Robertson's Introduction to his history of Charles the Fifth. They are chef-d'œuvres in their kind, and form a part of general knowledge. The specifick study of the Law in the University, at that early age, confines and cripples the faculties. Such a Student may arrive at mere knowledge, as a special pleader, but he will never be illustrious, or ornamental to his profession. When a man has once entered upon any profession whatever, his education has in fact ceased. They, who by a patient continuance, and undiverted attention to academical studies alone, have sought for the original materials of science and of solid fame, have seldom failed in their great pursuit. I am zealous for the honour and utility of both our Universities. I am earnest in my words and thoughts, I see and hear them too frequently, and most unworthily, traduced in writing and in conversation. I see the institution ridiculed and sneered at by the thoughtless, by the ignorant, and by the designing. But it is a common cause. They

Or bounds with Hereticks John Milner (s) keep ;

Or

They should always be termed, in literary dignity and with a prophetick spirit, the "Æneadas magnos et nobile Pallentum!" I am for no balance of merit between them. Let them adopt any just improvement. I wish to see no sparkles from their collision, but I would have them grow brighter and more illustrious from mutual reflection. But if they are doomed to fall, and the mortal hour of democracy, confusion, and tyranny is approaching, this book, till it is prohibited by a Directory, will shew they had a friend, bold enough to contend to the last for their original and inherent dignity. A friend who believed, or rather who knew, them to be capable, in their high functions, to maintain and adorn the principles of happiness, and safety, and learning, and comfort, and hope, and good conscience; against foppery, and false science, and the degradation of the intellect, and frippery, and pompous nonsense, and the insolence of sciolists, and the neglect of good writing, and of good manners. A friend who, with no false enthusiasm, would secure the permanency of THESE ILLUSTRIOUS INSTITUTIONS, with every monument of ancient arts, and eloquence, and science, consecrated by the ministry of religion to the stability of the State. (Nov. 1797.)

(n) The Rev. W. Langford, D.D. Canon of Windsor, and Lower Master of Eton School. An instructor of much industry and ability, and not without liveliness. It is particular, that his Majesty never leaves Windsor for Cheltenham, Weymouth, or any other place, but all the publick papers instantly inform us of Dr. Langford's loyal attention. "The King arrived at Weymouth on such or such a day; the next week Dr. Langford set off from Eton, and preached before his Majesty the following Sunday." The Doctor, on these occasions,

Or Wilberforce range lawless through the town ;

Or

occasions, suddenly disappears, and like the River Alpheus, having glided softly under the Sicilian waves, (uncontaminated by the saltness of the ocean) rises again sound and fresh in the pulpit at Weymouth. This is very kind. The Doctor seems unwilling to trust the royal theology to the country curates even for a few weeks, during his Majesty's absence from the heavenly consistory at Windsor, now his only Chaplains, who, it is hoped, attend deeply to their theological studies, mindful of the great charge so specifically and honourably committed to them. This is very considerate in Dr. Langford, and a high mark of his loyal attachment.

" Mon cher Delpini, sure you will agree,

" That for (a Bishop) none so fit as He,

" Who gives the King such very good avis."

See the Probationary Odes, by Friar Lawrence and his (ci-devant) conventual brethren.

(o) Richard Warren, M. D. a learned and able Physician of the time. "The well curved palm" is the attitude of a modern physician, when he is about to leave his patient, and which he as naturally closes upon his fee, as a lobster does his claw. As I have a high respect for the Medical art, I will gratify Dr. Warren, and many other ingenious gentlemen of the profession, with an extract from one of the Elogia written by Sammarthanus; it relates to a physician whom he names Marescottus. "Re- "corderis Marescottum nostrum tria se sacræ arti nostræ (Me-
"dicæ scilicet) debere professum, quibus caruisset, si propositum
"a parentibus sacerdotium suscepisset; scilicet, sanitatem athleti-
"cam ætatis anno 82mo, centum aureorum millia, atque intimam
"innu-

Or Mingay be the glory of his gown ;

Or

“ innumerorum illustrium amicitiam.” Sammarth. Elog. p. 83 and 84. N. B. Though the Doctor rejected the propositum sacerdotium for himself, yet his Brother my Lord of Bangor was made into a Bishop by fraternal skill in the reign of Lord North. — Since this note was first printed, (July 1797,) the publick have lamented the loss of this acute and very learned physician. Dum loquimur, &c. &c.

(p) This allusion was evidently made since the 26th of Feb. 1797, soon after which the Bank issued the One pound notes, to the great disquiet of the faculty.

(q) “ Siccat inaequales calices Conviva Sacerdos.” It is well known by the Clergy of a powerful northern diocese, that on publick days when the Claret or Burgundy arrives at a certain distance from the top of the table, where my Lord is seated, the attracting power suddenly draws the bottles across the table. This is not an anecdote of other times. It is true at this hour. (July, 1797.) When avarice, pride, and meanness act upon the mind at once, I leave it to the metaphysicians to determine the curve in which it moves.—I say no more.

(r) The Bishop of St. Pol de Leon, to whom the chief care of the publick largesse of this kingdom to the French Emigrants sacred and profane is committed. See the portrait of his Catholic Lordship in the publick print shops of London. It is impossible to doubt the apparent propriety of the epithet I have given him, if we only glance on the portrait.—I refer the reader to all my notes on the Roman Catholic cause, in the Third Dialogue of the

Or Erskine cease from impotent grimace,

And

the P. of L. It is indeed true that THE POPEDOM IS NOW FALLEN; but the spirit of it, I still maintain, is neither extinct nor asleep. By way of Contrast, I cannot refrain from presenting to the reader the picture of Pope PAUL THE FOURTH, as drawn by the master hand of Paolo Sarpi. I will not injure the sublimity and force of the language by a translation. He well knew the court and the policy of Papal Rome, and they knew him. "E ben cosa certa, que PAOLO, come quello che era d'animo grande e de' vasti pensieri, teneva per sicuro di poter remediare a tutti i disordini per la sola sua autorità pontificale, ne riputava di aver bisogno in ciò di Principe alcuno; solito di non parlar mai con gli Ambasciatori, se non intonandogli nelle orecchie che EGLI ERA SOPRA TUTTI GLI PRINCIPI; che non voleva che alcuno d'essi domesticasse seco, che poteva mutar regni, che era SUCCESSOR di CHI ha deposto Re et Imperadori." Ist. del Concil. Trident. Lib. 5. This picture of a Pope, in the plenitude of pontifick power, should be presented to all Christian Countries, "in perpetuum rei memoriam," that they may contemplate what this spiritual tyranny and usurpation once were, and what the principles of the Romish Church sacred and political (which never change in essence, substance, or spirit under any calamity) will at all times naturally introduce, whenever they obtain their full operation. "Ubi PAPA, ibi Roma!" in secula seculorum! Let England look to this.

(s) To the revival of the Roman Catholick Cause in Great Britain, "Pestis ero vivens." In our dread and natural horror of Atheism and of anarchy, why are we to revive superstition and tyranny? I have nothing to do with the emancipation

And his appeals to (1) God, his prime disgrace;

Or

tion of the Catholicks in Ireland, but to my apprehension it is a measure full of danger. It is at one stroke to alter the fundamental law and constitution of the country. I write in Great Britain, and direct my thoughts for this kingdom, wishing for peace, tranquillity, and union between the two islands.—I have given more time and study to this Roman Catholick subject than any man perhaps, at this time, will think it deserves. I have perused many a dull and uninteresting tract, even of their own squabbles among one another, much to the loss of my own quiet. In general I pass them over, and consign them to their own dulness. But there is one pamphlet, not for any, even the least, excellence of the composition, but for the virulence of its spirit, which I call into publick notice, if the publick will or can feel upon the subject. It is entitled, “A Reply to the Report published by the Cisalpine Club on the authenticity of the Protestation at the British Museum, &c. &c. by the Rev. John Milner.” Printed for Coghlan, Duke Street, Grosvenor Square, 1795. It is written, as the title page informs me, by one JOHN MILNER, a Provincial Priest resident (as I am told) at Winchester, not an emigrant, nor in the King’s House (while the Priests lived there en masse,) but the priest of a private chapel in that city. He seems by his writings, (I know no more of him) to be of the most intolerant principles and deliberate in the application of them. He exhibits at once the extremes of fierceness and of impotence. But he represents the opinions of a very large portion of their body by whom he is accredited. He is very cautious in his pamphlet, as he thinks, but his caution speaks plainer language than the frankness of the

Or Grafton's virtues, to their latest day,

Expire

the most open declaration. "It is apprehended (he says) that
 "the publication of the facts in question might prove detrimental
 "to the Catholick Interest (observe the words) on any FUTURE
 "application to the Legislature." p. 36. We see this wary priest has not thought proper to conceal that they have FURTHER inten- tions. He tries the ground before him, but his steps are uneasy.
 The indulgence, it seems, is not to rest here. The lenity of our government naturally leads to other demands. With this clue in my hand, I have little difficulty to pass through the intricacy of this Romish labyrinth. In another part of Mr. Milner's "REPLY," his indignation rises against some expressions in the declaration of the Catholics. We see the embers under which the fire is not yet extinguished. He is afraid, that we Protestants should think that the spirit of his church has suffered an abatement.
 "Thus to my judgment (he cries out) am I and the whole Ca-
 "tholick Body, without consenting to it, pledged in the face of "the Legislature to condemn the wars of Charlemagne, and
 "THE CRUSADE against THE INFAMOUS ALBIGENSES." p. 28.
 I hope we are all children of mercy, trained and educated in the benevolence and charity, which Christ has taught and enforced, and if we have read the history of that infernal and murderous persecution of the devoted Albigenes, (whose chief crime was their determined opposition and resistance to the papal tyranny†) what opinion or what comment shall we form
 on

† The Albigenes were a sect of the Waldenses, who had their rise in the twelfth century. I know what the malice of their

Expire in Junius and revive in Gray ;

Or,

on this merciless priest, who after the lapse of centuries, feels the same passions and the same thirst of blood against these innocent victims of popish and arbitrary violence? Crimine ab uno DISCE OMNES !

(v) Nothing can be more offensive, more injudicious, and in some instances more profane, than when a Barrister appeals to God for the truth of every assertion made in a court of law, and in many cases when the facts have been doubtful, and sometimes have been afterwards proved to be false. I call this a prime disgrace ; and I hope no Barrister of ability will follow this flippant rash habit of Mr. Erskine, in the Court of King's Bench, which we have all so repeatedly witnessed. Mr. Erskine's own better sense and serious thought (for I believe he has some serious thoughts) will restrain him in future. But publick men must be told of their faults publicly.

their enemies has suggested against them. This is not a place to discuss history, but I refer the statesman to Thuanus L. 1. S. 16. Vol. 1. p. 221. Ed. Buckley. N. B. For their confession of faith, which was presented to King Francis the First, by the wretched remnant of these Albigenes, I refer the theological and political reader to Sandius's Hist. Eccles. It is an honour to their religion. Sandius's words begin. " A. 1544. Merindoliani et Caprarienses &c. existentesque Reliquie Albigensum sequentem fidei suæ confessionem obtulerunt Francisco I. Regi Galliarum, quam a majoribus quasi per manus acceperant, abhinc anno post Christi Incarn: 1200," &c. Sand. Hist. E. p. 425.

Or, by the wayward justice of the land,
 Great Mansfield fall by an Attorney's hand ; (u)
 Or one mean cause the virtuous (x) Scott maintain,
 Turn law to trade, or deem religion vain ;
 Or (y) Rose with coy submission, modest grace,
 Rise to explain his sinecures and place ;
 Or the Bank bow to Pitt's imperial creed ;
 Or Dramatists to publick trust succeed ;
 Sooner to France Thames roll his current strong,
 Than men love verse, high fancy, or the song.

Nor

(u) See a long law-life in 4to. of the great Earl Mansfield, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench ; by Mr. Holliday, in a very peculiar style indeed. For the greater part, it is a bundle of reports and law pleadings strung together. It is astonishing to me, that Conveyancers and Attorneys, who really appear not to know how to construct a single sentence without provoking a smile at some error in grammar, language, or metaphor, will think themselves qualified to deliver down to posterity the lives of great men. Luckily, Mr. Holliday's zeal does not offend us in rhyme. The friendship and the verse of Pope, as well as the splendour of his own abilities, and the dignity of their high exertions, have secured an eternity of reputation to LORD CHIEF JUSTICE MANSFIELD which can never fall even by Mr. Holliday's attempt.

(x) Sir John Scott, Attorney General.

(y) George Rose, Esq. Secretary to the Treasury, &c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

Nor think, a Poet's name I lightly prize,
 Taught by the muse, and by her wisdom wife :
 But in the wane of Empires (mark the hour)
 Vice and the sword consolidate all pow'r ;
 Laws pass their (z) bounds ; few statesmen stand
 erect ;
 All in their country's name, themselves protect ;
 The Constitution sounds in every speech,
 The words an insult, and each act a breach ;
 The publick hopes with publick credit sink—
 At such an hour, when men to madness think,
 What is a Poet, what is fiction's strain ?
 JUNIUS (a) might probe a Nation's wounds in vain.

S

As

(z) The violence, sedition, and daring wickedness of times like these produce the necessity of extending laws and regulations, and acts which are declared temporary, and called for by that necessity alone. When the danger is past, the Constitution is again left to protect itself by its ancient laws, if that danger can now, or ever, pass from us. This is what Octavius seems to mean, by "laws passing their bounds," &c. in this and the following lines ; and in this sense I hope he will be understood.

(a) O magnâ sacer et superbus umbrâ !

Stat. Sylv. L. 2. Carm. 7.

Junius

As from a diamond globe, with rays condense,
 'Tis SATIRE gives the strongest light to sense,
 To thought compression, vigour to the soul,
 To language bounds, to fancy due controul,
 To truth the splendour of her awful face,
 To learning dignity, to virtue grace,
 To conscience stings beneath the cap or crown,
 To vice that terror she will feel and own.

But if in love with fiction still, at court
 Present in verse some new Finance Report,
 How taxes, funds, and debts shall disappear,
 Or in the fiftieth or five-hundredth year.
 Or tread the maze of picturesque delight,
 From Holwood paint with Pitt the prospect bright;
 Without

Junius told the nation that "a time might arrive, at which "every inferior consideration must yield TO THE SECURITY OF THE "SOVEREIGN, and to THE GENERAL SAFETY of the State." Introduc't. to Lett. 35. This is not the doctrine of Horne Tooke and the desperate French factions and seditious societies now in England.—JUNIUS had not so learned the Constitution of England; nor has the Author of the P. of L. so learned it.

Without one "line of boundary" to speech,
 The summit of conceit with Gilpin (b) reach
 In Desolation's dread partitions felt,
 With dip, and bole, grand masses, burst, and belt,

S 2

With

(b) I am under the necessity of making a strong remonstrance against the language of R. GILPIN's writings on Landscape and the Picturesque. It is such a sartago or jargon of speech as is wholly unnecessary, though we are taught to believe them appropriate terms. They absolutely appear in troops. Dips—Boles—Grand Masses—Belts—tremulous Shudders—Bursts—plashy Inundations—partitions of desolation—continents of precipice—and a hundred more, till the English language sets all English meaning at defiance. These terms are not the parcé detorta of Horace, but mere jargon and foolish affectation. Dilettanti and Connoisseurs almost blush to use them. A term or word may not be quite obvious or easy, yet it may not be affected. But the rage of Concetto admits no "line of boundary," as these gentlemen love to talk. To use the words of Shakspeare in one of his own plays, as it now seems, (for Dr. Farmer and George Steevens, Esq. take from him and give to him just as they please). "They absolutely make a battery through our defenceless parts." Pericles Prince of Tyre, Act. 5. Sc. 1.—Simplicity in language is first to be sought. Strength and dignity will follow. Government, the arts, morality, and religion, are all concerned in its preservation. MR. GILPIN's works on other subjects have and deserve high approbation. In all but the picturesque he seems as ready as any man to say, "State super vias antiquas."

With shudders tremulous explore your way,
Through plashy inundations (c) led astray,
Till tir'd and jaded with the coxcomb strains, Howeward you steal "through Surry's (d) quiet lanes,"

Renounce all Gilpin's jargon, said or sung,
And talk of Nature's works in Nature's tongue,
But still keep Method.

AUTHOR.

Method?

OCTAVIUS.

— Yes: 'tis plain,
Connection, order, method you disdain:

You

(c) Anglicè, "Fens."

(d) "Stealing through the quiet lanes of Surry," is an easy and happy expression (cur non omnia?) of Mr. Gilpin's. Observat. in the Lakes of Westmoreland, &c. Vol. 2. p. 268.

You write when in the humour, scarce exact,
The thoughts disjointed, nor the sense compact;
Be regular : from A to B proceed ;
I hate your zig-zag verse, and wanton heed.

AUTHOR.

Your counsel's good : I'll lock it in my breast,
Like Mansfield, I ne'er enter (e) my protest :
But say, a simple story shall I tell ?
A MAN OF METHOD is the theme.

OCTAVIUS.

'Tis well.

AUTHOR.

(e) The great Lord Mansfield Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and his nephew the late very learned (ci-devant) Lord Stormont, made a rule never to enter a protest on the Journals of the House of Lords.

AUTHOR.

There liv'd a Scholar (f) late, of London fame,
 A Doctor, (g) and Morosophos (h) his name :
 From all the pains of study freed long since,
 Far from a Newton, and not quite a (i) Vince ;

In

(f) When I am very particular in the description of a character, I abstain from giving the least hint of a real name. "Quis rapiet ad se quod erit commune omnium?" or in Le Sage's inimitable language, "qui se fera connoître mal à propos?" I only give this as A Character, and say no more.

(g) The word and title of "Doctor" is miserably abused. Erasmus long ago in an Epistle from Louvain in 1520 to the celebrated Cardinal Campeggio, observed with some indignation, "Unde DOCTORIS titulo gloriantur, nisi UT DOCEANT?" Erasmi Epist. Ed. Lond. Fol. 652. I wish this were written in large characters over the door of the theatre at Oxford, and the Senate House at Cambridge.

(h) Morosophos. i. e. Stultè sapiens.—But more presently of Dr. MOROSOPHOS, the Man of Method.

(i) A learned and useful Professor of Natural Experimental Philosophy at Cambridge. See his works.

In metaphysicks bold would spread his sails,
 And with Monboddo still believ'd (k) in tails ;
 At anatomick lore would sometimes peep,
 And call Earle (l) useful, Abernethy (m) deep ;
 With Symonds and with Grafton's Duke (n) would
 A Dilettante in Divinity ; [vie,
 A special

(k) All the learned world knows how Lord Monboddo believed and still believes, that men had once tails depending from the gable end of their bodies, supposing them to go upon all fours. N. B. Dr. Johnson defines the gable end to be "the sloping roof of a building," and he gives a pleasant instance from Mortimer's Husbandry. "Take care that all your brick work be covered &c. without gable ends, which are very heavy, &c."

(l) James Earle, Esq. Senior Surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and Editor of the celebrated PERCIVAL POTT's Works. I have been informed that the notes which Mr. Earle has added are valuable ; nor would I pass in silence the treatises he has given to the world in his own name, the result of extensive practice and accurate observation.

(m) A young Surgeon of an accurate and philosophical spirit of investigation, from whose genius and labours I am led to think, the medical art and natural science will hereafter receive great accessions.

(n) The Duke of Grafton, the Chancellor, and John Symonds, L.L. D. Professor of Modern History in the University of A special clerk for method and for plan,

Through science by the alphabet he ran.

He

of Cambridge, have both attracted the public attention by their various Hints and observations on subjects of Scripture.—As I never may have so convenient an opportunity, I will also offer a remark or two, which are new to me, on a passage in St. Paul's Epistles, if another Layman may be heard with indulgence. There is no particular conjecture as to the peculiar meaning or force of the following passage of St. Paul in the Second Epistle to Timothy. “The Cloak which I left at Troas bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments.” Ep. 2. C. 4. v. 13. I would hint, that this Epistle was written from Rome when Paul was brought before Nero the second time.

Εγγραφή από Ρώμης, ότι εκ δευτέρου παρίστη Παυλος τῷ Καίσαρι Νερῳι. In the 22d Chapter of the Acts, Paul was tenacious of the privilege of Roman Citizenship, and it proved of much advantage to him before the Centurion. It may be, and it is, a matter of mere conjecture, whether he might be required to prove himself a Citizen of Rome, when he was to make his defence. These parchments (μυρογραμματα) might contain some documents, or be a deed or diploma of some consequence to the matter in question. But as to the Cloak, there is something more particular. The Cloak in the original, is Φιλονης, or Φαιλονης, which is undoubtedly a corruption for Φαινολης, and it is so read in the Codex M. S. Bibliothecæ Cæsareæ Viennensis, Φαινολης was grecified from the Roman word Panula. This is no more than was done frequently in other languages and in other countries. Particularly when the seat of Empire was transferred from Rome to Byzantium, the lawyers of the Imperial Courts were obliged to grecise many terms of law; as Φιδύκομι-

μισσαρις

He took; not e'en in thought inclin'd to rove,

A wife for regularity, not love ;

A little

μισσαρις for fidei commissarius, Ρεπυδιον for repudium, (as in this passage, “Ευλογως ἡ γυνὴ το Ρεπυδιον στυλις κτλ.” Justinian. Novell. 22.) Κησινωι, for Censere, Εξπιδιτον, for Expedi-tum or Expediatio, κομπρομισσον for compromissum, and other words, as may be seen in Du Fresne's and other Lexicons, but in particular in a most singular and scarce Glossary by Meursius.† And in the East, before the accession of the House of Timour, the Arabian language was prevalent in Hindustan, when the Hindoo Rajas had Communication with the Mahomedan princes; and it is remarkable, that the Arabian language is used technically in the Code of Gentoo laws. Ch. 2. S. 3. “That is a woman's property, during the Ayammi Shaddee,” which is the Arabick term for the Days of Marriage. The trial of Mahorajah Nundocomar for forgery before the Supreme Court of Judicature in Bengal, will furnish many singular instances.—But to return to the Φαινολης or Penula. I would observe that when the Roman state degenerated into an absolute monarchy, many Citizens laid aside the Toga and wore the Panula, or the Lacerna in its stead. Augustus highly disapproved of this change in their dress. He was, as Suetonius informs us, indignabundus, and gave orders to the Ædiles on the subject: “Negotium Ædilibus dedit, ne quem posthac in foro paterentur, nisi positis lacernis togatum consiliter.” Octav. C. 40. But the Penula was still worn.

As

† “Joannis Meursii Glossarium Græco—Barbarum, in quo præter vocabula quinque millia quadringenta, Officia atque Dignitates Imperii Constantinop. tam in Palatio, quam in Ecclesia aut Militia explicantur et illustrantur.” Lugd. Bat. 1614.

A little architect in all his schemes,
 Some say he had a method in his dreams.
 Three sessions in the House he daily toil'd,
 In every plan, in every motion foil'd,

Till

As the Panula was so specifically a Roman garment and worn only by Romans, St. Paul might wish, as a slight confirmation of his point, to shew what was his customary dress. It may be remarked, that the Panula was a vestment, which the Romans generally wore upon a journey. Juvenal observes in Sat. 5. "Multo stillaret Panula nimbo," and St. Paul says, that "he left it behind him at Troas."—This is only written as a mere literary remark to hint, that in the minutest passages of the Scriptures there may be some meaning; and that nothing can be so contemptible as a foolish and a profane ridicule on any passage in the sacred writings, founded on ignorance. The present remarks are intended as a matter of some little curiosity; I look upon them in no other view. But I think there is no passage in the Hebrew or Greek Scriptures which will not at last admit of such an illustration or explanation, I mean philologically or critically, as may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. Much general information is to be obtained from Harmer's valuable and satisfactory Observations on the Scriptures, collected from Voyages and Travels in the East; (four volumes 8vo.) and from "Letters from some Jews to Mr. Voltaire." A man of real erudition, who merits the esteem of his fellow-creatures, constantly keeps his knowledge, his reason, and his prudence connected indissolubly, or as it is well expressed by a philosopher,

Till like grave Nicholls in a pet he swore,
 " I'll move myself, the House I can no more ;"
 Then penn'd to Pitt his monitory strain (o)
 As Murray, clear, and as fond Randolph, plain.
 Resolv'd on ease, his Travels were at home,
 And Lumsden's (p) taught him to converse of Rome;

The

philosopher, Εν συναισθησι ἀδιαλυτῇ κατὰ λόγον αἰσταν. (Plat. Timæ. Locr. de anim. mundi. Plat. Op. Edit. Serrani Tom. 3. page 95.)

(o) The three great, yet familiar, Letter-writers of the age are, John Nicholls, Esq. M. P. for Tregony (1797), Sir James Murray (Pulteney) Secretary to the Duke of York in Germany, and the Rev. Dr. Randolph.—See "A Pair of Epistles in verse, with notes: the first to the Rev. Dr. Randolph, &c." and edition. 1796. I recommended them to the general entertainment of the public. My mention of them may possibly excite some curiosity.

(p) That ingenious, accomplished, and very learned gentleman, ANDREW LUMSDEN, Esq. F. A. S. Edinb. has since that time taught us all in the most agreeable scholar-like manner. See "His remarks on the Antiquities of Rome and its Environs, being a classical and topographical Survey of the Ruins of that celebrated City." 4to. 1797. It is a pleasing and most judicious performance of a Gentleman who appears to have enjoyed the united advantages of foreign travel, studious leisure, and polite company.

The arch Palladian, and the Parian stone,
 He lov'd, the pride of Chambers and of Soane. (q)
 But late, by Carter's (r) holy pencil won,
 Wyatt and Gothick heresy would shun,
 And oft in thought, by antique pavements laid,
 With Lysons (s) guide the military spade ;

And

(q) Two celebrated architects. The professional knowledge of Sir W. Chambers, Knight, of most heroick memory, was profound and substantial. Mr. Soane has more fancy and airiness of design, and is certainly a man of information and ingenuity. But he indulges himself a little too much in extravaganzas and whims. See the Bank.

(r) I am obliged for this information to a Fellow of the S. of Antiquaries.—Mr. Carter is a draftsman of the very first merit, but his catholick zeal betrayed him, assisted by some Morosophists of the Society, to attack the first genius in Architecture in this kingdom, Mr. Wyatt. Longa est injuria : longa ambages. It is difficult to prove that the Society was instituted, solely to preserve the purity of Gothick Architecture, or to listen to the tiresome cabals of busy Baronets and meddling Romish priests.—But to us, under the auspices of Wyatt,

O Fortunati, quorum pia tella resurgunt !
 Æneas ait, et fastigia suspicit urbis !

(s) Samuel Lysons, Esq. F. R. S. and A. S. The most judicious, best informed, and most learned amateur Antiquary in this

And once, for purer air o'er rural ground,
 With little Daniel (t) went his twelve miles round,
 On Sundays at Sir Joseph's (u) never fail'd,
 So regular, you might have thought him bail'd;

With

this kingdom, in his department. Do lubens manus Vitruvio. His work on the remains of the Roman Villa and pavements at Woodchester, near Gloucester, (which a friend has just shewn me) is such a specimen of ingenuity, unwearied zeal, and critical accuracy in delineating and illustrating the fragments of antiquity, as rarely has been equalled, certainly never surpassed. His Majesty was so pleased with some of Mr. Lysons's attempts (near Dorchester I think,) that a party of the militia was detached to assist him in digging among the ruins. A friend of mine was much entertained with the three tents erected on the spot, and a detachment of soldiers forming a fort under ground, under the orders of an Antiquary. Hence my allusion to the military spade (Nov. 1797.)

(t) The Rev. Daniel Lysons, M. A. the Brother of Samuel Lysons Esq. An ingenious and diligent Antiquary, but of an inferior class. He is Author of The Environs, twelve miles round London. But—My dear little Daniel, Four large Volumes in 4to. wire-wove and hot-pressed, and Six Guineas paid down on the table, and the books unbound, are rather too much for parish-registers, births, deaths, marriages, and even for the delights of Islington, Homerton, Hackney, Clapton, Acton, and all the rural retreats of City-innocence and pure air, in the neighbourhood of Town.

(u) Sir Joseph Banks, Bart. Knight of the Bath, President of the Royal Society, Privy Counsellor, &c. &c. has instituted

With Jones a linguist, Sanscrit, Greek, or Manks,
 And could with Watson play some chemick pranks;
 Yet far too wise to roast a diamond (x) whole,
 And for a treasure find at last a coal.
 Would sometimes treat, his wines of chosen sort;
 Will. Pitt with honest Harry lov'd his (y) port;

The

ted a meeting at his house in Soho Square, every Sunday evening at which the Literati and men of rank and consequence, and men of no consequence at all, find equally a polite and pleasing reception from that distinguished Gentleman. SIR JOSEPH BANKS is fitted for his station in the learned world not more for his attainments and the liberality of his mind, than by his particular and unremitting attention to the interest and advancement of natural knowledge, and his generous patronage of the Arts.

(x) The ingenious Mr. Tenant has shewn, in a paper read at the Royal Society, that he can reduce a Diamond by evaporation to Charcoal. I hear Mrs. Hastings, and other great possessors of diamonds, have a kind of Tenanto-phobia, and are shy of this gentleman. A poor Poet, like myself, who has neither diamonds nor any thing precious belonging to him, can only remind Mr. Tenant and the Royal Society of the old proverb, "Carbonem pro Thesauris."

(y) I can give no better character of his old Port—We all know on such occasions, "Bacchum in remotis rupibus" is the song of honest Harry in all the wildness of highland Dithyrambick; while Mr. Pitt, on the battlements of Walmer, in his own and Virgil's sober majesty, "OCEANO LIBEMUS, ait."

The Bengal Squad (z) he fed, so wondrous nice,
Baring his currie took, and Scott his rice.

In Scrip : not Hemings' (a) self more vers'd than
he,

The Solomons, or Nathan, or E. P.;

Loyal

(z) "Privatis majora focus."—I can have nothing to say to them. Dr. Morosophos was bolder than I can venture to be. I could write down a pleasant collection. Several of them are reformers, Mr. Philip Francis, little Michael Angelo, &c. &c. &c. but none of them are disposed to extend the question of Reform in a more important department, and cry out with Boileau, "A t'on par quelque' edit réformé la Cuisine?" Sat. 3.

(a) Dr. Morosophos now and then dabbled in the funds. The Gentlemen of the Stock Exchange, or The College, (as it is termed in City-wit) are indebted much to that eminent calculator of the different payments, Mr. HEMINGS. Boyd, Benfield, Solomon Solomon, Nathan Solomon, E. P. Solomon, Theluffon, Old Daniel Giles, Mr. Battie, Lord Lansdowne, Dr. Moore, Little Count Rupee, and all those who look an eighth better or worse on the opening, know that I am right, in pronouncing the panegyrick of this learned claffick on the Stock Exchange.

"Prens moi le bon parti ; laisse là tous les livres.

"Exerce-toi, mon fils, dans ces hautes sciences ;

"Prens, an lieu d'un Platon, ce guidon des finances."

Avis de Boileau. Sat. 8.

Loyal and open, liberal of (b) cash,
 (Not your damn'd dollars, or Bank-paper trash)
 Nor tax, nor loan he fear'd, at table free,
 And drank the Minister with three times three; (c)
 Till

(b) This verse was evidently written after the 26th of Feb. 1797, after the order of Council was sent to the Bank of England, when the whole nation was made to pass through the pillars of Hercules.

(c) Certainly Dr. Morosophos did this, before Mr. PITT (fame rabidâ TRIA guttura pandens) conceived the idea of the triple assessment, or, perhaps, three times three.—(Nov. 1797.) I understand, if Mr. Fox had not abandoned his duty in the H. of C., he had intended to oppose the tax and its author, with an oath from Horace: "Ter si resurgat, ter pereat meis excisus Argivis!" I have heard also, that Mr. Sheridan meant to state to the Committee, the great necessity of prohibiting or suspending, for a limited period, the study of the classics (which he was happy to say he had done for a considerable time) as it appeared by the late oath which his Rt. Hon. Friend had just made, that there was reason to suspect, that wicked Poet originally suggested to Sir R. Walpole, the scheme of the EXCISE, particularly as Horace's father was a Coactor. Horace had also hinted, that a good man need not change his manner of living on account of heavy taxes. "Integris opibus novi non latius usum quam nunc Excisis!" It had moreover been stated from Virgil, by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that it was necessary "excisa vitam

Till with a pun old Caleb (d) crown'd the whole,

" Consols, and not philosophy, console."

He talk'd, like Indian (e) Rennell, rather long,

And would at times regale you with a song,

But seldom that; in musick though a prig,

The little Doctor swell'd and look'd so big;

T

Nay

vitam producere TROJA:" and the Chancellor had announced from the same poet, the quadruple happiness for some of his friends, "O terque QUATERQUE beati queis ante ora patrum, &c." which the Committee knew better than he did; and therefore he should move a string of resolutions on a future day, &c. &c. &c. I shall not interfere with Mr. Fox's oath, or Mr. Sheridan's motion; but standing in my place, I shall adopt the words of the classic father of the Excise scheme, "Non hæc jocosæ conveniunt lyra."—Sir Robert Herries, though no great poet, understands this subject better than I do. We read, aurea prima fata est ætas, et vindice nullo, &c. See Ovid, and compare Sir Robert's Autumnal sketch in 1797. The tints of Autumn are favourable to painters of sketches.

(d) Caleb Whitefoord.—N. B. If you do but touch him, pens and quills alike stand ready on this fretful porcupine.

(e) Major James Rennell, the great Geographer of India, ὁ πρῶτος. A gentleman to whose accuracy and extent of knowledge this country is considerably indebted. But this has nothing to do with his conversation.

Nay to Greek (f) notes would trill a Grecian ode,
 In diatonick kind and Lydian mode,
 And then with Burney, as his fit grew warmer,
 Convers'd of Stentor the great (g) throat-performer.
 Banks (b) gave him morning lessons how to dress,
 And Morgan (i) whisper'd courage and finesse.

A Poet

(f) Dr. Morosophos, the man of method, was rather troublesome to his friends on this subject of Greek Musick. He wished to pass for another Meibomius. But there is still reason to think that he never saw the three hymns to Calliope, Apollo, and Nemesis, printed with the Greek musical notes to which they were sung, at the end of the Oxford edition of Aratus in 1672, by Dr. Fell, or the more accurate copy of these hymns in Mr. Burette's Memoire on this subject. Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, Tom. 5.—Dr. Morosophos knew but little of the system of the Lydian Mode in the diatonick genus. There is also reason to think that he knew as little, as Bishop Horsley, of the Προλαμδανουμνος, the Υμνη ὑμνων, or the Ημερωτη μισων, &c.

(g) "STENTOR is celebrated by Homer as the most illustrious throat-performer of antiquity." Burney's Hist. of Musick, 4to, vol. 1. p. 340.

(b) Sir Joseph Banks, Bart. &c. I speak only of "Morning habiliments."

(i) Maurice Morgan, Esq. an ingenious writer, author of the pleasant Extravaganza on the Courage of Sir John Falstaff.
 Mr.

A Poet too he was, not very bright,
 Something between a Jerningham and (k) Knight;
 He dealt in tragick, epick, critick lore,
 With half, whole plans, and episodes in store,
Method was all; yet would he seldom write,
 He fear'd the ground-plot wrong, or—out of fight.
 At last THE DOCTOR gave his friends a work!
 (Not verse, like Cowper, or high prose, like Burke,) CHAMBERS ABRIDGE'D! in sooth 'twas all he read,
 From fruitful A to unproductive Zed.

OCTAVIUS.

What then? for ever shall we wildly stray,
 And pluck each hare-bell in the flow'ry way,

T 2

Or

Mr. M. is known to his friends by the name of Sir John. In his politicks, he is of the Lansdown School.

(k) Knight and Jerningham.

“Soyez plutôt maçon, si c'est votre talent,

Ouvrier estimé dans un art nécessaire,

Qu'écivain du commun, & poëte vulgaire.”

Avis de Boileau, A. P. ch. 4.

Or void of judgment, fire or critick force,
 Stop to each golden apple in the course?
 I never can with argument dispense;
 Pope gave the verse, but Warburton (1) the sense.

AUTHOR.

'Tis true; by plan and syllabus (m) confin'd,
 Knight thus composes first the reader's mind;
 To rouse attention is the poet's art,
 Knight calls to sleep, and acts a civil part,
 Save to his view when foul Priapus (n) rose,
 He wak'd to lust, in stimulating prose.

But

(1) Octavius is right in some degree. The commentary of Warburton on Pope's moral Poems is peculiarly valuable, and explains many seeming-inconsistencies. Pope thought so himself.

(m) Par classes et par titres,
 Dogmatizer en vers et rimer par chapitres.

Boileau Sat. 8. 115.

(n) Concerning Mr. Knight's Treatise on the Worship of Priapus, in addition to what I before said (P. of L. Dial. 1. v.

But though that Garden-God forsaken dies ;
 Another Cleland (o) see in LEWIS (p) rise,
 Why sleep the ministers of truth and law ?
 Has the state no controul, no decent awe,

While

134. Note (g) I shall offer the spirited words of Clemens Alexandrinus, from his Λογος Πρετριπτικος εις της Ελληνας, or "Admonitio ad Gentes:" "Ταυτα υμων της ηδυπαθειας τα αρχιτυπα, αυται της υβρεις αι βιολογιαι, αυται των συμπορευουσων υμιν θιων αι διδασκαλιαι.—Παισικαι, και γυμναι κοραι, και ΜΟΡΙΩΝ ΕΝΤΑΣΕΙΣ ταις γρηφαις απογυμνυμιναι:—Ηταιρησαν υμιν τα οντα, πιπορευκασιν οι οφθαλμοι, αι οψις μιμοιχυνκασι. Ω βιασασμιν οι τον ανθρωπον, και το ενθιον τε πλάσματος ελιγκει απαυξαντες! κτλ."—Clem. Alex. Edit. Commelin. 1616, p. 30, &c.—I now dismiss this odious Treatise on Priapus for ever.—N. B. The learned reader will recollect that Clemens Alexandrinus lived in the third century under Alexander Severus and Caracalla, was a native of Athens, and that the famous Origen studied in his school.

(o) John Cleland, author of "The Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure."

(p) M. Lewis, Esq. M. P. author of "The Monk a Romance, in 3 Vol." (Vol. 2. Ch. 6. and 7.) See my Observations at length in the preface to this Fourth Dial. of the P. L. pag. ii. and iii.—The publication of this novel by a Member of Parliament is in itself so serious an offence to the public, that I know not how the author can repair this breach of public decency,

While each with each in madd'ning orgies vie,
Pandars to lust and licens'd blasphemy?

Can

decency, but by suppressing it himself. Or he might omit the indecent and blasphemous passages in another edition; there is neither genius nor wit in them, and the work as a composition would receive great advantage. I wish he may at least take this advice. I will give Mr. Lewis an extract from the ninth Book of the History of Procopius, called the Historia Arcana of the Emperor Justinian and the infamous Theodora. The words are these.

" Ἄλλο τι μοι ἰδοὺν ἤδης περιμνημονεύσαι τῷδε τῷ Ἀνθρώπῳ οὐδ' ὅτι οὐκ οἶμαι. Ἀπαῖτα γὰρ αὐτῷ τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς πάθη ἔτος καὶ ἀξιοχρεῖας σημειῖται διαρκῶς εἶναι. Ἐπεὶ ὅστις ἀλογησας τὴν ὑπὲρ τῶν πεπραγμένων τὴν αἰσχύνην, καὶ ἀπαξιοῖ τοῖς ἐντυχάνουσιν ἡδύλογος φανισθῆναι, τὴν δὲ ὑδμία παρνομίας ἀταξίως αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἀναιδέειαν αἰ τῷ μετῴντῃ προσεβλήμενος, ῥᾶστα τι καὶ ὑδοῖ ποῖα ἐς τῶν πράξεων τὰς μιαιωντάς χωρεῖ." Procop. Hist. Arcan. Lib. 9. p. 46. Ed. Fol. Lugdun. 1623.—I wish Mr. Lewis may read and profit from this passage, (July 1797.)

Novels of this seductive and libidinous tendency excite disgust, fear and horror, in every man and woman, who reflect upon those virtues which alone give support, comfort and continuance, to human Society. The interests of Society and the essential welfare, and even the very existence, of this kingdom authorise any man, though conscious of manifold frailties, to speak in the manner I have done. For we cannot long deceive ourselves. Poetical men, of loose and ungoverned morals, can offer to us or themselves but feeble consolations from wit and imagery, when we are left to solitary reflection and the agony of remorse. I never found this subject so well represented, and so unanswerably enforced to every understanding, capable

of

Can senates hear without a kindred rage?

Oh may a poet's light'ning blast the page,

Nor with the bolt of Nemesis in vain

Supply the laws, that wake not to restrain!

Is ignorance the plea? since Blackstone drew

The lucid chart, each labyrinth has a clue,

Each law an index: students aptly turn

To Williams, Hale, judicious (q) Cox, and Burn;

Obscenity

of recalling itself from vicious conduct and irregular inclinations, as in this short sentence: "Whoever WHOLLY give themselves up to Lust, will soon find it to be the least fault they are guilty of."

Whatever I have said on the subject of this novel, called THE MONK, I shall leave as matter of record, whether the Novel is altered, or not. The tenor of the whole is reprehensible. I leave it as a protest against such a work, published in such a manner, by a Gentleman in the high, honourable, and responsible station of a Member of Parliament. It is hoped and expected that no similar work will ever again be given to this country. (Added Nov. 1797.)

(q) Samuel Cox Esq. of the Court of Chancery, the Editor (at his leisure hours) of the Reports of Peere Williams. I am not very conversant with professional law books, but a learned person shewed me Mr. Coxe's mode of illustration, and desired me to consider it. I really think, it seems as a model for all future Editors of Reports of former years. This plan is evidently the mode of a most judicious understanding and of a well-read Lawyer. Transcat in exemplum!

Obscenity has now her code and priest,
While anarchy prepares the dire Digest.

Methinks as in a theatre I stand,
Where vice and folly saunter hand with hand,
With each strange form in motley masquerade,
Featur'd grimace and impudence pourtray'd,
While virtue, hov'ring o'er th' unhallow'd room,
Seems a dim speck through sin's surrounding gloom:
As through the smoky-foiled glass (r) we spy from far
The circling radiance of the Sirian Star,
Faint wax the beams if strong the smoky tint,
Till the star fades, a mathematick point.

Sure from the womb I was untimely torn,
Or in some rude inclement season born,

The

(r) "If the eye glass be tinted faintly with the smoke of " a lamp or torch to obscure the light of the star, the fainter
" light in the circumference of the star ceases to be visible,
" and the star (if the glass be sufficiently soiled with smoke)
" appears something more like a mathematick point."

Newton's Opticks, Prop. 7. Theor. 6.

The State turns harsh on fortune's grating hinge,
And I untaught to beg, or crouch, or cringe.

For me the fates no golden texture weave,

Though happier far to give than to receive :

Yet with unvaulting sober wishes blest,

Ambition fled with envy from my breast ;

For friendship form'd, in yon starr'd fields above

My Saturn's temper'd by the beam of Jove.

I cannot, will not, stoop with boys to rise,

And seize on Pitt, like Canning, (s) by surprise,

Be led through Treasury vaults in airy dance,

And flatter'd into insignificance. (t)

I cannot, will not, in a college gown,

Vent my first nonsense on a patient town,

Quit

(s) As posterity may know little of this young Gentleman, I shall add, that Mr. Canning was first sent an Eton boy, then wrote a little book of Essays, then went to college, was then made M. P. and after some tuition and instruction from the accomplished George Rose, Esq. &c. &c. &c. made one of the Under Secretaries of State. (1797.)

(t) "Pessimum genus inimicorum Laudantes," Tacit. I know no man more qualified to be a Commentator on Tacitus than the Rt. Hon. William Pitt.

Quit the dull Cam, and ponder in the park,
 A six-weeks Epick, (u) or a Joan of Arc.
 I leave these early transports, and the calm
 Complacence, and the softly trickling balm
 Self-consolation sheds ! more sweet than all
 Burke felt in senates, or Impeachment's Hall ;
 Borne to that course, where thund'ring from afar
 The great Auruncian (x) drove his primal car.

E'en now, when all I view afflicts my sight,
 All that Horne Tooke (y) can plot, or Godwin (z) write ;

Now

(u) Robert Southy, author of many ingenious pieces of poetry of great promise, if the young gentleman would recollect what old Chaucer says of poetry,

“ 'Tis every dele

A rock of ice and not of steel.”

He gave the public a long quarto volume of epick verses, JOAN OF ARC, written as he says, in the preface, in six weeks. Had he meant to write well, he should have kept it at least six years. —I mention this, for I have been much pleased with many of the young gentleman's little copies of verses. I wish also that he would review some of his principles.

(x) Lucilius.

Now when Translation to a pest is grown,
 And Holcroft (a) to French treason adds his own;
 When

(y) Mr. HORNE TOOKE, in the conclusion of his "Diversions of Purley," makes an apology for applying himself to subjects so trivial as grammatical discussions, in the year 1786. He uses the words of an Italian poet, which are very remarkable, though they never have been much noticed.

"Perche altrove non have

Dove voltare il viso

Che gli è stato interciso

Mostrar con altre imprese altra virtude."

The hour was however approaching, when his countenance was to be turned to other thoughts, and he was to display other talents which had almost slept since the time of Junius. At the blast of the French Revolution he awoke from grammatical slumber, and found that other enterprises awaited him. We have traced his proceedings till his trial at the Old Bailey for high treason, Nov. 4, 1794. His plans were UNFOLDED, and though he was acquitted, and "Execution was not done on Cawdor," yet it is not impossible that hereafter, (after his decease,) some honest chronicler may be found,

"Who will report (in private)

That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,

Implor'd his country's pardon, and set forth

A deep repentance."

(Macbeth.)

Till that hour arrives, I shall wait for the continuation of his grammatical researches, which are promised to the world, with the celebrated wish of the Satirist,

Ut vellem his potius nugis tota illa dedisset

TEMPORA SÆVITIÆ!

From

When Gallick Diderot in vain we shun,
 His blasted pencil, Fatalist, (b) and Nun;
 When St. Pol (c) founds the sacring bell, that calls
 His Priests en masse from Charles's ruin'd walls;

When

From the abilities and uncommon erudition of Mr. Horne Tooke I dread much, and from the calmness and mildness of his conversation I should apprehend perhaps more. But as I think THE WHOLE KINGDOM is fully, and deeply, and solemnly, and unalterably impressed with the nature, the malignity, the extent, the influence, and the terror of the grand Revolutionary Principle, and the desperate fury of Reforming societies and embodied factions, I trust Great Britain and her Ministers will never suffer the arm of justice and vigilance to remit or to relax its energies.

(z) See my account of this weak and contemptible writer, William Godwin, and his Political Justice, in Dialogue III. of the P. of L.—See also a future note in this part of the Poem.

(a) Thomas Holcroft.—Late of Newmarket; now an Author and a would-be directing Statesman, from that great seminary of politicks and government. He is also one of the Clair-voyans, and of the order of the Chevaliers des Lunettes in the meridian of Hyde Park. Horne Tooke cannot be much pleased with this compeer. Scurra degrunnit prior. See the fable.

(b) The names of his posthumous novels, translated for the benefit of Great Britain.

When Thelwall, (d) for the season, quits the Strand
 To organize revolt by sea and land ;
 When Barristers (f) turn authors; authors (g) prate;
 CHARLES FOX allegiance dares to calculate,
 And with his sulph'rous torch relumes the pile
 With unaverted (h) face, and ghastly smile ;

When
 (e) The Bishop of St. Pol de Leon, to whom the care of the French Emigrant priests is committed en masse. The reader may recollect they were maintained in the old mansion built by Charles the Second at Winchester.—The reader may be surprised, but he will find by the papers laid on the table of the House of Commons, on the 21st of December, 1796, that no less a sum than 540,000*l.* was issued in one year for French priests and Emigrants, sacred and profane.—See the Preface to the P. of L. Dialogue IV.

(d) This indefatigable incendiary and missionary of the French Propaganda, John Thelwall, has now his Schools of Reason in country towns, &c. &c.

(f) Mr. Barrister Erskine.—See more of him and his pamphlet on the French war in a future note.

(g) I refer to the House of Commons.

(h) In ancient times among the Romans, when the publick ministers of funeral obsequies set fire to the pile, they turned aside their faces.

Trifle

When Transatlantick Emigrants can roam

But to return, and praise our (i) English home ;

Now,

Triſte miniſterium, ſubjectam more parentum

Averſi tenuete facem,

(Virg. Æn. 6.)

Not ſo the Right Honourable CHARLES JAMES FOX !

As Mr. Fox loves Greek, I will give my opinion of Mr. Fox's tongue and eloquence in Greek. I ſhall then ſay of it ;

Ἡ Γλῶττα τοῦ, ἡ Φλογίζουσα τοῦ τροχὸν τῆς γυναικὸς, καὶ φλογίζουσα ὑπὸ τῆς Γέννης, ἀκαταρχήτον κακόν, μιστὴ τῆς θανάτου.

If Mr. F. would attend to this Greek author, he might learn the καλὴ ἀποστοφῆ, and the πρῶτης τοφῆς. Even Mr. Fox may poſſibly read what I ſay.—As Mr. Fox is now (June 1797) ſtudying Mr. Gibbon's Hiſtory, he will find many an inſtructive leſſon for his publick conduct. Mr. Fox, I know cannot always conſtrue Mr. G's English, and is in the habit of conſulting his friends on the meaning of many paſſages and ſentences ; but without much ſucceſs. His friends can confirm what I ſay, if they think proper.† I always feel an intereſt in Mr. Fox's ſtudies, whether he is reading Gibbon, or culling ſimples on St. Ann's Hill with Aſpasia, or poring on the Odyssey, in lamentation over his departed friends in the H. of C. in the old Bard's language,

Ἀγρυμνος

† Perhaps Mr. Fox may underſtand and conſtrue the following ſentence from the luminous Hiſtorian. "An aspiring candida-
"tate may be tempted to build his greatneſs on the publick con-
"fuſion, but it is the intereſt as well as the duty of THE SOVEREIGN
"to maintain the authority of the laws." Gibbon, Vol. 7. p. 80.
Ed. 8vo.

Now, when the French defend us (k) in disgrace,
 French swords, French fraud, French priests, and French grimace;

When England changes arms—at such a view
 Must I find method, verse, and patience too?

My

Ἀνεπαύτως ἦν τὴ ψυχὴν καὶ Νόστοι Ἐταίρων,

Ἀλλ' οὐδ' αἷς Ἐταῖρος ἱρρύοντο, ἱμῖνος πρὸς. Od. l. i.

But his Ἐταῖροι or Friends are said to have left him only on one account; his good humour and ability having never forsaken him.
 The account is this, deep, short, and full:

“Ἐπεὶ Τροίης ἰσθμὸν προλαβὼν ἵκηται.”

Od. l. i. v. 2.

(i) See Mr. Cooper of Manchester's Account on his return from America, and the Letters of some wandering Journeyman Weaver or Carpenter, I forget which, &c. &c. “Im- “ pudens liqui patrios Penates, &c.””

(k) I allude to the French Emigrant Regiments, enrolled in the British army. Surely this is a measure of government unwise, and unaccountable on any sound principle, a project of desperation, one would think. Is this a time for Englishmen to say,

Mutemus clypeos, Danaūmque insignia nobis

Aptemus.

(Virg. Æn. 2.)

My verse, the thunder of a Patriot's voice,
 Cries loud to ALL who ENGLAND make their choice,
 " Throw wide that portal ; let no Roman wait,
 " But march with Priestley through the dextral gate. (1)

OCTAVIUS.

(1) " Through the dextral gate !" — My allusion is this : In ancient times, the most frequented roads to the City of Rome had double gates. They who came into the city passed through the left-hand gate ; and they who went OUT OF THE CITY took the right-hand gate. See Nardini Roma Antica, L. 10. c. 9. When Pliny, in his Natural History, in the Chapter de Roma, Lib. 3. c. 5, speaking of the gates of the city, says, " that twelve of the thirty-seven gates should only be numbered once " (semel numerari). The expression is odd, but it alludes to such of those gates as were double in this sense. This was not unknown in other Italian cities. The Porta de' Borsari at Verona (in the opinion of the Marquese Scipio Maffei, Veron Illustrata, Part 3,) was in reality a twin or double gate, though it has been mistaken by some antiquaries for an arch of triumph.—N. B. In times like the present, I would never shut those double gates in any city, when the turbulent, discontented, and factious wish to retire into foreign parts. We all remember, that Sir Arthur Hazelrig, John Hampden, and Oliver Cromwell, being ready to sail for America, were STOPPED by order of Council ! Hume's words are very strong and remarkable in this lecturing age. " They (i. e. Hampden, Hazelrig, and Cromwell) had resolved for ever " to abandon their native country, and fly to the other extremity of the globe, where " they

OCTAVIUS.

Talk thus, e'en Horsley shall applaud : proceed.

AUTHOR.

The tears that Britain sheds, her wounds that bleed,
 Call for a fost'ring hand, the balm of PEACE,
 Not stypticks, which the sanguine tide increase,
 Such as State-quacks, or Barristers expose
 For fame and sale, and sleeping might disclose.
 In state affairs all Barristers are dull,
 And ERSKINE nods, the opium (m) in his skull.

U

Saw't

" they might enjoy lectures and discourses of any length or form that pleased them." Mr. Hume adds, very significantly, " The King had afterwards full leisure to repent this exercise of his authority." Hume's Hist. Vol. 6. p. 311, Ed. 8vo. 1773.

(m) Erskine.—Mr. Barrister Erskine is famous for taking opium in great quantities, (I have often heard him speak in praise of it) and if he proceeds in this manner, it is apprehended that his faculties will die of too large a dose, of which there are many symptoms already. Mr. Erskine has informed the publick, that HE has not the talents of a statesman, which, in common with

Saw'st thou, (or did my troubled fancy dream ?)
High o'er yon cliff, in majesty supreme,

Vengeance

with the kingdom at large, I readily admit as part of my political creed ; though it is so very plain, as hardly to be an article of faith. In his late flimsy and puerile "View of the Causes and Consequences of the present French War," he comes forth to the publick μᾶλα σοφιστικῶς καὶ σοβαρῶς, to use an expression from Themistius, but I cannot style him in the words of that orator, before the Emperor Constantius, as Αὐτοῦ μοίρας φύσει μετέχον, Ζῶν ὑψίστην, κειθεν δόξην τοῖς τῆδε οὖς ἐπέσπλυνται. (Themist. Orat. p. 3. Ed. fol. Harduini, 1684.) I positively will not translate this Greek, either for the Barrister himself, or the country members, or the worthy electors of the town of Portsmouth ; but I shall leave it to be rendered faithfully by the Reverend Dr. Parr, or Mr. Erskine's language master. Indeed in this age we require nothing but what we call, eloquence ; though the term is miserably abused. But such as it is, eloquence in the political world is like charity in the Christian character, without it a man is counted dead. However, in ancient times, in one particular there was a great and essential difference from the present. Perhaps it may not be without use to hint or remind some persons, that in Greece and Athens, "apud Græciam, in the opinion and triumphant language of Cicero, (De Orat. L. 1.) quæ semper "ELOQUENTIÆ PRINCEPS ESSE VOLUIT, atque illas omnium "doctrinarum inventrices Athenas, in quibus SUMMA DICENDI "VIS ET INVENTA EST ET PERFECTA ;" in Greece and Athens, I say, Orators and Barristers were never permitted to make any epilogus or peroration whatsoever in the courts of the law, or in the senate. "Epilogos ILLI mos civitatis abstulerat," says Vengeance his attribute, (and, as he trod,

The conscious wayes roll'd back!) the passing God, says Quintilian; (L. 10. c. 1.) and from WHOM? From DEMOSTHENES. On which passage the learned Turnebus observes, "Non Licebat ATHENIS affectum movere, ac ne Epilogo quidem uti;" and yet DEMOSTHENES appeared under this restriction. What does Mr. Erskine think? Has he ever read the pleadings for the Crown, or against Midias, or Πίη, Παράφρονης?—Mr. ERSKINE always appears to me below his natural size, when he speaks in the House of Commons. I have too often disliked the manner and the matter. In Westminster Hall he is without an equal. He has scarce a rival in the eloquence adapted to the Bar and a Jury. But as he confesses himself no Statesman, he should have spoken with more modesty and deference on political subjects to those, who are confessedly great statesmen, in the esteem of the country. I will leave in Mr. Erskine's ear the words which Demosthenes thundered against Androtion. It cannot however be supposed for a moment, that I can mean to compare a Gentleman of distinction like Mr. Erskine, with such a being as Androtion. I only give the words, and Dr. Parr may translate them if he pleases. "Εἰ ἀνδραποδὸν ἡ Πάρις, ἀλλὰ μὴ τῶν ἀρχαίων ἔτιγον κτίματα, ἀπολογιστὸς ἔμαι, οὐκ ἔν, ὁ ἄνδρς Ἀθηναῖος, τὰς ὕβρεις ὑπερβῆς τὰς Τύττω, ὡς κατὰ τὴν ἀγορὰν ὑβρίζει, βῶντι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις, ἐπὶ τῷ βήματι, δουλὰς ποιεῖ ἐκ δουλῶν κείνων ἑαυτὸς βελτίους καὶ ἐκ βελτιοίων†"

U 2

That

In conclusion, I recommend to all persons who have an itch for writing or speaking, in publick or private, from Mr. Barrister

† Demosth. Orat. Κατὰ Ἀνδροτιανός, Gr. Ed. Benenati. 1570. pag. 398.

That shook old Ocean's empire? from beneath
 Strange threat'ning notes in hollow murmurs breathe Hoarse through the deafen'd shrouds! But hush'd the blast,

THE TRIDENT IS CONFIRM'D : the dream is past. (n)

Oh,

rister Erskine down to Mr. Dent and his dogs, to study with care the following passage from Lord Shaftesbury, in his "Advice to an Author." The words are these: "Where the harm would be of spending some discourse, and bestowing a little breath and clear voice purely upon ourselves, I cannot see. We might peradventure be less noisy and more profitable in company, if at convenient times we discharged some of our articulate sound, and spoke to ourselves viva voce, when alone." Advice to an Author, Sect. 1. This anticipating remedy of Soliloquy the noble adviser prescribes against the disease called "THE LEPROSY OF ELOQUENCE," which is now a British Epidemick. Mr. Erskine, as I have been informed, has been under a regimen for a long time to no effect, and a Committee of Physicians and Surgeons (appointed by the House) who have examined Mr. Erskine's case, and the state of his blood, have reported it as their opinion, that this Leprosy of Eloquence, with which he is infected, is like the Leprosy of Naaman, the Syrian, that it will cleave to him for ever, except he rigidly adheres to Lord Shaftesbury's anticipating remedy of Soliloquy, and abstains from speaking in all places but in the Court of King's Bench.—Ille se jactet in aula ÆOLUS! (July 1797.)

Oh, strong against ourselves, and rashly bold !
 No voice, as in the Hebrew fane of old,
 From Britain's center to her utmost bounds,
 From parting (o) angels in sad accent sounds :

Paine

(n) These lines were written and inserted here at the latter end of the month of May, 1797.

Proh dolor ! Imperium Pelagi sævique Tridentis
 Cui nunc forte datum !

A patriotick poet may be, I hope, in this instance prophetical :
 " The Dream is past." Behold the confirmation : Admiral Viscount Duncan, Earl St. Vincent, and Earl Howe, the great Naval Triumvirs. "Quis belli insigne superbum, Tempora navali
" fulgent rostrata corona !" (Nov. 1797.)

(o) I trust that Great Britain is yet firm, and that the guardians of her laws and constitution will stand bold, undaunted, and with deliberate valour. My allusion in the verse is this. After the profanation of THE TEMPLE at Jerusalem, under the Roman Emperor Titus, we read (it is recorded by their own Historian) that the voices of guardian angels were heard at the dead of night, crying out through its inmost recesses, Μισαγαγνυμὲν ἔκκυσθαι, " Let us depart hence !" See the seventh Book of the Jewish War, by Josephus, pag. 1282. Edit. Hudsoni Oxon. I recommend the perusal of the whole of that wonderful section (Cap. 5. L. 7). The Historian, in some parts of it, is scarcely inferior in spirit, language, and sublimity, to Æschylus himself. Surely at this most awful hour when, I am almost tempted to say, the moral and the natural world

Paine may blaspheme, and Tooke and Thelwall mourn,

Our Ark (p) is yet by hallow'd hands upborne!
I too

world seems to be breaking up together, when the most powerful European states and populous cities have been convulsed or overthrown, can we hear, without secret emotion and without a kindred horror, what the Historian calls the "Ρωμαϊκῶν ταγμάτων ἀλλοταγμός συμφερόμενων", the τῶν Στασιωστῶν πυρκαϊαὶ σιδηρῶ κεκυκλωμένων κραυγὴ? Can we read unmoved, Οὐτὶ ἡλικίας ηἱ ἑλίοις, ἢ τ' ἐντροπὴ σιμιοτήτος! Διμῶ μαρτυρομένοι καὶ μεμυκοῖτες με οδυρμούς καὶ κραυγὴν ἐντονησάν. Συνηχῆ ἦτε Πειραιᾶ καὶ τὰ περιέξον, βαρυντήσαν πεινντὰ τὴν ὄρεον. Τὰ δορυβὰ τὰ Παθὰ Φοβερατέρη! κτλ.—I will make no apology for presenting the learned reader with this passage, as Longinus would say, "Οὐτὶ μεγάλοι οἱ λόγοι, καὶ ἐμδεδιθῆαι αἱ ἐννοιαί. ὅλον σωματίον δραματικόν καὶ ἀναγκαῖον." (Sect. 9. de Sublim.) I expect his thanks and not his censure, if he is worthy to read it.

(p) The Abbé BARRUEL has done a publick service to Europe, by his eloquent and perspicuous delineation of the History of Jacobinism in his work intituled "Memoires pour servir à l'histoire du Jacobinisme." I by no means subscribe to all the Abbé's opinions and particular doctrines, or to his whims and fancies. But in the disposition of the whole work, I perceive the hand of a master. He has discovered and traced from the very source the original Cabal, and its impious infamous leaders; and he has laid down their scheme, and disposed the proofs from their own authentick writings and works, in a convincing, orderly, and logical arrangement. It is worthy to be read by all who are interested in the great cause of God and man,
and

I too will call, loud to the gathering storm,
 Godwin (q) and Volney, (r) ruin and reform;

The
 and I hope it will be read and studied. It is the best historical and critical commentary extant (except the events themselves) on Mr. Burke's first work, called "Reflections on the Revolution in France." 1790.—It is for such paramount reasons, that the Legislature and all the Magistrates of Great Britain are loudly called upon to controll (while they yet can controll with effect) by the law and by the law alone, such works as those by Thomas Paine, and all the spawn of lewdness, infidelity, and democracy, in their vigour or in their dotage; to repress by law such popular works or novels as THE MONK, by M. Lewis, Esq. M. P. which I have stated † amply, as indecent and blasphemous; and to watch over the proceedings of Dr. Geddes §, the new Translator of the Bible. The plain questions are these: "ARE WE TO BE PRESERVED?" and, "CAN WE BE PRESERVED?" The French Revolution is now matter of history. I mean of history speaking in every language of every nation of Europe. One establishment upholds another; and the fall of any one draws after it a long Ruin. Read the Memoirs of the Abbé BARUEL, and doubt, if you can, whether LITERATURE has power to kill and to make alive. Atheist Statesmen always co-operate with Atheist Philosophers, but are generally duped by them. "Ils prennent leurs ordres sans le savoir," said D'Alembert, in the plenitude of his impudence. The grand triple Conspiracy and crushing Cabal, under all its horrid formularies, against religion, regal power, and social order under moral restraint, has shewn what is the force and potency of LITERATURE, stimulated ¹⁰ A

† Preface to Dial. IV. of the P. of L.

§ Ib. Pref. to Dial. IV.

Their colours gaudy, though but idly (s) spread.

Better

self certainly, but whether his opinions and their consequences will promote patience and tranquillity in other men, is all that we are concerned to know and expose. He professes to write a moral work. It is miscellaneous and unconnected, whatever he may think. I would premise there is a difference in considering a moral and a mere metaphysical Enquiry. In the latter it is just and necessary to take in all the parts of a system to know its efficacy and apparent truth; but in a moral work there is not the same necessity, and for this plain reason. Mankind are guided in their actions, not by system, but by single impulses; by detached maxims, by aphorisms, by sentences, which have frequently the force of whole volumes. Whatever impels to action singly and by itself, may be considered also apart, and held forth either to approbation or to censure. For this important reason I shall offer some passages from "The Enquirer, by William Godwin." The book perhaps has been read very little; but it is published and it may be read, and I am sure it ought to be criticized, not from its excellence or the ability of the writer, but from the subject matter. His first Chapter or Essay is, "Of awakening the Mind." He begins with so very wise a sentence, that we are naturally prepared for much instruction. I have indeed been told, that Mr. Godwin's mother, like little Isaac's in Sheridan's Duenna, used to call him "Little Solomon." What is this sentence? verbatim as follows: "If individuals" "were universally happy, the species would be happy!" Again: "When a child is born, one of the earliest purposes of his institution ought to be, to awaken his mind, to breathe a soul into the," "as yet unformed, mass." Whether the mass is the mind, or the mind the mass, and at what time the soul is to be breathed into the mind, is not quite clear; but it is very instructive.

Mr. Godwin

Better be dull than wicked : from the heart

The

Mr. Godwin also thinks, that " it is not the absurdest of paradoxes to affirm, that the true object of juvenile education is " to teach no one thing in particular, but (the reader will be rather surprised) to provide, against the age of five-and-twenty, a mind " well regulated, active, and prepared to learn." It is to be remembered, that the general education of mankind is considered. If the reader's mind is not awakened by such an alarm of nonsense, I think he must be deeply intranced, as fast as a modern watchman, or Mr. Godwin himself, when he wrote the chapter. Next comes Essay 2. " On the utility of talents." From this we learn, in Mr. Godwin's own words, that " The " only complete protection against the appellation of fool, is to " be the possessor of uncommon capacity ;" and that " a self-satisfied, half-witted fellow is the most ridiculous of all things." This is also very instructive, and lets us into the secret of Mr. Godwin's wits and his self-satisfaction. But I cannot think Mr. G.'s instructions will " produce in his pupil or child (if he has either) " one of the long-looked-for saviours of the human race." It might perhaps produce another Anacharsis Cloots, the Orator of the human race. Then come " The Sources of Genius," in Essay 3. The sentiments are either so trite, or so absurd, or so wicked, that it is difficult to choose. One of them I must select.—Of the children of peasants, Mr. G. observes, " That " at the age of fourteen the very traces of understanding are " obliterated. They are enlisted at the crimping house of oppression. They are brutified by immoderate and unremitting labour. Their hearts are hardened, and their spirits braken by " all that they see, all that they feel, and all that they look forward to. THIS IS ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING POINTS OF " VIEW in which we consider the present order of Society !!! It " is

The life-springs issue, and their force impart ;

Better

“ is the great slaughter house of genius, and of mind. It is the “ unrelenting murderer of hope and gaiety, of the love of reflec“ tion, and of the love of life.” (p. 16.) This it is, I suppose, as this atrocious but foolish writer would call it, to promote patience and tranquillity among mankind ! Mr. G. has not yet done.
 Essay the 4th is on the same Sources. Here he proves too much for himself. He says, “ There is an insanity among “ Philosophers, that has brought Philosophy itself into discre“ dit.” (p. 19.) At the close of the eighteenth century, Mr. G.
 speaking of the succession of events, and the manner in which we acquire ideas, delivers this sentence seriously and philosophically, with a view to be instructive, as I suppose. “ If any man “ was to tell me that if I pull the trigger of my gun, a swift and “ beautiful horse will immediately appear starting from the mouth “ of the tube ; I can ONLY answer, that I do not expect it, and “ that it is contrary to the tenor of my former experience.
 “ But I can assign no reason (!!!) why this is an event intrinsi-“ cally more absurd, or less likely to happen than the event I have “ been accustomed to witness.” It may be familiarly illustrated “ to the unlearned reader, by remarking, that the process of gene“ ration, in consequence of which men and horses are born,
 “ has obviously no more perceivable correspondence with that event, “ than it would have for me to pull the trigger of a gun!!!” I pass by the gross indecency of the illustration, that I may just hint, what it is to be a philosopher, and instruct the unlearned in the new way. I am ashamed to analyse any other opinions in this Essay ; but as Mr. G. is supposed by some to be “ A man of talents,” I suppose also that Mr. G. has the properties of “ A man of talents,” as he himself has declared them to be ; and that “ He (himself) can recollect up to what period he was jejune,
 and

Better to write plain nonsense ; better preach

With

“ and up to what period he was dull. He can call to mind the “ innumerable errors of speculation he has committed, that “ would almost disgrace an idiot.” (p. 28.) For my own part, in the present instance, I have nothing to do with recollection. Mr. Godwin and his book are before me. So much for “ A man of talents.” I cannot oppress the reader with all his desolating, unfounded, and silly opinions on all trades, professions, and occupations, wholly subversive of the order of society, and, as I believe, of any supposable order whatsoever of any regulated human society. But if the reader wishes to be amused with the acmé or height of absurdity and wildness, I earnestly recommend to him to read Mr. G.’s account of “ The Walk of a man of talents, “ (Mr. Godwin himself, for instance,) and of a man without “ talents, (such as myself) from Temple Bar to Hyde Park “ Corner.” (p. 31 and 32.) It is really refreshing in the extreme. Nothing can be superior to it, but his “ Gun of generation,” just described, and his “ self-tilling plough, without the intervention of man,” in his other book on Political Justice, Vol. 2. p. 494. Ed. 8vo.—I will give Mr. Godwin’s own account of this famous Walk, especially as the publick are accustomed to observe all kinds of men and women too, between Temple Bar and Hyde Park Corner. “ The chief point of difference “ (says Mr. G.) between the man of talents and the man without, consists in the different ways in which their minds are employed “ during the same interval!!!” (This is the proposition, ludicrous and absurd enough of itself, but now let us hear the proof or illustration.) “ They, (i. e. the man of talents and the man without) “ are obliged, let us suppose, to walk from Temple Bar to Hyde “ Park Corner. THE DULL MAN goes strait forward: he has “ so many furlongs to traverse. He observes if he meets any of “ his

With filky (t) voice, and sacred flow'rs of speech,

In

“ his acquaintance; he enquires respecting their health and “ their family. He glances perhaps at the shops as he passes;
 “ he admires the fashion of a buckle, and the metal of a tea “ urn. If he experience any flights of fancy (i. e. between Tem“ ple Bar and Hyde Park Corner) they are of a short extent; of “ the same nature as the flight of a forest bird clipped of his “ wings, and condemned to pass the rest of his life in a farm-yard.
 “ On the other hand, THE MAN OF TALENTS gives full scope to “ his imagination. He laughs and cries. Unindebted to the “ suggestions of the surrounding objects his whole soul is em“ ployed!” (We are now to prepare for the employment of the whole soul of a man of talents from Temple Bar to Hyde Park Corner, and the reader will observe that he has enough to do.
 La voici.) “ He, (the man of talents) enters into nice calculations; he digests sagacious reasonings.” (All this is done between Temple Bar and Hyde Park Corner.) “ In imagination he “ declaims or describes, impressed with the deepest sympathy, or “ elevated to the loftiest rapture. He passes through a thou“ sand imaginary scenes, tries his courage, tastes his ingenuity, and “ thus becomes gradually prepared to meet almost any of the “ many-coloured events of human life. He consults by the aid “ of memory the books he has read, (N. B. a man of talents ne“ ver reads in the streets), and he projects others for the future “ instruction and delight of mankind.” (I always said Mr. G. himself projected his book on Justice and this on Education in the streets; “ Sic tu trivis, indocte solebas.”) If he observes the “ passengers, (the dull man only observes his acquaintance) he “ reads their countenances, conjectures their past history, and “ forms a superficial notion of their wisdom and folly, their vir“ tue

In soft probation (u) for a Foundling's gown,

To

"true or vice, satisfaction or misery. If he observes the scenes that occur, it is with the eye of a connoisseur or an artist." (The dull man above minds only buckles and turns.) "Every object is capable of suggesting to him a Volume of Reflection." (Mr. G. must mean his own volume now before me, called Reflections on manners, education, and literature.) "The time of these two persons in one respect resembles; it has brought them both to Hyde Park Corner. In almost every other respect it is dissimilar." Here is the denouement or the Eugene of Philosopher Godwin, and I have no doubt he thinks it a discovery in Terra jam cognita, as he will allow the ground to be between Temple Bar and Hyde Park Corner. I cannot say the Parallel is quite in the manner of Plutarch, but it is very instructive. No man can ever be again at a loss to know a man of talents from a man without, in the street. I had often been puzzled, till I met with this instructive volume of Reflections.—When the Reader has considered this, and all the other parts I have produced, and thousands I have omitted, he will remember that MR. GODWIN has set himself up for a Legislator, a Reformer, a Philosopher, a destroyer of ancient prejudices, and a builder of new systems, a guide through the darkness of the world by this new light, and he expects the obedience of mankind. I am sure, I cannot even conceive that any man or woman will worship BEFORE SUCH AN IMAGE of Democracy and Tyranny, whoever may sound the cornet, sackbut, or dulcimer at the dedication. It is not an image of gold: it is an image of iron mixed with mirey clay. For my own part, I will not move from my place.

This

To please some guardian Midas of the town,

Who

This it is to instruct the world, to reform it, to make it happy. Mr. G. comes in such a questionable shape, that I know not when to finish my questions. I might go on chapter by chapter in this manner. Let any man look at his opinions, and the nature of his knowledge and his pretensions. I must copy two thirds (at the least) if I wished to express, and to expose, all that is reprehensible in this volume; or wicked, or ridiculous, or trite beyond belief. I would hold up Mr. G.'s own propositions, in his own words, to all persons who have understanding, and let them judge. Let them fairly decide whether his impiety be not even less than his folly, and the weakness of his understanding more visible than the plunging violence of his exertions. "Dat operam at eum ratiōne insaniat." Mr. Godwin is at best but a mongrel and an exotick. He is grafted upon the stock of Condorcet and the French rabble; but he has not even the raciness of that teeming soil. English minds will not long bear the grossness of such an imposition. We are better and earlier taught than he wishes we should be. Reason indeed disclaims Mr. Godwin; in eloquence, and good writing, (in spite of all his dogmatism) he knows nothing; and of the Belles Lettres nearly as much as can be attained, or rather picked up, in a modern academy in some London Square, or at Islington. But for Mr. Godwin we are to lay down Plato and Xenophon; for him we are to relinquish Aristotle and Tully; to him Locke is to give way, and the simplicity and tempered humour of Mr. Addison is to be lost in Mr. Godwin's effusions.—I really am fatigued with this man. Nothing but the importance of the consequences and effects of his wild, weak, wicked, and absurd notions, (I cannot dignify them with the name of principles

Who gives his vote from judgment and from taste;

and W

Better

ciples or αξιώματα) could have prevailed upon me to have wasted irretrievably so much of my time upon them. From the period when Philosopher HOME first garbled his neglected "Treatise on Human Nature," and published it in the form of Essays, and set up, as it were, a kind of shop-shop of morality in the suburbs of Atheism, we have had nothing but Essays upon Essays, till—we all know the consequence. And last of all comes Philosopher GODWIN, and sets up his trumpery shop too in the same quarter; though he is willing to wait upon ladies and gentlemen at their own houses, with his "Gros paquet de toile verte † & rouge," upon the principles and practice of the celebrated Fripier in Gil Blas, and pretty much with the same kind of justice. He presents you with his second-hand suits, with his "habits de drap tout uni," and his "habits de velours un peu passés," demands his soixante ducats, and then addresses you with the same cool effrontery; Vous êtes bien heureux qu'on se soit adressé à moi plutôt qu'à un autre. Grâce au ciel, j'exerce rondement ma profession: JESUIS LE SEUL FRIPIER qui ait DE LA MORALE.†" So much for Philosopher GODWIN, or LE PHILOSOPHE FRIPIER, malgré sa morale! —To the learned world in particular (if they have ever drudged through the works of Mr. Godwin as I have done) I will address a few words from the second book of the Pyrrhonic Institutions of Sextus Empiricus, as applicable to WILLIAM GODWIN, after all the observations I have made on his writings.

Eἰς τὸν

† Green is the symbol of the Irish, and Red of French democratic factions.

Gil Blas, Liv. 1. ch. 15.

Better with Warner move with measur'd haste

X

To

“Εξαινεῖ δὲ τὸν ἀνθρώπον τοῦτον διὰ τὸ τὸν ἀλλοτρίαν Ζωὴν, καὶ βιάσκειν οὐκ ἔχει δύναμιν.” Sext.
Empyric. Infit. Pyrrhon. L. 2. C. 5.

(r) Volney.—See Dial. 1. (note e) of the P. of L. for an account of Mr. Volney's book, entitled, “Ruins, or a Meditation on the Revolution of Empires.”

(s) “Mocking the air with colours idly spread.”

Shakspeare's King John.

(t) All Doctors (and Bishops too) should remember it is one thing to preach, and another to print and publish their sermons. It is also high time for BISHOP HORSLEY (qui au travers de toute sa pitié n'est pas Auteur impunément, et qui a la satisfaction d'arracher les Voluptueuses aux plaisirs †, et d'affirmer dans leur devoir des Epouses ébranlées par des amans séducteurs; though I cannot say, “qu'on trouve ses homélies et ses ouvrages également forts et délicats”) it is high time I say, for my Lord Bishop Horsley to remember that it was said of the Archbishop of Grenada, “Voilà un Sermon qui sent furieusement l'Apoplexie.” (Gil Blas. Liv. 7. C. 4.) I do not think that the Archevêque de Grenade (I beg pardon) plain Bishop Horsley (for I think, he never will be an Archbishop) will appoint me to be his Secretary, or in the inimitable words of Le Sage, G. B. l. 7. c. 2. be desirous “avoir près de lui un homme “ (comme moi) qui ait de la littérature, et une bonne main pour “ mettre

† See his Magdalen Homily, and his speeches in the H. of L. in cases of Adultery.

To lead new pleasure (κ) to a pedant's ear,

Appeal

"mettre au net ses homélies."—I may add, that if I should take a walk through his literary grounds, I fear I should be found damage-feasant; and if I were to enter the premises at Rochester or Westminster, and be prosecuted for it, I should certainly direct my counsel to plead a special "Nil habuit in tenementis." (See Lord Raymond's Rep. 1550.) For though his Lordship, as Plaintiff, is but an Assignee, he may take advantage of the estoppel, for it runs with the land. See Co. Lytt. 152. and Salk. 276.

Truth, erudition, and ability, always fail in their effect if their professors enforce them with violence or asperity in the manner, or imprudence in the choice of subjects and in the place of delivering them.

(ν) I allude to any popular preacher. It is really humiliating and degrading to the clergy to preach probationary sermons, on any vacancy of a chaplainship at any of the charitable foundations, before such a set of judges. One is for voice and action, another for what he calls learning, others for the tender passions, some for appeals to reason, and others against love logick and close argument. No Divine can satisfy such judges, but such a doctor as is described by John of Salisbury, "Doctor sanctissimus ille Gregorius, qui melleo predicationis imbre totam rigavit et inebriavit Ecclesiam!"—It is high time to put these affairs on a more respectable footing for the Clergy. I think indeed, that the business, elections, &c. belonging to all hospitals; and all charities, should be transacted by a Committee of the Subscribers, elected annually. The propriety of such a measure being generally adopted in London, and near the metropolis, is evident; and I wish this hint may be attended to by men of sense and judgment.

Appeal to Bryant, nor his judgment fear;

Better to state-arithmetick be bred,

Tell Jacobins and Tories by the (y) head;

X 2

Prove

(x) See a Treatise lately published, entitled "METPON APIETON; or a New Pleasure, recommended in a Dissertation on Greek and Latin Prosody, (1797.)" It is without any permission, and I think with considerable effrontery, dedicated to Mr. Bryant in a style perfectly new. If almost every page of this treatise were not sillier, wilder, and more extravagant than the preceding, I might be tempted to take some notice of its multifarious contents. For they are very numerous indeed; from the laws passed in King Priam's reign (I beg Mr. Bryant's pardon) under his marine Minister when Troy was attacked and invaded by the Grecians, down to the present French war and the incomprehensible Cavalry Act, under George the Third of Great Britain. As it does not appear to me possible for this Author (I use his own words in his own treatise) to "put off the monkey and bring out the man," I shall say nothing further of this farrago of learned nonsense.

(y) Mr. Burke gave it as his opinion in his "Two Letters on the Proposals for Peace," (1796) that there are "400,000 political citizens in Great Britain, of whom 80,000 are pure Jacobins, the other four-fifths perfectly sound," &c. In this particular instance I shall only say of this great and venerable man, what one of Dante's Commentators says on a passage in the Purgatorio: "Per verità, è un gran capriccio; ma in ciò segue il suo stile." Dante, Shakspeare, Milton, and Burke, all abound in similar capriccios; but I will add Dr. Johnson's admirable words: "He that can put them in balance with their beauties" must Prove that no dogs as through the streets they range,

 Give bone for bone in regular (z) exchange;
 Or frame, with Marsh, strange theorems to try

Some

" must be considered not as nice but dull, as less to be censured
 " for want of candour, than pitied for want of sensibility."
 Life of Milton.

(z) Here is another little capriccio of a man of no common sagacity, the late Adam Smith. He says seriously, by way of illustration; " No body ever saw a dog make a fair and deliberate exchange of one bone for another with another dog." Smith's Wealth of Nations, Vol. 1. p. 20. Ed. 8vo. My dear Adam, this philosophy of yours is nearly of the same date as your ancestor's † in Eden, and I can only say in reply, " Who ever expected to see a dog do so?"—We have all read and heard of that snarling sect, the Cynicks, and if we could convert dogs into philosophers, or what is harder still, philosophical propositions into meat and bones, (which I fear is more than most Scotch Professors can do) I should apply metaphorically the following lines from a celebrated Poet, a great observer of human nature:

" So when two dogs are fighting || in the streets,
 With a third dog one of the two dogs meets;
 With angry tooth he bites him to the bone,
 And this dog smarts for what that dog has done."

† In the most extensively learned book I ever saw, (for the size of it) and the best arranged, I mean the "Philosophia Generalis, &c. per Theophilum Gale," there is actually a Chapter "De Philosophia Adamis." L. 1. C. 1. f. 3.—"A Capriccio!"

|| i. e. For a bone, or for any thing which is an object of fair and deliberate exchange.

Some manuscript's divine identity; (a)

(a) A learned and ingenious Critick, the Rev. Wm. MARSH, (Translator of Michaelis's Introduction to the New Testament, to which he has added many valuable notes and illustrations) published in the year 1795, "Letters to Archdeacon Travis, on the subject of a Greek Manuscript in the Publick Library at Cambridge, printed at Leipzig, but sold in London by R. Marsh, Fleet-street." The following theorem is so new, and so unparalleled, that I cannot help preserving it in this poem as a literary curiosity, and as most of my readers, I dare say never saw or even thought such a theorem possible. I shall laugh hereafter at any man who tells me, that the chances for or against any thing are 100,000 to 1.

"General Theorem, by which the identity of Manuscripts is determined, from a coincidence in their Readings." (Letters, p. 70.)

"If after a collation of Greek MSS, to the amount of any number which I will call p , the reading, A, B, C, D, &c. to the amount of n have all been found in any of these MSS. which I will call α † but not one of them in any other Manuscript: moreover if other readings, A, B, F, A, &c. to the amount of n have likewise been all found in the MS. α , but each of them in only one other Manuscript; further if a third set of readings to the amount of r is contained in the MS. α ,

† In Mr. Marsh's problem, a Hebrew character (Aleph) is used, instead of the Greek α which I have used, as the printer had not the Hebrew characters at hand.

To the Peers' House approach with temper'd awe,
Lose sense and grammar in Charles Yorke and law, (b)

Turn

but each of them in only two other MSS. ; a fourth set to the amount of s. each of which has been discovered in only three other Manuscripts, and so on : in that case, if all these readings should afterwards be found in any one Manuscript, the probability that the Manuscript, in which they are thus found, is the very identical Manuscript from which they had been taken, is to the chance of its being a different MS. as,

$p + n + r + s + &c.$

— 1 to 1."

1^m. 2ⁿ. 3^r. 4^s. &c. &c. &c. &c.

I shall say nothing, but leave the mathematical and divine calculating reader con la bocca dolce,

(b) See lately published, "The Jurisdiction of the Lords' House, or Parliament, by Sir Matthew Hale," and an introductory preface by P. Hargrave, Esq. the Editor. 1796. Mr. Hargrave is universally acknowledged as one of the soundest, and most learned lawyers in the kingdom. But when he will step out of his way, and turn rhetorician, and fancy that he is writing like Cicero de Oratore, there is some difference between the Roman and the English advocate. Mr. H. in his preface, thus writes concerning the Rt. Hon. Charles Yorke, the short-lived and lamented Chancellor. "He was a modern constellation of English jurisprudence, whose digressions from the exuberance of the best juridical knowledge, were illuminations ; whose energies were oracles ; whose constancy of mind was won into the pinnacle of our English forum at an inauspicious moment ; whose exquisiteness of sensibility, at almost the next moment from the impressions

Turn energies to oracles of state,
 And by digressing, best illuminate ;
 Better be White, though dubious (c) of my fame,
 Or wisely sink my own in (d) Homer's name ;

Better

sions of imputed error, stormed the fort of even his highly-cultivated reason, and so made elevation and extinction contemporaneous ; and whose prematureness of fate—has caused an almost insuppliable interstice in the science of English equity." Pref. p. 181. I really think Mr. Hargrave has dived through all the celebrated ten fountains of invention, from which "† he has taken in water for an happy voyage over the procellose ocean of his funeral parentation" of CHARLES YORKE. —I pretend not to comprehend this passage in all its sublimity, but upon one principle, which, as it appears to me, is the grand, though secret design of Mr. Hargrave, to leave upon record to his brethren : It is this : "THAT A LAWYER, WHO WRITES SO CLEARLY AS TO BE UNDERSTOOD, IS AN AVOWED ENEMY TO HIS PROFESSION."

(c) See the learned and very ingenious (but rather declamatory) Sermons by Professor White of Oxford at the Bampton Lecture. But in this, as in many other cases, it seems, "Garth did not write his own Dispensary."—I always thought the charge ridiculous ; yet learned men would "write about it and about it." Any thing will serve for a controversy. Enquire of Messrs Ireland, Malone, and Chalmers, at the Shakespeare Manufactory in Norfolk-street, in the Strand,

(d) The Rev. Dr. Parr will best explain this verse. See his sublime Apostrophe, "Spirit of Henry Homer ! &c. &c. &c." Letter † Hist. of Friar Gerund. Vol. 2. p. 265.

Better to disappoint the publick hope,

Like Warton driveling (e) on the page of Pope; (f)

While

Letter to Dr. Coombe, by an occasional Writer in the British Critick.

(e) The Booksellers may say in Sir Philip Sidney's words:
 "What fools were we, to mingle such driveling speeches among " (WARBURTON's) noble thoughts! (Sir P. S.'s Arcadia.)"

Pan etiam Arcadiâ dicat se iudice victum.

(f) See the new edition of Pope's Works by the Rev. Dr. JOSEPH WARTON, late Head-master of Winchester School. The mildest words I can use are, "Tantum rem tam negligenter?" I praised (and liberally enough as some people thought) Dr. Joseph Warton's Common Place Book on Pope, in the First Dial. of the P. of L. and I still think it very entertaining. But when a learned man appears as the professed Editor of the most distinguished and the most interesting Poet of the nation, and when the publick have been taught to expect the work as of great promise, we require something more than mere copying his own old common place remarks from one book, to put them in the form of notes at the bottom of the pages of another. It is mere book-making, beneath the character of such a gentleman as Doctor Warton. It is to steal from one's own self. Yet the town is patient: "Marcus dixit, ita est." But I will not say so. When the illustrious friend of Pope, WILLIAM WARBURTON, (sublime even in his exorbitances, and dignified in sagacity and erudition,) condescended to become an Editor, I should have preferred reprinting his edition as it stood. The ingenious Winchester School-master might with propriety enough have corrected the While o'er the ground that Warburton once trod,

 The Winton Pedant shakes his little rod,
 Content his own stale scraps to steal or glean,
 Hath'd up and season'd with an old man's spleen;
 Nor e'en the Bard's deformity can 'scape,
 " His pictur'd person and his libell'd (g) shape ;"

Ah,

the press, and added some little anecdotes and excerpts from his classicks. What was beneath Warburton might suit Dr. Joseph Warton. I am indeed ashamed of this edition upon the whole. If Dr. W. had neither time, nor spirits, nor industry, nor leisure, nor inclination, he should not have undertaken a work so important to the world. But as there is no other new edition to be had of an elegant form, type and paper, (and this is very pretty) many persons will desire to have it, and I am sure I will not refuse it a place in my library. Perhaps, I have said more than is necessary; but there will be persons enough to praise the Doctor's gleanings from himself. But I shall say more, at the end of the next note.

(g) Poets are often prophets. POPE little thought that, fifty years after his death, an ingenious Schoolmaster and formerly a writer of little Odes to Fancy, evening owls upon a tree, apostrophes to the twilight and such nonsense, would actually revive some "imputed trash," (perhaps) not his own, and actually give to the malignant curiosity of some folks, " His libelled person and his pictured shape." (Prol. to Pope's Satires, v. 353.) It is strange that Mr. Gibbon and Mr. Pope should have the same fate. The figure of Mr. G. has been

Ah, better to unlearn'd oblivion hurl'd,

Then

been presented to the world and to posterity by his friend Lord Sheffield (See Mr. G's Posthumous Miscellanies, 4to Vol. 1.) and Mr. Pope's contemptible appearance by the kindness of his editor.

I have many and great objections to this edition; but I shall only state a few. An edition of Pope is a fair and a very proper subject of criticism. I think the title page contemptuous: "With notes and illustrations by J. WARTON, D. D. and others." To include WILLIAM WARBURTON, under the title of others, required an assurance equal at least to the trifling dilettante spirit of such a commentator as Dr. Warton. In this instance, as he says of the great Samuel Johnson, "semulentus videtur." I have no personal partiality for Warburton; he was long before my time: nor have I the honour (such I should indeed esteem it) of an acquaintance with Bishop Hurd, his venerable friend and compeer. But I was born to admire erudition and genius, and to vindicate them when they are insulted. Dr. W's life of Pope is not well written as to the matter or the manner. The style is defective and often vulgar. I shall instance a passage or two. The perpetual vulgarism of the term "our author."—"Dennis pursued our author in bitter invectives, against every work he gradually published." p. 18. "After arriving at eminence by so many capital compositions, our author," &c. &c.—p. 24. "Which, as an uncommon curiosity, one would have been glad to have beheld." p. 11. "Dr. Warburton's defence of the Essay on Man ultimately got him a wife and a bishoprick." p. 45. "Into what a mass has he raised and expanded so slight a hint!" p. 21. Dr. W. is fond of "delicious lines, and delicious passages, &c. I cannot specify more of them in this note.

Then give to Petry (b) what I owe the world ;

would

And

He commends Voltaire too often and too much. He is also perpetually praising the German Professor Heyne, who has insulted our English universities and publick schools in his writings. Yet we have republished his Virgil and all his ponderous dissertations. Professor Heyne was originally a mechanick ; he was not born with taste, and he never acquired elegance. His learning is without discernment. More embodied dulness or a heavier mass of matter than his Virgil I never saw. The shrine of the Poet is indeed loaded with offerings, but it is illuminated with rays from Gottingen.—I must observe further.

It was very bold and very indecent in the Reverend Dr. Warton, to publish Pope's Imitation of the Second Satire of the first Book of Horace. Pope never † printed it in his works himself ; Dr. Warburton refused to admit it : no common edition whatsoever of Pope has admitted it. It is printed only in a vulgar appendix in two volumes. But if Mr. Pope had actually described every nymph in the seraglio of the pious Needham, must the Rev. Dr. Warton publish such a poem, merely because Mr. Pope had written it ?—This sixth volume of Dr. Warton's Edition should be reprinted and this scandalous poem, and some other parts of it, omitted. With the Commentators § on Shakspeare, Pope, &c. of modern days, there is no such thing as an invocation to "Intermissa VENUS ; for the † Dr. W. indeed says, vol. 1. Life p. 56. "Pope suffered his friend Doddsley to print it as his writing in one edition 12mo." I never saw it, but can believe the Doctor. Pope was undoubtedly ashamed of it.

§ See The P. of L. Dial. 1.

And idly busy, in my choice perplex,

but

Throw

the Goddess has actually deserted her beloved Cyprus, "Ita hæc tota ruens." (See Horace for the rest.)

"Te, Venus Regina, pio vocantur

"THUR WARTON ET STEPHANI decoras

Transfer in ædes."

I have indeed no doubt the poem is by Pope. As to mere wit and point in the imitation, it is perhaps the best. But what then? Mr. Pope's works are distinguished for peculiar correctness in taste and morals; and are intended for the most general and the most unqualified perusal. Dr. W. might as well have printed Mr. E's Geranium in his comments, or any other light and vigorous fally of a very young man, forgiven as such and forgotten, as the following lines, if the reader will believe they are printed in POPE'S WORKS;

"Or when a tight neat girl will serve the turn,

"In errant pride continue * * *

"I'm a plain man, whose maxim is profest,

"The thing at hand is of all things the best."

Vol. 6. p. 51.—see also p. 49. worse still.

I, though an anonymous layman, refuse to print the passage in full, which the Reverend Doctor Warton has printed and sanctioned with his name as Editor of Pope's Works.

Nobis non licet esse tam disertis,

Qui musas colimus severiores.

If Mr. Pope had often written thus, his works must have been consigned to the library of a brothel. This edition of Pope's works will be sent into every part of the civilized world. This will be so; and can it be said, that I speak without reason?

Surely

Throw years of labour on a single text,

(Alike

Surely I am not pleading for publick decency in vain. The Doctor at least should have dedicated this sixth volume to the Ladies—of the Commons. To what other ladies could I present this volume? Yes so it is. “Doctors rush in, where laymen fear to tread.” But because Pope called this, “Sober advice from Horace,” the Doctor thought there could be no harm in it. Dr. W. observes, “that the first step in the literary, as well as in the political world is of the utmost consequence, &c.” Pope’s Life, p. 14. I would remind the Doctor of the last step in both these worlds, which he seems to have forgotten. I was surprised to read these words in vol. 4. p. 333, on the compliment Virgil paid to Cato. “A much hollower passage (says Dr. Warton) is “that in which Virgil had the courage to represent his hero “assisting the Etruscans in punishing † their tyrannical king, in “the 8th book of the Æneid v. 494.”

Ergo omnis furis surrexit ETRURIA iustus,

REGEM AD SUPPLICIUM presenti Marte REVERCUNT.”

Dr. W. knows that Julius Cæsar was not Mezentius. I am sure the Doctor cannot approve and recommend this passage, which has been in the mouth of every modern Regicide from the murderers of Charles I. to the murderers of Louis XVI. But why perpetually call out these passages to publick notice? why dwell upon the “morgue et grandeur des Souverains,” “the authorised type of a Lion,” &c. &c. (v. 1. p. 33.) in times like these? We all love liberty as well as Dr. W. but a wise and good man discerns the signs of the times. These † Punishing is the modern democratical word for murdering.

(Alike to me, encaf'd in Grecian bronze,

Koran

are the under-murmurings of a spurious, bastard, half republicanism. I like them not. I write with much indignation against such an edition of such a poet. Does any Husband, or Father, think of cautioning his wife, his daughter, or his son, against any part whatsoever of Pope's works? If this edition becomes general, it will be necessary to do so. I have no personal dislike to Dr. Warton: my business with him is solely, as Editor of Pope. Nothing can justify him. Am I to spare publick criticism, because of Dr. Warton's age, (is it in the title page?) or the variety and extent of his learning? Surely not. They are both strong against the deed. Pope was in his hands in double trust. First, as he is the most moral and correct poet of the nation, the consistence of his fame and character should have been preserved, even by the partiality of an editor. Secondly, Dr. W. stood bound to his country, from his sacred profession, not to contaminate the rising youth of either sex, by such filthiness and rank obscenity as would disgrace the vilest magazine. By this he has committed a great offence against the publick, which he cannot repair. I am sure I have spoken nothing of Dr. W's private character. But his edition is open to me, and to the whole world. It challenges my notice: and executed as it is, it demands the very spirit of Satire. "Ense velut strido Lucilius ardens infremuit." The very indecent chapter of "The Double Mistress," in this scandalous Sixth Volume, should have been omitted, in the Memoirs of Scriblerus. (Vol. 6. p. 150.) In the Second Volume there are a few trumpery, vulgar, copies of verses, which disgrace the pages. I am ashamed of the low taste which could suffer them to appear before the publick. I again and again, disclaim

Koran or Vulgate, Veda, Priest, or Bonze)

And

disclaim any personal harshness or severity on the character of Doctor Warton, with whom I am not even acquainted. All I call for loudly, is that this sixth volume should suffer what every catalogue yearly informs me, poor Hollingshead once suffered. I never before heard that tendernefs was due to an edition of any work. But, in these days, if an idea or opinion is but absurd, it will be considered as deep and sagacious.

I shall not make any further remarks on Dr. W.'s criticisms on Pope at present, they are often very just, curious, and gratifying, but chiefly taken from his old Essay. I cannot now proceed. Nos genera degustamus, non bibliothecas discutimus †. But as to the conclusion of one of Dr. Warton's notes on the Prologue to the Satires, I can well conceive it to be his own case, and I can believe it may be applied with feeling. Doctor Warton says, "We read (or he will read) with more satisfaction, the

ΑΨ' ὁ πᾶς πρὸς πολλοὺς ὑψίστοις τιθῆναι
Εκλιθεὶς ἰαχῶν

"than we do (or than the Doctor will hereafter do)

"Τεῖς μὲν οὐκ αὖτ' ἴων, ΤΟ ΔΕ ΤΕΤΡΑΤΟΝ ἰστούμενος "Αἶψα, κτλ." Vol. 4. pag. 55." Which last is the motto to this Fourth and last Dialogue of the P. of L. I can indeed easily conceive, that after Dr. Joseph Warton has read these remarks, he will shrink back like the child in Homer, from the grey-goose

† Quint. Lib. 10. C. 1.

And lend to truth itself unballow'd aid,

In all the rashness of a scholar's trade,

And fall like (i) Porson.

OCTAVIUS.

You may spare your pains,

He gives no ear to any modern strains,

Save

goose plume nodding § on the head of the writer of this note, and prefer luxury and repose on the deep bosoms of his well-zoned nurses, the London Bookfellers. To them and to their consolations † I leave him.

(b) Perry, put synonymously for the printer of any factious newspaper.

(i) See Mr. Professor Porson's Letter to Archdeacon Travis, of which the world has now heard quite enough. Mr. Professor Porson, you may begin again, but pray don't write in Mr. Perry's little democratick closet fitted up for the wits, at the Morning Chronicle office. It is beneath you; I speak seriously. I know your § Διὸς ἀπ' ἀγορᾶς κορυβὸς νεύοντα νεύοντες.

H. 6. 470.

† Anglicè £500.

Save those, by Oberèa (k) fondly sung,
 What time Opano (l) trembled on her tongue.

AUTHOR.

Censure or praise let others seek or fear :
 Look at my verse, the superscription there,
 The cause that I defend : 'tis your's, 'tis mine,
 The statesman's, and the peasant's. In my line,
 All find in me a patron and a friend,
 Unseen, unknown, unshaken to the end.

Y

Yes,

your abilities.—It may do well enough for Mr. Joseph Richardson, that fair Fugitive and Highland Bard, if a certain political Dramatist's computations will leave him any abilities at all, which I begin to doubt. What is genius, without a regulated life ! Young men about town (to use that detestable phrase,) will at last allow it, if they look at all the tattered, sinworn fragments of their species, whom they meet in their walks.

(k) See "An Epistle from Oberèa, Queen of Otaheite, to "Joseph Banks, Esq." (now Sir Joseph Banks) Mr. Porson's favourite modern poem, which he can say, or rather sing to his friends. It is very ingenious, but rather too free ; the versification is exquisite. I believe it is the only piece of modern English verse Mr. P. will read.

Yes, from the depths of Pindus shall my rhymes,
 Through this mis-order'd world, these lawless times,
 Be heard in Albion and her inmost state ;
 All that the good revere and bad men hate,
 In spirit and in substance, as of old,
 The Muse in her Asbestos (m) shall enfold.

This is my Method.—Though I sometimes stray
 From Euclid's rigid rules to fancy's way,

Yet

(i) Opano or Tabaho was the manner in which the name of Banks was pronounced at Otaheite. But in this learned language, as Mr. Zachary Fungus says to his brother Isaac in the Commissary, " Pshaw! you blockhead, I tell you THE NAME does not signify nothing."

(m) I know not whether I need mention it, but it was an ancient Roman custom to wrap dead bodies, before they were placed on the funeral pile, in a cloth made from a stone called Amiantus, or Linum vibum, by some called the Asbestos, on which fire had no power. (See D'Aubenton, Tableau Méthodique des Mineraux. p. 10. Edit. Par. 8vo. 1784.) N. B. Mr. D'Aubenton, a gentleman of amiable character and of great accuracy of mind, is now (1797) resident in Paris, advanced in years, and by quietly yielding to every revolutionary torrent in the republick, has escaped the general exterminating massacre of the active Citizen Literati in the Hall of French Justice. "His armis illa quoque tutus in aula."

Yet have I mus'd on Granta's willowy strand,
 The fage of Alexandria (u) in my hand,
 And mark'd his symbols deep; while o'er my ear
 Truth pour'd her strain in harmony severe.
 I fought the Stagirite; and could divide
 (No Scotchman near, no Gillies by my side)
 His sober sense from pride of intellect,
 What Locke confirm'd, or warn'd me to reject.
 Thence soaring on the balanc'd wings of thought,
 (As Kepler hinted, but as Newton taught)
 My mind in calm ascension to the height
 Of the world's temple, through th' abyfs of light,
 Mid wand'ring fires and every starr'd abode,
 Explor'd the works and wonders of the God,
 Who fix'd the laws of order, time and place,
 In his own great sensorium, (v) boundless space.
 The Chemist's magick flame, the curious sport
 Amber first gave, would oft my fancy court,

Y 2

Led

(u) Euclid.

(v) "DEUS, in spatio infinito, tanquam in sensorio suo, res intimè cernit &c. &c." Newton Princip. Schol. General. sub fin.

Led through creation's consecrated range,
 Each flower, and plant, and stem, with every change
 Of vegetative life, in order brought,
 I magnified Linnæus (p) as I thought ;
 But spurn'd unfeeling science, cruel tales
 Of Virgin (q) rabbits, and of headless (r) snails,
 And

(p) But not in the spirit of that silly man, who inscribed these words under the print of Linnæus: "Deus creavit, Linneus disposuit."—There is more folly in the inscription, than any intention of impiety ; it is the mere rage of antithesis without reflection. But in this botanising age, it should not pass without observation to all naturalists.

(q) Virgin Rabbits.—I allude in general to all needless, and cruel experiments upon animals. All that breathe, and feel, and enjoy the gift of life from their Creator are entitled to protection from man, under those limits and degrees which an honest and upright mind knows without being told. But in this place I particularly allude to an anecdote related to me by a friend, of a Paper read at the Royal Society in the course of the last winter, (1797.) on the subject of generation. The animal, chosen for these savage experiments by the merciless Doctor, was the Rabbit. Decency and humanity alike forbid the exposure of the process, and the mutilation of the parts of generation, before and after the animal was impregnated, and I think, in one or two of them, before the coitus. Surely to sit calmly and to watch with an impure, inhuman, and unhallowed curiosity the

And through the realms of Nature as I trod,

Bow'd

the progress of the desires, and the extinction of the natural passions in devoted animals after such mutilations and experiments, is a practice useless, wicked, foolish, degrading, and barbarous. There is no justification to be offered. The mystery itself is not to be disclosed to man. But we will know every thing; I wish we would recollect that we must account for our knowledge. When an experiment, for any purpose useful to millions of our fellow-creatures, has been once made upon an animal, it should be finally recorded by men of science and veracity, as authentick and satisfactory, not to be repeated. Sometimes, as I was told, the idea of the cruelty exercised upon these animals was for a moment lost in the ridiculous terms, which were perpetually repeated in these papers, which occupied three or four sittings of the R. S. My friend told me, that he actually thought that SIR CHARLES BLAGDEN, KNIGHT AND SECRETARY to the R. S. had been provided with specimens, and that he expected to see Virgin Rabbits, married Rabbits, and matron Rabbits produced from a basket on the table to lick, as in scorn and contempt, the very mace of a Society who night after night could sit and hear such a cruel farrago without indignation, but with half-smiles and simpers at the virginity of these unprotected, devoted, miserable animals. When Papers are publickly offensive, they should be publickly reprobated, and not suffered to be produced before the Royal Society upon a pretence of promoting natural knowledge. WHY HAS THE SOCIETY A COUNCIL? THE COUNCIL should be a literary and philosophical Grand Jury. If it is not so, it is of no use whatsoever, but to gratify the silly vanity of dilettanti noblemen and busy Romish Baronets. I should think Mr. PLANTA, the very learned, accurate, and well

Bow'd at the throne, and saw (7) the pow'r, of God.
 In morals, in religion, in the state,
 In science, without order, ALL I hate.

OCTAVIUS.

Speak then, the hour demands : Is Learning fled?
 Spent all her vigour, all her spirit dead ?

Have

well informed Secretary to the R. S. would be of my opinion. To make such experiments as these, is to offer an insult to the Sacrarium of the Most High. For my own part, I would extend the famous speech of the Barons in the age of Henry the Third. I would thunder in the ears of the President and of the whole Royal Society, as a body, "Nolumus Leges NATURÆ mutari!"

(7) Here is another savage instance to no end or purpose whatsoever, but mere cruel sport of curiosity. The Abbé Spalanzani asserts that snails re-produce their heads after the amputation of the original capita. And he made experiments numerous beyond belief. But in the Academie des Sciences 1778, the reader will find Mr. Cotte differs from the humane Abbé, and says, "that out of thousands of snails who have suffered the operation, there have not been above five or six of them, which have, as it is pretended, reproduced their heads."

(8) Νουμνα χαλεγῶται.

St. Paul.

Have Gallick arms and unrelenting war
 Borne all her trophies from Britannia far ?
 Shall nought but ghosts and trinkets be display'd,
 Since Walpole (t) ply'd the virtuoso's trade,
 Bade sober truth revers'd for fiction pass,
 And mus'd o'er Gothick toys through Gothick glass?
 Since states, and words, and volumes, all are new,
 Armies have skeletons, (v) and sermons (w) too ;
 So teach our Doctors warlike or divine,
 Simeon by Cam, or Wyndham on the Rhine.

Or

(t) The late ingenious Earl of Orford, Horace Walpole. The spirit of enquiry which he introduced was rather frivolous, though pleasing, and his Otranto Ghosts have propagated their species with unequalled fecundity. The spawn is in every novel shop.

(v) The language of the House of Commons. It should have been in other terms. "Sunt lacrymæ rerum, et mentem mortalia tangunt." Sorrow is sacred, and should have the language of consolation even from the lips of a Statesman.

(w) See Claude's Essay on a Sermon with an Appendix, containing one hundred Skeletons of Sermons, &c. By Charles Simeon, M. A. Fellow of King's College Cambridge. 1796.—This is as ludicrous and absurd in a Divine, as the term is offensive and unfeeling in Parliament during the miseries of war.

Or has Invention slept? the modern store
 What Athens or Chaldaea knew before;
 All that the Gallick sage, with ill-starr'd wit,
 Kens from his ancient (κ) telescopick pit?

AUTHOR.

All is not lost: (γ) the spirit shall revive:
 Lowth yet instructs, and Blayney's (α) labours live;
 With

(κ) See the "Origine des Decouvertes attribuées aux Modernes," 4to. Par Monsieur DUTENS. 1797. The work is rather entertaining, but by no means encouraging, if the Frenchman did not generally substitute conjecture for proof. He observes, page 130, in his tenth chapter, "that the bottom of a pit, from whence "we may see the stars at noon-day, may be imagined to be the primitive telescope." Mr. Dutens may sit in calm contemplation at the bottom of his ancient pit, and from that natural primitive telescope see whatever best pleases his fancy. For my own part I prefer the prospect from a cliff with the assistance of modern ingenuity, whether invented by Democritus or Doldond.

(γ) I have in various parts of this Poem spoken of those writers, who have done honour to Great Britain. It is not indeed

With all who wander by the sacred fount,
 (A chosen band!) encircling Sion's mount,
 Fast by the fanes and oracles of God,
 And mark, with KING (a), where wayes his awful rod,

The

indeed possible for me to name all those who, even now, form that constellation of ability and talents, which has been or may yet be displayed; and which Plutarch might call, in language somewhat lofty, (I think in his Treatise de Placitis Philosophorum) the Πολλὰ καὶ δυνατὰ Ἀστέρων συμφωτίζουμένη ἀλλήλοις ΣΥΝΑΓΓΑΣΜΟΝ.

(z) The deeply-learned Translator and Commentator on Jeremiah, &c. &c. B. Blayney, D. D. Regius Professor of Hebrew and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford.

(a) As The French Revolution and its Consequences must occupy and alarm the thoughts of every man who reflects, and stands in awe of the misery and desolation which have been brought upon the earth, and of the judgments which may be yet impending over Europe, I think I may be excused by many persons for the note which I am now writing. But first I recommend to all those who either ignorantly, or inconsiderately, or impiously, or presumptuously deny, reject, or vilify the Scriptures, to pass it over entirely. To them it will be foolishness. They have neither part nor lot in such a discussion. But under this restriction, and under this impression, I am inclined to extend the subject a little, and would call the publick attention with much earnestness to some few parts of a book printed in the beginning of the year 1788 in 4to, intitled

The truth of evidence, the moral strain,

Nor HURD has preach'd, nor PALEY taught in vain;

Socinus

titled " Morsels of Criticism, tending to illustrate some few passages in the holy scriptures upon philosophical principles and an enlarged view of things: by EDWARD KING, ESQ. F. R. A. S. printed for Robson and Robinson, in 1788." The title of it is objectionable on every account, open to ignorant ridicule, and unadvised; but had a second edition of the work been called for, it might easily have been altered. The author of it appears to me, (I speak from his book) to be a gentleman of extensive erudition and ingenuity, and of accurate biblical knowledge, perhaps a little too fond of theory, and sometimes a little whimsical in his application of natural philosophy; but never without a serious intention and a profound piety. He never forgets the nature of the subjects he is treating. He seems to approach the sacred writings with that prostration of mind, that distrust of his own powers, and that self-abasement, which are required of those who desire to look into the hidden things of God. I speak of the spirit by which he appears to me to be conducted, and (I repeat it) I speak from the work alone. I shall contend for no interpretations given by Mr. King; but I propose them to publick consideration. I never observed more caution and more wariness than in this writer. We know, that it is declared, that "the book of Prophecy is sealed till the time of completion." But the events of the world, of the Christian world, are so awful and so alarming as to induce us to believe, that they happen not without the immediate providence and decree of THE SUPREME BEING against the superstition and corruptions of man, and for the fulfilling of the preparation for those times, when "the Kingdoms of this world must

(in Socinus droops, and baffled Priestley flies,

And

(in defiance of all human policy) become the Kingdoms of God and of his Christ!" I will therefore offer to thinking persons some passages from this work, written several years before the present events had taken place in Europe, or could be conceived to be possible. I am not speaking in this note of any other parts or interpretations in this work of Mr. King. I am as little disposed to superstition and enthusiasm as any man living; and I do not give them as additions to the idle prophecies and random conjectures which have appeared in such numbers. I have too much reverence for the reader and for myself on such a subject. Mr. King offers them only as his interpretations of scripture, submitted to a calm discussion. But the circumstance which peculiarly strikes me is this; that they were written without any specific reference to any nation in Europe, but simply and in general, that such times and such events might be expected in some parts of the Christian world. The first passage I shall present, is a part of Mr. King's explanation of the 24th Chapter of St. Matthew's gospel, principally of the 29th verse.† In regard to which he says, "We may remark, if the words are to be understood, as spoken merely emblematically, then the images made use of are such as are well known to predict (consistently with their constant use in many other parts of prophecy) a great destruction and almost annihilation of many of those lawful powers which rule on earth, however

† Of course I refer the reader to the book itself for the tenor of the whole argument.

And at the strength of HORSLEY (b) shrinks, and dies;

Nor

“ however beneficial any of them may be to the earth ; and a “ DREADFUL LESSENING OF THE DIGNITY AND SPLENDOUR OF “ ALL GREATNESS, AND A SUBVERSION OF ALL GOOD ORDER “ AND CIVIL GOVERNMENT. Than which nothing can be “ expected more formidable. Dreadful indeed must be a “ TIME, (if such an one is to come) WHEN men are let loose “ upon each other, possessed of all their present improvements and “ advantages, but unrestrained either by law and civil govern“ ment, or by conscience and good principle ; scorning the ad“ monition and authority of those who ought to maintain “ justice, and assisted by the more rude and barbarous parts of “ the world, whom they shall find too ready to encrease THE “ UNIVERSAL UPROAR.” Page 262—3.—At the conclusion of these Remarks on the Revelations, Ch. 16. v. 13 and 14. he says : “ Here, while we maintain due reverential fear, our inter“ pretation must end. Nothing but the events themselves, when “ they come to pass, can rightly explain the rest. And they will “ certainly speak LOUDLY ENOUGH for themselves as those before
 “ have done—Only I must just remark, that it seems, as if “ persecution and the horrid influence of superstition, and of ig“ norance, and of barbarism were allowed to produce their dire “ effects, during the first part of the period of the time descri“ bed under the Vials ; and as if, IRRELIGION, VANITY, AND A “ TOTAL WANT OF ALL SERIOUS PRINCIPLE, AND A MISAP-“ PPLICATION OF THE REFINEMENTS OF CIVILIZATION, were “ to be ALLOWED to produce THEIR MISCHIEF also, at the latter “ end of that period !” page 453. See also, p. 456 and 57. which I could wish to copy, the words are so important, and the style so dignified. In the conclusion of which Mr. King observes,

Nor second stand in theologick fame

Sagacious

observes, on the finishing of the mystery of God, "that as there " should be false Christs and false prophets, so there should be
" also a dreadful subversion of all good government and order,
" and that men should be let loose upon each other, in defiance of all " civil power and just rule, and of legal restraint." He subjoins some words too remarkable to be passed over. "It will be hap- "py for those who shall live some years hence, if they can prove me
"guilty of a mistake in this point. I speak and write with cau- "tious reverence and fear; acknowledging that I am liable to
"error, and by no means pretending to prophecy; but still appre-
"hending myself bound not to conceal the truth, where any "matter appears to be revealed in Holy Scripture; and especially "when the bringing an impending denunciation to light, (if it be a "truth) may be an awful warning and caution to many, AND
"PREVENT THEIR BECOMING ACCESSARY TO THE EVIL †."

Page 461. I must own, I am so struck with these passages, that without any knowledge of THIS ILLUSTRIOUS LAYMAN but from his work,

† The following passage from the great Historian Josephus, on the inattention and ignorance of man in regard to the divine predictions, is remarkable. The words are these :

ΤΑΥΤΑ ΜΕΝ, ΙΚΑΝΩΣ ΕΜΦΑΝΙΣΤΑΙ ΔΥΝΑΜΕΝΑ ΤΗΝ ΤΕ ΘΕΩ ΦΥΣΙΝ ΤΟΙΣ
ΑΝΘΡΩΠΙΝ, ΕΙΡΗΚΑΜΕΝ, ΟΤΙ ΠΟΙΚΙΛΗ ΤΙΣΤΙ ΚΑΙ ΠΟΛΥΤΡΟΠΟΣ, ΚΑΙ ΠΑΝΤΑ
ΚΑΘ' ΑΡΑΝ ΑΠΑΝΤΑ ΤΙΤΑΓΜΕΝΟΣ, Α ΤΙ ΔΕ ΓΙΝΕΣΘΑΙ ΠΡΟΛΕΓΩ. ΤΗΝ ΤΕ ΤΩΝ
ΑΝΘΡΩΠΩΝ ΑΓΝΟΙΑΝ ΚΑΙ ΑΠΙΣΤΙΑΝ, ΎΦ' ΗΣ ΟΥΔΕΝ ΠΡΟΪΔΕΙΝ
ΙΔΕΘΕΑΝ ΤΩΝ ΑΠΟΘΕΣΟΜΕΝΩΝ, ΑΦΥΛΑΚΤΟΙ ΤΕ ΤΑΙΣ ΣΥΜΦΟΡΑΙΣ
ΠΑΡΕΔΟΘΗΣΑΝ, ΩΣ ΑΡΗΧΑΙΟΙ ΑΥΤΟΙΣ ΜΗΔΕ ΤΗΝ ΕΞ ΑΥΤΩΝ ΠΙΣΤΕΩΝ ΔΙΑΦΥΓΕΙΝ !

Joseph. Antiq. Jud. Lib. 10. S. 3. p. 449. Ed. Hudson. Oxon.

Sagacious HEY, (c) and RENNELL's (d) learned name,

And

work, I could almost address him in the sublime apostrophe of one of the most eloquent Fathers of the ancient Church; "Ανδρῶν τε Θεῶν, πιστῶν βεβαιοῦν καὶ ακοινοῦν τῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ μυστηρίων, Ἀντὶ ἐπιθυμίας τῶν τοῦ πνεύματος, καλῶν Εἰ σὺν καὶ ὁρατῶν τῆς Εκκλησίας, λόγον ζωῆς ἐπιχρῶντα, καὶ πιστῶς κρῖνον, καὶ πνεύματος καταγωγῆς."†—Thus† did this very learned and most pious man, in a strain of serious, temperate, and impressive eloquence, deliver his opinion and his interpretation. They will stand before us and our posterity, as the memorial of that lonely wisdom, that reverential application of the divine word, and of that silent dignity, which can only be attained by a retirement (at intervals) from the world which God hath made to Him alone, and by that worship in spirit and in truth, which when joined to human erudition and to the sober cultivation of the understanding, will produce FRUIT UNTO LIFE. But I conclude: humbly acknowledging and deeply feeling myself wholly unequal, and altogether unworthy, to speak of the awful sublimity of such subjects. My office can be but ministerial; it is mine only to lead the aspirant to the door of the temple, and to retire.

† Gregor. Naz. Orat. 19. (Op. Edit. Prunzi. p. 286. Paris 1609.) It was pronounced before the great Basil, when seated upon the archiepiscopal throne of Cæsarea. (A. D. circ. 374.)

† In the beginning of the year 1788. Mr. K's book was probably written some years before it was offered to the publick.

And DOUGLAS, (a) hail'd afar from earliest youth

Great

(b) The Right Rev. Samuel Horsley, Bishop of Rochester. In my opinion, the controversy so ably maintained by this Prelate, against the Heresiarch Priestley, is his peculiar praise. Bishop Horsley reminds me of the celebrated Divine, Charles Leslie. He has often the same strength, the same acuteness, and sometimes the same coarseness of manner. But the argument is cogent, and the arms are irresistible. In theological controversy, Charles Leslie and Bishop Horsley always appear to me, "Æacide similes, Vulcanique arma capeffunt."

(c) The Rev. John Hey, D. D. late Norrisonian Professor in the University of Cambridge. The arrangement, the learning, the accuracy, and the extent of his researches in theology, are conspicuous in his laborious and important work, entitled "Lectures, &c." read as Professor.—N. B. The entire work is not yet published. (Oct. 1797.)

(d) The Rev. Thomas Rennell, D. D. Author of a very able, learned, and eloquent Apology for the Church of England, preached in St. Paul's Cathedral, before the Sons of the Clergy, May 10, 1796.

(e) The Right Rev. John Douglas, D. D. Bishop of Salisbury, a Prelate whose erudition, penetrating sagacity, and well-directed efforts have discovered and overthrown many strong holds of literary imposture. The names of Lauder and Bower are Great victor in the well-fought field of truth.

HERSCHELL (f), with ampler mind and magick glass,

Mid worlds and worlds revolving as they pass,

Pours the full cluster'd radiance from on high,

That fathomless abyss of Deity.

Who
are only remembered to their infamy.—The Bishop's Treatise on Miracles, called "The Criterion," should be reprinted.
Why is it not again presented to the publick? (Oct. 1797.)

(f) Dr. Herschell's new doctrine concerning the Materia Solaris, has attracted much attention among the learned. I offer to their consideration a curious passage, which I met with when I was reading with a very different purpose. The Platonick PROCLUS, in the third book of the Commentaries on the Timæus of his great Master, mentions that Aristotle (whom, surely with justice, he calls ὁ θαυμαστός Ἀριστοτέλης) hints that the Sun and the Stars are not absolutely bodies of fire:
The words are these: "Τὸν τῶν Ἀστέρων χορὸν, μὴ αὐτῶν
τὸν μέγαν Ἥλιον, ΟΥΚ ΟΝΤΑ ΕΚ ΠΥΡΟΣ." Procli Comment. in Timæum Platonis, Edit. Basil. Gr. 1534. p. 131. There is another singular passage (not so explicit as this from Pro-clus) in the first book, de Calo, of the Second Ennead of Plotinus the Platoniorum Coryphæus, as he has been called: he talks also, rather quaintly from Aristotle, of a "Πῦρ τῇ τῶν Ἀστέρων προσφεραν φύσει." Plotin: Ennead. 2 L. 1. pag. 99, &c. Edit.
Basil.

Who in the depth abstruse of intellect
 A greater now than WARING (g) shall expect?
 Lo, where Philosophy extends her sway,
 Guides future Navies o'er the trackless way,
 More voluble and firm; so, strong in thought,
 The royal Synod ATWOOD (h) fate and taught.
 Who may forget thee, (i) BEATTIE? rustick (k) BURNS,

Z

And

Basil. cum Comment. Ficini.—The reader is referred to Dr. Herschell's most curious paper "On the Nature and Construction of the Sun and Fixed Stars." Phil. Trans. Part I. 1795.

(g) Edward Waring, M. D. Professor of the Mathematicks in the University of Cambridge.

(h) See a Paper in the Philos. Trans. 1796. Part I. entitled "The Construction and Analysis of geometrical propositions determining the positions assumed by homogeneous bodies which float freely and at rest, on a fluid's surface, also determining the stability of ships and other floating bodies, by GEORGE ATWOOD, Esq. F. R. S." The R. S. presented Mr. Atwood with their medal on this occasion.—The names of Herschell, Maskelyne, Cavendish, Woollaston, Milner, &c. dignify the Royal Society. We have yet some "Master Builders in the Sciences," as Mr. Locke once expressed himself. (Preface to his Essay on the H. U.)

(i) James Beattie, L. L. D. Author of "The Minstrel, 2 books." It is to be for ever regretted that this true poet and most

And all his artless wood-notes Scotland mourns.
 With England's Bard, with COWPER, who shall vie?
 Original in strength and dignity,
 With more than Painter's fancy blest, with lays Holy, as saints to heav'n expiring raise. (1)

High

most excellent man never finished his exquisite Poem. My mind dwells upon it, particularly on the First Part, even from my boyish days at school.

(2) Robert Burns. The Ayresshire Ploughman. An original Poet.

(1) William Cowper, Esq. Author of "The Task."—Tom Murnan is ign doric! Such are the words of the divine Ascræan, in his Theogonia. Of these Muses seated on our own Parnassus, it may be said,

"There did they sit, and do their holy deed,
 That pleas'd both heaven and earth!"

Bishop Hall's Satires. B. 1. S. 2.

The conclusion of the Poet's work is so sacred, so dignified, so unequalled in simplicity and unaffected piety, that I hope none will read it without those sensations, and without that improvement, it seems designed to inspire.

"But all is in HIS hand whose praise I seek:
 In vain the Poet sings and the world hears,
 If HE regard not, though divine the theme.

'Tis

High from the climes of Latium's happier day
 The Muse on ROSCOE (m) darts her noontide ray ;
 And with each soft, each reconciling pow'r,
 Sheds gleams of peace on MELMOTH's (n) closing hour :
 Bright to the goal in their sublime career

Z 2

BRYANT

'Tis not in artful measures, in the chime
 And idle tinkling of a minstrel's lyre,
 To charm HIS ear, who looks upon the heart :
 Whose frown can disappoint the proudest strain,
 Whose approbation—prosper even mine."

B. 6.

(m) William Roscoe, Esq. the historian of Lorenzo de Medici called the Magnificent. See the P. of L. Dialogue III. at the conclusion.

(n) WILLIAM MELMOTH, Esq. a most elegant and distinguished writer, "near half an age with every good man's praise." His translation of Cicero and Pliny will speak for him, while Roman and English eloquence can be united. Mr. Melmoth is a happy example of the mild influence of learning on a cultivated mind, I mean of that learning which is declared to be the aliment of youth, and the delight and consolation of declining years. Who would not envy this "FORTUNATE OLD MAN" his most finished translation and comment on Tully's Cato? or rather, who would not rejoice in the refined and mellowed pleasures of so accomplished a gentleman and so liberal a scholar?

BRYANT and BURKE (o) the torch triumphant bear ;

While

(o) It is to be wished, that these TWO GREAT MEN may now conclude their political and literary labours. "Finem dignum et optimo viro et opere sanctissimo faciant!" Quintil. Lib. 12. Cap. 11. (June 1797.)—Since writing the above, when I heard of the death of that UNEQUALLED man, the Rt. Hon. EDMUND BURKE,† I could only say to my friend,

Η μάλα λυγρὸς

Πνυσταὶ ἀγγέλῃς, ἢ κ' ἀφ' ἑλλὰς γινώσθαι,

Κυτὰν ΠΗΛΕΪΔΗΣ !

Such was my veneration for THIS GREAT MAN when living, such is the depth of my homage, and the secret affliction of my spirit at his departure. It appears to me expedient and grateful, that we should all remember and revere THE MAN to whose primal exertions (it cannot be repeated too frequently) we originally owe the publick sense of the moral, political, and religious danger of England from the grand crushing CABAL, grounded and rooted † July 1797.—See Mr. Burke's character, in "The Imperial Epistle from Kien Long, Emperor of China, to George the Third of Great Britain," v. 117. page 19. Edit. 8vo. 1796. As far as depends upon me, the words of Pindar shall be verified of this great man :

Τὸν μὲν κτε δαίοντ' Αἰδοῖαι

Εἰσιπὸντ' ἄλλα οἱ

Παρά τε πυρὰν ταφῶν

Θ' Ἐλικανίαι παρθένοι

Ἔσταν ἐπὶ δῆλον τι πολυφάρμακ' ἔχουσαν. Ἐδοξεν,

Ἀγαθ' Ἀθανατοῖς

Ἐσλόν γε Φῶτα καὶ Φθιμένοι ὕμνοις Θεῶν δίδομεν.

Pind. Isth. O. S.

While Granta hails (what need the Sage to name?)

Her lov'd IAPIS on the banks of Cam. (p)

But

rooted in France, and branching out and overshadowing all Europe. I speak, as I think, in sincerity. Without much reflection we cannot understand the full nature and extent of the publick obligation to Mr. Burke. I would not vindicate any man from the cradle to the grave; much less a politician and a statesman. The very region of Politicks is baneful; it is too frequently "the soil the Vices like." Every statesman, in or out of power, knows his own meanness, the turbulence of his passions, the rattles of office, the irritation of opponents, the jealousy of rank, and the impatience of consoorted power. All this is true. But still, when I have revolved the various labours of EDMUND BURKE, and THE CAUSE HE HAS MAINTAINED, (as it generally regards government, religion, and society, not the details of the war and its conduct) I say, with this allowance for the feverous frailty of the passions, and the taint of mortality in all our best actions, I would record in lasting characters, and in our holiest and most honourable temple, the departed Orator of England, the Statesman, and the Christian, EDMUND BURKE! "Remuneratio ejus CUM ALTISSIMO!"

(p) I wish, (and every Etonian and every member of the University of Cambridge of good character will join me heart and hand) that this great, disinterested, virtuous, and CONSUMMATE SCHOLAR AND PHYSICIAN, now by learning and religion conducted with dignity to the close of life, may be known by this affectionate verse to all posterity, "The lov'd IAPIS on the banks of Cam."

"DIIS DILECTE SENEX, te Jupiter æquus oportet
Nascentem, et miti lustrârit lumine Phœbus

Atlantisque

But whence that groan? no more Britannia sleeps,
 But o'er her lost Musæus (g) bends and weeps.
 Lo, every Grecian, every British Muse
 Scatters the recent flow'rs and gracious dews
 Where MASON lies; he sure their influence felt,
 And in his breast each soft affection dwelt,
 That love and friendship know; each sister art,
 With all that Colours, and that Sounds impart,

All

Atlantisque nepos; neque enim nisi charus ab ortu

Diis superis poterit magno favisse poeta.

Hinc longæva viret lento sub flore Senectus,

Nondum deciduos servans TIBI frontis honores,

Ingeniumque vigens, et adultum mentis acumen.

Ergo Ego te Clitæ et magni nomine Phœbi

MANSÆ PATER, jubeo LONGUM salvere PER ÆVUM!

MILTON AD MANSUM.

I know not what should restrain me on this occasion. For the eternal honour of the University of Cambridge, in this our age, to the following names which I have selected with the severest judgment of which I am capable, GRAY, HURD, OGDEN, BALGUY, and BRYANT, I will add the name of her Dilectus Iapis, ROBERT GLYNN!

TANTO HOMINI FIDUS, TANTÆ VIRTUTIS AMATOR!

(Nov. 1797)

(g) The Rev. William Mason, M. A. author of Elfrida, Caractacus, Musæus, a Monody on Mr. Pope, The English Garden, &c. &c. &c. &c.

All that the sylvan theatre can grace,
 All in the soul of MASON "FOUND THEIR PLACE!"
 Low sinks the laurell'd head; in Mona's land
 I see them pass, 'tis Mador's drooping band,
 To harps of woe in holiest obsequies,
 "In yonder grave, they chant, OUR DRUID lies!"
 HE (r) too, whom Indus and the Ganges mourn,
 The glory of their banks, from Isis torn,
 In learning's strength is fled, in judgment's prime,
 In science temp'rate, various, and sublime;
 To him familiar every legal doom,
 The courts of Athens, or the halls of Rome,
 Or Hindoo Vedas taught; for him the Muse
 Distill'd from every flow'r Hyblæan dew;
 Firm, when exalted, in demeanour grave,
 Mercy and truth were his, he lov'd to save.
 His mind collected; at opinion's shock
 JONES stood unmov'd, and from the Christian rock,
 Celestial brightness beaming on his breast,
 He SAW THE STAR, and worshipp'd in the East.

Thou
 (r) SIR WILLIAM JONES. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature in Bengal, &c. &c. &c. &c.

Thou too, OCTAVIUS, that dread hour must feel,
 Nor eloquence, nor wit, nor patriot zeal,
 Nor piety sincere without the show,
 Nor every grace Pierian pow'rs bestow
 From pure Ilyffus and the Latian shore,
 What Swift, or great Erasmus felt before,
 May save thee!—yet, yet long, so friendship calls,
 May guardian Angels hover round the walls,
 Where love and virtue fix their blest abode,
 Friend of thy country, servant of thy God! (s)
 Octavius yes, it is, it shall be mine,
 With praise appropriate still to grace my line :

To

(s) In this political and depressing period, it is some comfort to divert the attention for a moment to such characters of literary and poetical excellence as the Rev. William Mason, and Sir William Jones; and to be able to add my own Octavius. OCTAVIUS OPTIMUS, are the legitimate words of Horace. With an allowance for the partiality of friendship, (and who that ever felt such an affection will refuse to grant it) and with sorrow that now he must neither be understood nor named, I assert with truth, that OCTAVIUS is formed to move among the highest and the foremost in the state, though contented and submitting to act in a station, certainly not without honour, yet inadequate to his faculties. “Exornet etatis nostræ gloriam!”

To me all heedless of proud fashion's sneer,
 MAURICE(t) is learn'd, and WILBERFORCE(v) sincere,
 Though

(t) The Reverend THOMAS MAURICE, Author of "Indian Antiquities, in 6 vol. 8vo." and of "the History of Hindostan, its Arts and its Sciences, as connected with the History of the other great Empires of Asia, during the most ancient periods of the world." Vol. 1. 4to. is only yet published. The publick is well acquainted with their merits. But it is with the most serious concern, that I read what Mr. Maurice has declared in his dedication, that "*This History commenced under the patronage of the Court of East India Directors, is dedicated to them, in humble hopes of their continued support of a work, which MUST SINK WITHOUT THAT SUPPORT." Learning has felt a degradation from these words. I am not to be told, that researches like those of Mr. Maurice are liable to the caprice of erudition, and of uncertain application, and that his style, matter, and manner are frequently too luxuriant and diffuse. The foundation of a temple may be strong, though every ornament on the pillars may not be just.—(Nov. 1797.)

(v) See, "A Practical View of the prevailing religious system of Professed Christians in the higher and middle classes in this country, contrasted with real Christianity." By WILLIAM WILBERFORCE, Esq. M. P. for the county of York.—Some very serious persons have their doubts as to the theological principles of this work in their full extent, and I fear it is sometimes too rigid

* The E. I. Company subscribed for a certain number of Copies. This is not patronage.

(Though on his page (v) some pause in sacred doubt)

As Gisborne (b) serious, and as Pott (c) devout.

For

rigid and exclusive in its doctrines. There is also too much of a sectarian language, which cannot be approved. But of the intention, virtue, learning, and patriotism of the eloquent and well-informed Senator, I have the most honourable and decided opinion. His work is vehement, impassioned, urgent, fervid, instant; though sometimes copious to prolixity, and in a few parts even to tediousness. Perhaps it is the production of an orator rather than of a writer. Throughout the whole, there is a manly fortitude of thought, firm and unshrinking. But for my own part, for obvious reasons, I dislike the term, "Real Christianity," as exclusively applied to any set of propositions drawn from the Gospel. If I regard external circumstances, I would not indeed take theology from Athanasius or Bossuet, morality from Seneca, or politicks from Lansdown or Seyes. But I will own, that from a scrutiny into the publick and private character of Mr. Wilberforce, I am inclined to think that his enemies would be forced into an acknowledgment, (as it is recorded in the words of a prophet), that "they can find no occasion against this man, except they find it against him concerning the law of his God." A reader of his work must be good or bad in the extreme, who may not receive some advantage from the awful composition. I am indeed unworthy to praise it, and I feel myself so. If I may descend from divinity to mere philosophy, I shall add, that if Mr. Wilberforce proceeds and acts upon the sublimity of such principles, we may apply to him the expressions drawn from the fountain of Plato by his most enthusiastick votary, Plotinus. "Αφ'

" αὐτῷ μιταθῆναι, ὡς εἰκὼν πρὸς ἀρχιτευτοῦ, τέλος ἔχον τῆς πορείας!"

For Athens CUMBERLAND (d) seems born alone

To bid her comick Patriot be our own:

Nor

“ ποριως!” He will best comprehend the high and holy sentence which declares what is the life of such men; “ Ουτω θειων και ανθρωπων θειων και ευδαιμονων βιος, απαλλαγη των αλλων των τηδε, βιος ανηδονος των τηδε, ΦΥΓΗ ΜΟΝΟΥ ΠΡΟΣ ΜΟΝΟΝ!” Plotini Ennead: 6. L. 9. c. xi.

(b) The Reverend THOMAS GISBORNE, M. A. Author of an Enquiry into the Duties of Men, &c. and of the Female Sex, &c. &c. eminently entitled to the publick esteem and gratitude.

(c) The Rev. J. H. POTT, M. A. the learned and excellent Arch-deacon of St. Alban's. In his writings instructive, laborious in his office, and exemplary in his profession.

(d) RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Esq. an author of various talents, and of very considerable learning. It is scarcely necessary to enumerate his compositions, in particular his dramatick works, which have received the sanction of publick esteem. In my opinion he has done very great service to the cause of morality and of literature. He is author of a work called “The Observer,” and from the translation, in that work, of the fragments of the Greek comick writers, I believe all learned readers will agree, that he is the only man in the kingdom (with whom we are publickly acquainted) equal to the translation of Aristophanes. I wish it were to be the amusement of his retired hours. I shall never think he has been

Nor yet ungrac'd may SULLIVAN (b) remain,
 Serene in fancy, nor in science vain,
 Yet still, though oft his various works I scan,
 I quit the volume, when I find the man.

Good

been "publick too long," but as he has quitted the stage,† (as he affirms himself,) such a translation would be an easy, yet an adequate and honourable employment for a man of unquestionable genius, versatility of talents, knowledge of the world, and a consummate master of the poetical language of our best ancient dramatick writers. Let us hope that Aristophanes may yet be our own. (July 1797.)

(a) RICHARD JOSEPH SULLIVAN, Esq. F. R. S. and F. A. S. author of "Philosophical Rhapsodies, &c." and of a work entitled "A View of Nature, in Letters to a Traveller among the Alps, with Reflections on Atheistical Philosophy now exemplified in France, in six vol. 8vo." A work of labour and of general utility, digested from original writers with judgment, and with an upright virtuous heart, in a pleasing and instructive manner. I dwell with affection on such a character as Mr. Sullivan; and, if this were the place, and if India were the theme, I might make honourable mention of the works and excellence of his Brother, JOHN SULLIVAN, Esq.

† The vows, and oaths of lovers, voters, and poets, are always liable to make False Impressions. (Nov. 1797.)

Good books (b) are the mind's bread: (excuse
the phrase,

Gifford will bear the term, and Cowper praise)

They

(b) It is pleasing and satisfactory to think, that all books which are absolutely required to strengthen, exalt, purify, and inform the understanding, and consequently to correct and enlarge the affections and the heart, are of easy access and of easy price. With the luxury of learning and the modern elegance of types and paper, I have nothing to do, but earnestly to deprecate all needless extravagance and brilliant folly in new publications, if they are designed to be of service to the world, and to be purchased. The august and sublime monuments of religion and of genius may be adorned without blame, or rather with great commendation. When the Bible, Shakspeare, and Milton appear in all the splendour of typographick art and the magnificence of decoration from the pencil, who does not feel a secret pride in the honour reflected on the discerning liberality of his country? Such books may be considered as typographical pictures of eminent artists. Pictures however are not necessary for the closet of a student; but they may adorn the museum of a nation or an university, and dignify the repositories of the opulent and patrician literati. Atticus is magnificent in such patronage, though Rutilus may incur some censure. This is a noble and laudable use of the superfluity of wealth. It is also political in the highest degree. In times like these men of talents and genius, when unemployed and let loose upon the world, become too frequently the pests of society, and the canker worms of the community.—It is indeed high time to awake out of sleep, and to discern the peculiar use of every blessing. In all our actions, we should have

They give the life-blood, nutriment and health,
And laugh to scorn the insolence of wealth.

OCTAVIUS.

Here close the strain : and o'er your studious hour
May truth preside and virtue's holiest pow'r !
Still be your knowledge temp'rate and (e) discreet,
Though not as Jones sublime, as Bryant great ;

Pre-
have a view to the stability of society and of well-regulated government. It becomes us all to observe and separate the essential and unvarying laws of order from the principles of confusion, and the dictates of sound sense from the wildness of ungoverned fancy, and of presumptuous intellect. The grand end and aim may at last be thus effected ; and we may, by choice and conviction, turn from lying vanities to the spirit of truth and of life.

(e) The advice of Octavius is good, but not applicable to a man so insignificant as his friend.—But to men of knowledge and of ability in every department of life it is of deep importance. I lament and am indignant, when I think of such a scholar as Dr. Parr, and the waste of erudition and talents. Let him stand for a genus. The want of discretion and prudence has ruined more men of learning and genius than the time would allow me to mention. Without this sobriety of intellect nothing is strong, nothing is great. Without this prudence, without

Prepar'd to prove in Senate, or the Hall,
That states by learning rise, by learning fall;

Serene,

without this discernment of time and circumstance, and the habit of regularity, without an attention to the decencies of society and of common life, and of the principles by which all men, however gifted, must indiscriminately be conducted, all our attainments are nothing worth. They will never procure us esteem or respectability among men. The world will but smile at such scholars; and ministers, when called upon to promote them, will tell you not without reason, "they are not producible."† Let me give two passages on this subject, one from Milton, the other from Dr. Johnson, variously applicable and of deepest consequence.

"He who reads
Incessantly, and to his reading brings not
A spirit and judgment equal or superior,
Uncertain and unsettled still remains,
Deep versed in books, and shallow in himself,
Crude or intoxicate, collecting toys,
As children gathering pebbles on the shore."

P. R. b. 4: v. 322.

To men of genius (as at least they are called) Dr. Johnson gave this solemn admonition: "This relation (of the life of SAVAGE) will not be wholly without its use, if those who, in "confidence

† The words of the Duke of Newcastle on such an occasion, when he was Prime Minister in George the Second's reign. They were spoken of A MAN, whose genius, talents, eloquence, and erudition honoured and supported the Church of England. And he was not promoted.

Serene, not senseless, through the awful storm,

In principle sedate, to shun (f) Reform ;

To

“ confidence of superior capacities or attainments, disregard the “ common maxims of life, shall be reminded that nothing will supply
 “ the want of prudence, and that negligence and irregularity, “ long continued, will make knowledge useless, wit ridiculous, and “ genius contemptible.” Dr. Johnson’s Life of Savage, at the conclusion.

“ Deign on the passing world to cast thine eyes,

“ And pause awhile from letters, TO BE WISE.”

(f) No factions ever proceeded to attempt A REVOLUTION in any country, but first under the pretence and through the Medium of A REFORM. We have been told with effrontery and with falshood, that the Constitution of England exists only in the imagination ; yet we may read the Bill of Rights. The fact is this. Modern framers of political constitutions will never be satisfied, till they are laid down like the elements of mathematicks in the manner of Euclid. Definitions, Axioms, Postulates, primary propositions, subsequent propositions, built upon and proved by the preceding, with corollaries and deductions. One strange writer, (perhaps it is the first time the reader ever heard of him) says, “ A CONSTITUTION must be produced intire and at the same time ; it must be simple in its construction, and PERFECT in all its parts.” Malkin’s Essays on Civilization, 8vo. (1795) p. 122. I had fondly thought that Lord Bacon had distinguished the works of nature from those of art, in that masterly and memorable sentence, “ Natura omnium partium rudimenta simul parit et procreat.” (De Augm. Scient.) I suppose a political Constitution is the work of human art. Indeed if Mr. Malkin were describing a perfect poem, epick or tragick, he could not have expressed himself more critically.

To mark man's intellect, its strength and bound, critically. Yet thus it is, that our present theoretical writers sport with man and his passions. They certainly consider all as passive machines, and they apply their laws, with as much cool indifference to their fellow-creatures, and with as little feeling, as they would apply the axe, on any mechanical instrument, to lop a tree or to raise a weight. The systems uniformly proceed on this principle. They never vary. Mercy is not in all their thoughts; there is neither allowance for human frailty, nor revision of judgment. Man has offended: he must die the death. Gnosius hæc Rhadamanthus habet durissima Regem. We have all seen and felt, what the revolutionary principle is.

A a

Nor

We must never for a moment forget, that the object of France, from her first Revolution, has been and is to change the Government in every State in Europe, and in every part of the world which she can pervade or influence. Look in Germany, in Belgium, in Italy, in Spain, in the isles of the Eastern or of the Western Archipelago; cast your view, broad and unrestrained, from the dominions of the Porte to the banks of the Ohio or the Mississippi, not a state, not a fortress, not a work, not a fragment of nature or of art, not a cliff, not a torrent, not a precipice, but has felt the shock and impulse of revolutionary terror. Abyssus abyssum invocat! One deep has called upon another, the winds have blown the signal of encounter, and the cataracts are roaring and conflicting; or in the resounding language of the poet of Panopolis †,

Εὐρυπύκτων ἀφ' οὗ μνηστὴρ πομπῆς

Βεσσηνὶς Καρύδωνος, Σομφῆσι οὐβῆτος ἄχου!

I must claim excuse and indulgence for my expressions. My mind

† Nonnus. Dionys. Lib. 41. v. 84. p. 1059. Edit. Hæver, 1810.

Nor deem stability on change to found;

To

mind is either borne down or hurried away with the terrors of impending desolation, and the overthrow or confusion of fixed, regulated, established government. My sensations are solitary; but they are deep. Τῆς ψυχῆς μου διασχίζαι Πομπαία. I have indeed the consolation of affectionate and honourable friendship, and I am not without the approval of a few who are wise and good: but I cannot say that "in my life time I have had too much of noise and compliment.†" I have risen in silence: and in peace and privacy it is my desire to set and to depart. But can any of us see what we have seen, and not labour to avert it from our own country? If I could conceive a man of less political significance than myself, (not from my endeavours but from my situation,) I would call even on him for assistance. The object, the undiverted object of France is THE OVERTHROW OF ENGLAND! NOS NOSTRAQUE, the form of our government, the fundamental laws, and the principles by which property is acknowledged and secured. These have been attacked by assault, by storm, by breach, by sedition, by the arms of ribaldry, of obscenity, of blasphemy. At one time they open upon us the floodgates of treason and madness, at another they sap the foundation by a circuitous stream winding and working unperceived. They know that a Revolution can alone be effected by a Reform. There is no other mode. A state may prove bankrupt; but I would inculcate it with peculiar earnestness, that, A REVOLUTION IS NOT THE NECESSARY CONSEQUENCE OF BANKRUPTCY. I view with fear the finances of Great Britain, but

† An expression in the affecting Will of the Rt. H. Edmund Burke. What declaration, what testimony, what experience will convince us of the "Vera bona atque illis multum diversa, remotâ erroris nebula?"

To feel with Mirabeau that "Words are Things", (g)

A a 2

While

but not without a rational hope of final though tardy restoration. The proposal of Reform is my specifick apprehension. I would strenuously resist all the proposers of Reform; Mr. Pitt formerly, and Mr. Grey at present. I confess I never could understand the great Lord Chatham's celebrated expression of "infusing a portion of new health into the constitution to enable it to bear its infirmities." Junius (in his very last letter) calls it "brilliant and full of intrinsick wisdom." For my own part, I think it but false glitter and full of intrinsick nonsense, when applied politically. It is mere rage of metaphor. It is to call the mind a sheet of white paper, till at last we are brought to think the resemblance to be the very thing signified. The use of metaphor is to illustrate, not to prove.

Government, take it in any of its complex forms, can be carried on but in three ways: by unsullied principle and undeviating virtue in the Governors, and perhaps in the people; by force and terror; or by mitigated law and influence. Who does not wish for the first? Who expects to see it? In states highly civilized, the mixed mode of law and influence on the minds of free agents appears to me the only mode in which tranquillity, security, and general happiness can be tolerably preserved, with the allowance of human frailty. I detest corruption, open or secret, as much as any man. But when I see an assembly formed on any principles however sublime, or deep, or disinterested, I remember it is formed of men. Menander said long ago; Ἀνθρώποις ἡ πόλις. It is man; his name explains the rest. I never will consent to think, that Government is a matter of perpetual experiment. I would graft new regulations upon the old principles by a very gradual removal of what is absurd, obsolete, useless, or an incumbrance. It was the boast of Citizen Lord Stanhope, that he

While in Delusion's ear their magick rings, 1501 of Through

he would teach the Judges law, and the Bishops religion. I have no such ambition: but at present I would recommend to Charles Abbott, Esq. M. P. the new Digester of our Laws, not to be too subtilis in the process. It is not every political chemist who can throw off into his work the spirit of legislation, unmingled with the grosser dregs and seculence of the mass.

Let us now, and at all times, be vigilant with determinate courage. We know what freedom, what equality of power among the citizens, what fraternity, what comfort, what happiness, and what security France has offered, and given too, to all countries, who have either bowed voluntarily, or have been subjected, to her tyranny. Take Cicero's expressions. As to themselves; "Licet, quod videtur, publicum judicare: quod judi-nocerint, videri." As to other nations, friend or foe; "Perspici non potest, utrum favoribus avertitur, an benignitas quaesivisse sit." Such are the words in that elaborate and consummate Oratio on the Agrarian Law, which every man would do well to read and consider in the original or in a translation. It is peculiarly pertinent to the present time. When Demosthenes raised his mighty voice against a decree proposed by Arist-ocrates, he bespoke the attention of his audience as to a private man, who had neither part in the administration of the state, nor influence from his connections. He bespoke their favour on this ground. He thought the interest of Athens was alone a sufficient plea. "Βραδύς ὤν τις ἀρχαίων δῆμος, οὗτος ἐστὶν ἀνελκυστικὸς καὶ πικροχολὸς παρ' ὅμοιοις αὖ, πρὸς τὰς αὐτοῦ φάσι δόξαι πικροχολοῦντες."† For my own part without any other

† Κατὰ Ἀριστοκράτους.—Demosth. Op. Gr. Benen. 1570. p. 403.

Through states, or armies, in the camp, or street,

And other pretension, political or literary, than the love I feel to my country, her laws, her religion, her ordinances, and her government, and the labour I have exerted to understand and to preserve them, I would earnestly and affectionately remind my Countrymen in this perilous and pressing hour, of the eloquent words of Demonax, as they are recorded by Lucian; "Constitutions and doctrines like these you never will decree, till you have first removed" or overthrown THE ALTAR OF MERCY!" The words of the original are full of dignity: Μη τγορησας, ο αδικιας, φεραμεν, ας μη το ΕΛΕΟΥ τοις Ετοιμοις κατασταν.

(g.) A celebrated saying of the famous Mirabeau, in the beginning of the French Revolution.—I would, in this concluding note, observe with great earnestness and affection to my Country, that in all the departments of society, government, religion, or literature, the French have at all times maintained one unvarying system of deception, when under the ancient monarchy, or now under the iron, unrelenting tyranny of their new republic. Their manner of reasoning is, and always has been, sophistical. We are in perpetual danger of being misled by the appearance of reason. We have always ground for distrust. Take a specimen from thousands and tens of thousands of instances. Many years ago, in a collection entitled "Lettres Historiques et Politiques," a French Statesman used these words to Mr. D'Alembert. "Je ne veux point admettre dans les arrêts de Conseil un vrai vial, une clarté trop familière. Je veux un vail de recherche, une clarté elegante, une naïveté fine, toute brillante de termes pompeux, relevés inopinément de phrases arrondies, de vocatifs intermediaires et d'adverbes indésois." Lett. Hist. et Polit. Vol.

† Lucian. Demonax. p. 555. Ed. Fol. Bourdelotii.

And now a School revolts, and now a FLEET.

Go,

4. p. 176. Nothing can be more characteristick of French Statesmen. Be but sufficiently unintelligible, have but your vocatifs intermediaires et your adverbes indefinis, and the business is done. Language without meaning, phrases to blind the people, and ideas to delude. But when the scheme is accomplished, and when they obtain the power, their language is perfectly intelligible.

Next take an instance in Literature. Men of learning have always had a proper value for the Greek language, for reasons too obvious for me to state. In general the French are ignorant of it. Indeed Mr. Camus (the Deputy) some time ago published an edition of Aristotle Περὶ Ζωῶν, moderate enough as I thought from a slight inspection. But in general the French Philosophers, who by their works prepared the Revolution, are perpetually despising or ridiculing the Greek language. I only speak of their manner of effecting their purpose. One of the acutest, most dangerous, and most insidious of them all, Mr. D'Alembert, has these words. "Ah, si vous saviez le Grec !—Ceux qui savent, ou croient savoir, l'Hebreu, l'Arabe, le Syriaque, le Copte ou le Copte (as if he cared how it was pronounced,) le Persan, ou le Chinois, pensent et parlent de même et par les memes raisons." D'Alembert Melanges de Literature et de Philosophie. Vol. 5. p. 526. We see, the French Philosopher by confounding the Arabick, Coptick, Syriac, and Chinese with the Greek, insinuates that there is an equal use in them all, that is, to the generality of scholars and to the world at large, little or no use at all. This does not merit any answer; but we see the nature of a French Philosopher's proof and the manner of his argument. In short, he either knows every thing, or there is no manner of use at all in any thing that he does not know. Q. E. D. I think from continued observation, I understand the nature of these men.

Their

Go, warn in solemn accents, bold and brief,

The

Their literature, their politicks, their philosophy, all terminate in the same point. "Croyez Moi," are the words, whether they speak to an individual, or to the nations of the universe.

Now, since the Revolution, from reasoning they have betaken themselves to single words. Deception still. Mirabeau said true, "Words are things." I cannot help observing that the Athenians (whose government was popular, and consequently tyrannical, and manured with the blood of her own citizens) had a custom of softening the appellation of things which naturally conveyed an idea of terror. This may be found in a most curious extract, preserved by the very learned Photius from the 4th book of the Chrestomathia of HELLADIUS BESANTIQUUS; the words are these. "Το μὲν δυσφημὸν λέγουσι παρὰ τοῖς Πηλαιοῖς φρονεῖν ἢ, μάλιστα δὲ τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις· διὸ καὶ τὸ Διωκεῖν οὐκ ἔστιν οὐκ ἔστιν, καὶ τὸν Διμήσιον Κοῖτον, τὰς δὲ Εὐρυκλῆας οὐκ ἔστιν οὐκ ἔστιν." Photii Bibliothec. Sect. 279. pag. 1593. Ed. 1653. In the same manner the French apply the terms Equality, Liberty, Fraternity, &c. for Tyranny, Desolation, Oppression and Plunder. This is well understood. It would be presumption to enlarge on this subject to a kingdom so enlightened, so dignified, and I may add, so prepared as Great Britain. We have every thing to lose. We have under our own form of government, comfort, protection, honour, security, and happiness. The price of preserving them is indeed great, very great; but the price of anarchy, reform, and inextricable confusion, would be greater beyond all calculation. We have a foe powerful and perhaps unrelenting. But all states yield at last to circumstances; and policy will grant what affection would refuse. The most ardent wish of my heart is A SECURE
PEACE,

The slumbering Minister, or factious Chief;

Mourn

PEACE, after a war for ever to be deplored, bloody, fatal, and expensive beyond all example; but which I always believed, and still believe, to have been INEVITABLE. We have still many and great resources; but the times never called with so loud and so commanding a voice for wisdom, discernment, and integrity, for temperate, and timely, and gradual concession with dignity and security, and for an economy rigid and un-deviating, on the part of our governors; and for obedience, acquiescence under temporary pressure, alacrity in defence, and vigilance, and loyalty, and STEADINESS in all the subjects of this land. We have no need of the Roman† Armistitium; our arms are purified already. Our Soldiers are loyal, and honourable, and without spot. They have been weighed in the balance, and found perfect. And I trust our naval flag will never again wave but in defiance to our enemies. We are not lost, if we continue firm.

We must remember that all the leagues of French Factions and their leaders, in England or in any country, never relent. They know not the meaning of the term, 'There is as much mercy in them, to use the phrase of Shakspeare, as there is milk in a male Tiger. If they are called upon to retract, or to declare their full purpose, or to render their reasons to the country, they give us manifestos and declarations from their clubs. They tell us of corruption, and reform, and all the sophisms of anarchy and revolution. So thundered the Orator of Athens against such men: "ΑΥΤΟΙΣ
" ἀποδύνη, σεφισματα ἰσχυροῦσι, καὶ παρρησιας, καὶ προφά-
" σιν."

† See Varro de Ling. Lat. Lib. 5. 3. for the word and the illustration of it. Festus also may be consulted.

Mourn proudest empires prostrate in the dust,

BRASS

Tiaras,

"οὐκ ἀνίσταται ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνίσταται."† But Justice has her balance, and the sword is not borne in vain. "At home (I take the words of Sir John Finch in the 14th of Charles "I.) at any rate AUTHORITY MUST BE VINDICATED FROM ANY "TONGUE, SINCE THE LIFE OF GOVERNMENT IS REPUTATION." And we should remember, that "None are so bold as the factious in company, none so fearful apart." We may have good hope, for we have a good cause. When perhaps the greatest statesman and the greatest orator that ever headed an opposition, demands an audience of his sovereigns, I would willingly suppose, that the principle of his heart is not democratic; though I think his principles, in general, are very dangerous at this time. I would hope we may yet be redeemed. It was the boast of the Roman Emperor Augustus, that he found the City of brick, and left it of marble. I trust we shall not reverse this memorable saying. I trust that the public credit of the nation will revive, and that in this respect, when speaking of Mr. PITT, it will not be engraven with an iron pen and in the rock of England for ever, "Asciam invenit, chartaceam reliquit." I think I can discern the firm establishment of lawful constitutional power in the plunges of meditated convulsion; and the return of day in the moment of greatest obscurity. I have loved my country from my earliest years, from a conviction of the excellence of the Constitution and of that balanced liberty it † Vid Demosthen. Orat. Προς Λακκοῦς πρηνέσθον. Dem. Ed. Gr. Benenati 1570. p. 546. Why will not our Statesmen study Demosthenes? Is he not allowed to be the very first political Orator? Mr. Fox virtually understands his manner better than any man in England. He does not exert it for the same good end.

Tiaras, fahes, and pontiffs, crown and bust,

And

And

was formed to maintain. I am grateful for the protection and the blessings it has afforded, and is yet mighty to preserve.

I am again, (much against my will, and I sincerely apologize for repeating the subject,) finally called upon to declare with solemnity, and with that truth which I have ever revered and preserved, that this whole composition, verse and prose, is the work of one hand. In this assertion I have no mental reservation. I never wore the weeds of Dominick, or drank from the cup of Loyola. If this declaration will not suffice, I shall leave the sable birds of detraction to the hoarseness of their own clamours, and to the worms on which they feed. I shall soar upward to the source and fountain of light. It is also frequently insinuated and sometimes boldly asserted, to be written in conjunction with many learned and eloquent friends in the groves and retreats of our beloved Academe. It is true indeed, "By the waters of Cam I have sat down and wept, when I remembered thee, O Sion! as for my harp, I have often hanged it up among the trees that are therein." I wished to "sing one of the songs of Sion." But, as it seems, it is an honourable Conspiracy, a Conspiracy to vindicate, to recommend, and to uphold the cause of Government, of Christian religion, of learning, and of good manners. Would it were so! Such united talents might do their perfect work. I have only to lament the unworthiness of him who has presumed, without assistance or co-operation, to undertake that office ALONE ;

"To intermit no watch

AGAINST THE WAKEFUL FOE, and wide abroad

Through all the coasts of dark destruction SEEK

DELIVERANCE FOR US ALL !"

And last, as through the smould'ring flames you turn,

Snatch

If indeed I had either personal hope, or personal fear, in the political or in the literary world, I think it will be allowed that I should not have published this work. He must reconcile contradictions who will dispute this assertion. Whom have I courted? to whom have I bowed? Arbitrary power in any shape is my abhorrence. I have walked in the school of Locke, and have passed through that of Sidney. But I have, in this hour of maturest reflection, approved and held fast the tempered doctrines which uphold government and prevent confusion. In the political matters of this time, my suit and service is not rendered personally to Mr. Pitt. Upon me he can have no claim. My service is to my Country, and my praise to the Minister of the Crown of Great Britain. My praise is to HIM, who by deliberate and undaunted firmness, with an unblenched dignity, by commanding powers in speech and argument, and by vigorous measures, though without that promptitude of decision which marked his great Father, has preserved and supported (long may he preserve and support them!) the principle and stability of the English government and constitution. The main voice of England goes with me in this. Such I esteem Mr. PITT: as such I honour him. Am I his enemy? I see his errors and his vices too, and I lay no flattering unction to them. I am alive to all his publick virtues, and I would correct their aberrations, for they are many. As to Mr. Fox; that he has not discerned the signs of these times, I will not assert; but that his imprudence, his unbridled licence of language, and his plunging desperate doctrines in times like these, in and out of Parliament, have alienated the mind of his Country from Him, that I will maintain. If I were to give credence to all his speeches which I have either heard or read, I must declare them to be the doctrines of a man ripe and ready for any revolution. If he is honest in his opinion, I can neither think nor pronounce him honest to his country. He should not have thus exhibited himself in the House, or on the Hustings. Non hoc illa sibi tempus spectacula poscit! I pass over the primrose path of dalliance on St. Ann's Hill; though I would fain cast a withering look on the nocturnal orgies of dicing depredation and of patrician plunder before the walls of the palace, in the very face of a virtuous and insulted SOVEREIGN. I will separate the man from the leader of the opposition. I am ready to bow, and I do bow, to his genius, to his political eloquence without an equal, to his knowledge various, deep, and extensive. His pleasantry, his social friendly disposition, and the good temper of his private conversation are acknowledged. But if he is ever to direct the councils of this kingdom, he must tread back almost all his steps. If he turns to our government, he must be born again. With opinions bold and candid as these I might obtain some respect and perhaps some attention from the publick, but I could hardly please either Mr. Pitt or Mr. Fox. (August 1797.) If I sought personal fame; my motive is still more visionary. No man can account for it. He who loved fame best † said of it, "Just what you hear you have." I am wholly unknown. It is very proper that I should be so. Yet I would be understood even on this point. I have not the sacred fear of a coward, but the deliberate courage which is inspired by reflection, and the confidence which I am proud to repose repose in honourable friendship. Some literary and political enterprizes are indeed rather hazardous in their nature. Mine are of that number. Yet I love decorum, and I would be guided by discretion; but it is not the form only of those virtues, refined through certain strainers, that I would preserve, it is the spirit. I would have gentleness without timidity, and decision without presumption. But I must feel the pressing nature of the time, the burthens, the terrors, the perils, and the necessity OF THE STATE. Whoever would do a publick service, must forget himself. His remuneration is from within. As to myself, however unavailing my actions, my sentiments, my abilities, or my services, they are UNKNOWN, UNBOUGHT, UNSOLICITED, and shall be UNALTERED. In spirit, in principle, and in affection, my words and my thoughts are these:

Smash THE PALLADIUM, though the Temple burn.

END OF THE POEM.

† Mr. Pope.

Non ante revellar,

Exanimem quam te complectar ROMA, tūumque

Nomen, LIBERTAS, et inanem prosequar umbram!

December, 1797.

THE END.

[illegible]

10/10/10

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

1951